SO-HUMBLE BOW FROM JAPAN

The traditional bowing of the Japanese is exemplified at this prisoner-of-war stockade on Guam where Japs are being held. With a so-humble bend from the waist, accompanied, no doubt, by the traditional hiss of politely indrawn breath, this "honcho" or group headman in the stockade, greets First Lieut. Harold F. Gannon, of Brooklyn, New York, commandant of the camp.

Labor Minister Gives Message To the Dominion

Ottawa, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Co-operation of all sections of the community will be necessary to meet problems of adjustment to peacetime conditions, Labor Minister Mitchell said today in a Labor Day message.

"Once again I would remind employers, leaders of business, controllers of our enterprises that they have a very definite responsibility at this time to plan for a high level of employment," Mr. Mitchell said. "They owe it to the community to provide a maximum in the way of jobs. They must make use of every last ounce of energy and initiative to produce results.

"At this time we should not allow ourselves to be victims either of undue optimism or unwarranted pessimism. Lay-offs of workers in war industries which have of necessity terminated the manufacture of munitions and war supplies, should not be taken as evidence of widespread unemployment. But we cannot assume that employment will remain at a satisfactory level and we must see to it that steps are taken to produce that result."

Dislocations were inevitable at a time of reconversion but with unemployment insurance and other measures, Canada was much better prepared to meet these conditions than ever before. The provision for veterans to earn a steady and adequate livelihood should remain paramount.

In the half-century that Labor Day has been observed as a holiday, labor had accomplished much on its own behalf and had contributed greatly to the building up of the Dominion.

"On Labor Day when previous accomplishments of Canada's outstanding labor leaders are recalled and the future is discussed, I am sure that all sections of the community will realize that there cannot be general prosperity and contentment unless industrial workers have reason to feel that our economic system deals justly and fairly with their claims," Mr. Mitchell said.

51st Anniversary Of Labor Day Is Marked by Canada

The first peacetime Labor Day in five years found [illegible] assessing the part which "the man behind the gun" played in the United Nations' victory over the Axis tyrants.

Workers themselves looked back on the war years with the realization that they had had five years of full employment to consolidate their position and strengthen labor's hand in shaping the face of the future.

Canada's 50th anniversary of Labor Day last year found organization of Canadian workers at an all-time high. Unofficial estimates at that time indicated that more than 700,000 Canadians were members of labor unions. The vast expansion of war industry was given much of the credit for this gain.

Now, a year later, the nation's planners are devising methods to keep employment at a sound level—to keep it at a sound level without the impetus of a world conflict behind the moving wheels of industry.

Industrial Groups.

The most highly-organized industrial group in Canada today is metals, which account for some 28 per cent of union membership. Railroad transport ranks next with approximately 18 per cent. Some 3,500 union locals are scattered across the Dominion.

Paralleling the wartime growth of organized labor was a growing recognition of the place of labor in the economic life of the nation and reflecting this recognition were developments in labor relations during the war.

The stress of war production brought with it a new evaluation of holidays as a contribution to general proficiency. During 1943 alone, the National War Labor Board approved more than 1,000 vacation-with-pay plans affecting 549,863 workers and legislation making a week's vacation with pay compulsory was passed by the Ontario Legislature.

Surrender Ceremonies On Air at 9.30

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP) — The White House announced today that the Japanese surrender ceremonies on the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay will be broadcast at 9.30 o'clock E.D.T. tonight.

EDDA INTERNED ON ISLAND

Rome, Sept. 1 — (AP) — The Ministry of the Interior said today Edda Ciano, daughter of the late Benito Mussolini, had been interned on Lipari, a grim island off Sicily where her father once imprisoned scores of anti-Fascists.

The Countess, widow of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister in the Fascist regime, will be confined to her "apartment" on the island until final disposition of her case, the announcement said.

DETAILED PICTURE OF ECONOMIC CHANGES GIVEN

War Production Will Continue on Reduced Scale Till End Of Year Says Howe

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP) — Reconstruction Minister Howe has given a detailed picture of Canada's changeover from war to peace as it affects the Dominion's industries and her thousands of workers, a picture which points to continued war production on a greatly reduced scale until the end of the year with the emphasis on shipbuilding.

In his lengthy review of the industrial scene as it stands, Mr. Howe said last night that main labor difficulty was "to switch workers from war to peacetime jobs" which in some instances was taking a little time. Though there was some temporary unemployment in the switchover, there were "more than enough" jobs to be filled and he was confident it would be completed with a minimum of dislocation.

Giving a detailed review the Reconstruction Minister disclosed:

1. Shipbuilding and repairs will continue well into 1946.
2. Almost all aircraft orders have been cancelled.
3. Majority of contracts cancelled for chemicals, explosives and armored vehicles and war production of automotive vehicles to end shortly.
4. U.S. contracts cancelled for instruments and signals and to end shortly for armament and naval equipment, but British contracts for these items still effective.
5. Few cancellations in clothing and textile orders and production continuing.
6. Domestic and export production of railway equipment to be stepped up.

Rapidly Carried Out.

Canada's cutbacks in war production dated from the collapse of Germany and because of this start, reconversion of plants and re-employment of workers now was being rapidly carried out with the demand for industrial workers still far exceeding the supply, the minister said.

Since VJ-Day every effort had been made to reduce the costs to the Canadian taxpayer. Inventories of raw materials had been curtailed since early Spring and with the collapse of Japan these contracts were immediately cancelled except in a few instances of contracts for other governments.

At the time of Japan's surrender, Mr. Howe said major aircraft production was for United Kingdom account through mutual aid. These programs were being curtailed affecting Victory Aircraft, Ltd., at Malton, Ont., De Havilland Aircraft of Canada at Toronto, and Noorduyn Aviation Ltd. at Montreal.

Most of the United States aircraft contracts had been cancelled including a Curtiss dive bomber order held by Canadian Car and Foundry Co., at Fort William, Ont., where there were 185 planes undelivered.

War's Most Gruesome Tales of Jap Bestiality Related by Prisoners

By VERN HAUGLAND

Ofuna Prison Camp, near Yokohama, Sept. 1 (AP)—Ninety-five Americans and eight English prisoners, liberated from the filth of a hidden concentration camp today related the war's most gruesome tales of Japanese bestiality.

They saw one man beaten to death and seven die of malnutrition.

Some were spit on in the streets on forced marches through irate crowds.

Many were compelled to wear metal bits in their mouths for 14 hours at a time.

Others were left with their hands tied behind them for 24 hours.

A 21-year-old pilot, Ensign Fred Turnbull, of Highland Park, Mich., tortured after his carrier plane was shot down over Formosa, said:

"I tried to die and made peace with my God".

"My captors tied my hands behind me, made me lie down and covered me with my parachute", he said. "I heard two shots".

Already wounded when shot down, he was too numb to feel a bullet that entered his arm but felt one that pierced his chest.

A Japanese made a practice swing at Turnbull's neck with a sword after he had pulled the prisoner's collar down and an angered Formosan giving him first aid hit him in the back with a bayonet for not moving fast enough.

"At a hospital close to an airfield, shrapnel and bullets were removed without an anesthetic", Turnbull said.

After five days of beating by Formosans, Lieut. Charles Buchalt, a 23-year-old Pennsylvanian forced to bail from a torpedo bomber, couldn't see.

"They beat me until I was numb all over", he said. "Here at Ofuna I was in solitary confinement five and a half months.

"They beat me up every day, sometimes at night".

Buchalt was released from confinement last March 17 but prevented from talking to anyone until May 7.

MILLION GERMAN POW ARE WANTED FOR FRENCH LABOR

Russians May be Using Two Million — Divergent U. S.-Russian Policies

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Aug. 31 — (AP)— Divergent United States-Russian policies on forced German labor may extend among other Allies.

Officials here are not yet certain whether a showdown will come in the Allied Reparations Commission, but they appear almost certain that if it does the United States' view will lose out.

The United States' position is that the only Germans put into compulsory labor should be those convicted of war crimes or those found officially to be members of criminal Axis organizations. This position was disclosed by Edwin W. Pauley, president Truman's delegate on the reparations commission, at a news conference late yesterday.

Information presently available in official quarters here is that the Russians probably are using about 2,000,000 prisoners of war in forced labor in their country. The number is more or less guesswork, however, because the Russians do not talk about it.

The French want 1,000,000 German prisoners of war to work in their country for two years. They figure that would supply about half the man-hours needed to repair the devastation of their country.

Enormous Task

Foreign opposition to the American policy is based on a two-fold contention:

1. It would not supply enough workers for the enormous task to be done in Russia and elsewhere.
2. It would take too long to carry out.

The only chance that such a policy would supply enough manpower would lie in having the German army classified as "criminal organization." And there have been no reports of any such sweeping intention as that.

American officials say their plan would permit individual Germans not responsible for Hitler's outrages to avoid forced labor and return home. Thus, they say, it has a sound moral basis.

Mr. Pauley said the question of forced labor had come up briefly at the reparations commission at Moscow and that the American view simply was filed there.

National Registration To be Continued Year

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell announced at a press conference Friday that legislation covering National registration has been extended for another year and then said he would take under serious consideration a suggestion that registration cards be brought up to date.

Mr. Mitchell's announcement brought from members of the parliamentary press gallery suggestions that changes of address be recorded on registration cards and that the present cards, many of which have been in use since they were introduced in 1940, be replaced by some of better quality paper.

Mr. Mitchell and his Deputy, Arthur MacNamara, said they would look into the possibilities.

CZECH HANGED

Prague, Sept. 1 (AP) — Oldrich Bata, 28, was hanged publicly today following his conviction by a people's court on charges of giving information that led to the Gestapo's destruction of Ploštin, a Moravian village, in the manner employed on Lidice.

154,000 WORKERS SHORT DECLARES LABOR MINISTER

1,300,000 Persons Have Been Placed in Jobs in Last Three Months

Ottawa, Sept. 1. (CP)—Approximately 1,300,000 workers have been placed in jobs by the National Employment Service in the last three months and there still is a shortage of 154,000 workers, Labor Minister Mitchell said Friday.

Reviewing the current manpower situation at a Press Conference, Mr. Mitchell spoke with confidence of the ability of Canada to overcome the inevitable but temporary difficulties of transition from a war to a peace economy.

"We have put close to 500,000 people into the employment steam, from war industries and the armed forces, during the last three or four months and there is still no really serious problem of jobs at the moment", he said.

Partially off-setting the 154,000 unfilled jobs are some 47,000 unemployed workers not yet referred to new posts. Most acute need is in the construction industry, where 15,000 men are required for building homes and the manufacture of building materials.

Packers Need 9,000.

Packing plants will need between now and the end of November but Arthur MacNamara, Mr. Mitchell's Deputy who accompanied him at the conference, said a program had been approved which would fill this need. Men would be obtained from the Armed Forces, many of them butchers with pre-war experience in the plants, workers now engaged in harvesting would soon be available and an intensive advertising campaign would be launched.

"Our eventual problem may be to control a boom rather than to find jobs", Mr. Mitchell said.

Once the manufacture of consumer goods was resumed there would be increasing inflationary pressure, probably reaching a high point in about six months. Experience of the First Great War was that the most serious economic problems came when the fighting ended.

Maintain Wages Control.

For this reason it would be necessary to retain wage control but Selective Service regulations would be practically all wiped out by the end of the harvest season. Freezing of coal miners in their jobs might have to continue until next Spring, although there had been noticeable increase in the number of miners available in the last two weeks.

"The sooner we get back to a free economy the better for the nation', Mr. Mitchell commented.

The minister had something to say about housing and suggested industrial construction should be given a higher priority.

"We are actually building more houses than we ever have before", he said. "I think there's been a measure of hysteria. Industrial expansion to provide jobs should have top priority, if people have not got jobs they can't pay rent".

Gradually Closing.

Mr. MacNamara said the ratio of unreferred applicants to available jobs on record in employment offices was gradually closing in some centres. He described it as a "creeping" process.

There was a surplus of workers in Quebec City and Three Rivers, Que., and some were being moved to Ontario where the need for workers was most acute. About 12,000 workers from the Montreal area would go to Maine shortly to engage in potato picking. Some workers who went to Vancouver from the prairies to take jobs in war industries were taking advantage of free harvest transportation to move back to the Prairies.

3 BURN TO DEATH AFTER LIGHT CAR HITS TRANSPORT

Truck Driver Tried To Reach Wreckage But Was Driven Back By Intense Heat

Hamilton, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Three persons, two men a woman, were burned to death late Friday night when their motorcar crashed into the rear of a large truck on the Caledonia highway near Mount Hope and burst into flames.

The truck driver who tried to reach the wreckage was driven back by intense heat and flaming gasoline.

The dead are John Reynard of Dickinson's Corners, believed to have been the driver of the car; Newton R. Marshall, 54, of R.R. 2, Hannon, and Mrs. Beatrice Smith of Caledonia.

Both vehicles were travelling south when the light coach struck the rear of the 20-ton moving truck owned by the Simcoe freight lines, driven by Harry Crosby of Simcoe. Crosby said he was travelling at about 30 miles an hour at the time of the impact.

The truck shot forward as the car mashed into it. Crosby was unable to approach the blazing car and detached the cab of the moving truck from the trailer, which was also afire. In the cab of the truck with Crosby were Mrs. Walter Austin of Simcoe and her six-year-old daughter Carol Ann.

Eye-witnesses were William Crosby of Simcoe, nephew of Harry Crosby, who was in a following truck with Pte. Walter V. Austin and Bruce Smith, also of Simcoe. Austin told police that the car which crashed was travelling faster than the first truck and drove directly into the trailer, exploding almost as it struck.

Bruce Smith, one of the first at the scene, said he saw one of the victims in the car trying to get to a rear window before he tumbled back into the flames.

Four in Hospital Following Series Traffic Accidents

Most serious of a series of at least six highway accidents which occurred in the Bay of Quinte district near midnight Friday, a partial headon collision between a station wagon from Trenton Air Station and a motorist travelling toward Trenton, sent at least four persons to the Trenton RCAF hospital.

Driver of the westbound car had his left arm almost severed as he sideswiped the station wagon driven by a member of the RCAF Women's Division. At least four officers and two other girls were in the station wagon, several of them suffering cuts and bruises as the vehicle careened following the impact and rolled on its side. The hand of one officer was pinned under the truck as it rolled over, while another officer suffered serious back injuries.

Names were not available this morning, although all were treated at the Trenton hospital. The accident occurred just oustide the town limits west of Trenton air station.

Final and Formal Surrender of Jap Empire Tomorrow

Enemy Makes Half-Hearted Attempt to Postpone Shame

Yokohama, Sept. 1. (AP)—Allied troops extended their steel grip today along both sides of Tokyo Bay, the stage on which will be played out tomorrow the greatest military pageant of the century—the final and formal surrender of the Japanese Empire.

As a backdrop there was the black horror endured by prisoners of war, who poured from their stockades of death and degradation with blood-freezing accounts of the wanton cruelties inflicted upon them in the years when Japan was riding the crest of conquest.

Exact time of the ceremony was not disclosed.

Gen. MacArthur, Supreme Allied Commander over the conquered and obsequious Japanese, laid his plans at a private conference Friday night with Admirals Nimitz and Halsey and Gens. Spaatz and Kenney in Yokohama's new Grand Hotel.

Japanese imperial headquarters made one-half-hearted attempt to postpone the national ignominy a little longer by asking Gen. MacArthur today for further conferences on surrender terms, but it was declared at this headquarters that the ceremony aboard the U.S.S. Missouri would proceed as scheduled.

Already on hand were the representatives of Britain, Australia, New Zealand, France, The Netherlands and Russia. Col. Cosgrove Moore, Canadian military attache to the High Commissioner in Australia, will represent Canada.

Promptly Sink Boats

Throughout the Pacific, the Japanese were surrendering or arranging to surrender vast forces peaceably. The only untoward incident reported was the attempted escape of three Japanese suicide boats from Hong Kong, where British aircraft promptly sank 1, beached another and forced the third back to port.

Surrender of Hong Kong — where Canadians and Britons surrendered Dec. 25, 1941 — was to be organized today at conferences between British Rear Admiral C. H. J. Harcourt and the Japanese commander.

In the Philippines, the one time "Tiger of Malaya," Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita agreed to go to Baguio tomorrow and sign surrender articles Monday for the remains of his Philippines army.

At Singapore, which Gen. Yamashita conquered in 1942, the Japanese commander acknowledged Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's orders to have the government house "ready for occupancy by Sept. 5."

Surrender to Aussies

The surrender of 86,000 Japanese in the Solomons, New Guinea and New Britain was to be received by Australian Lt.-Gen. V.A.H. Sturdee aboard the aircraft carrier H.M.S. Glory at Rabaul.

The 20,500-man garrison of the Bonin Islands was under pledge to surrender Monday after a conference between the Japanese and Americans aboard the destroyer Dunlap yesterday.

The East Indies, last of Japan's major conquests, apparently would be the last to be relinquished.

Dutch officials spoke of a matter of weeks before the reoccupation of those rich islands would be settled finally.

American troops were scheduled to land on Formosa tomorrow, shortly after the Tokyo surrender signatures, and the island fortress of Truk was to surrender similarly.

CANADIAN MEAT RATIONING WILL HELP FEED EUROPE

Dominion May Also Get a Share of Products of Which She is Short

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP) — Meat rationing is due back any day now—just when is still secret—and when it comes it will be Canada's contribution toward helping keep Europe's liberated peoples from starvation and so that the Dominion herself may get a share of the world bank of products of which she is short.

Prices Board Chairman Donald Gordon said at a joint press conference yesterday that the main object in the proposed resumption of meat rationing was to send more meat aboard. Canada herself was short on some things and to get she must give, said Dr. Barton.

"If Canadians expect to get a fair share of those products in which Canada is in short supply, such as sugar, and oils and fats, they must be prepared to support the combined food board as the instrument of economic co-operation between the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada and they must be prepared to make their contribution of those foods they have in abundance."

No Date is Set.

Previous announcements have indicated that Canadians might expect meat rationing early this month but Mr. Gordon refused to divulge the exact date it will be effective.

The Prices Board chairman blamed meat rationing on a small section of the trade, from some wholesalers, butchers and producers who disliked the extra work rationing would give them and who misunderstood the real reason behind the move. There was little criticism from consumers and packing plants.

There was ample capacity in slaughtering plants to handle marketings which had been set at 40,000 head a week. So far this year deliveries had not even reached 30,000 head.

Canadians may not be able to get the kind of meat they want when rationing comes, but they will be able to get meat. It is expected, however, that bacon will be in short supply.

Parents and Children Like Strangers When Youngsters Return to England

By HELEN CAMP

Southampton, England, Sept. 1 —(AP)—There was a queer, quiet and somehow sad homecoming at Southampton yesterday.

More than 70 British children, sent to the United States five years ago to escape German bombs, returned to England—returned, some of them, almost like strangers.

Mothers and fathers crowded the wharf where their ship, the Nieuw Amsterdam, docked. Mothers and fathers waved and shouted and eagerly searched the lines of faces to find their own.

But the youngsters stood silently, almost apathetically. And when they talked it was not of Britain, but of Newton, Mass., Rochester, N.Y., and Wyoming, Pa.

"We're all ready to go back," said Dennis Bulkus, 15, nicknamed "Wharpie" because he jitterbugs and likes jive music. "That New York is some place, brother. What a city! Bright lights and a million things to do and see. That's the place for me."

"I don't think I'm going to like it here," said his blackhaired sister, Helen, who was seven when she went away.

"We had a swell gang and lots of fun in Newton," said Clive Davies, a smartly-dressed 16-year-old lad. "I guess it's going to be different now."

He looked wistfully westward, and added: "Someday, I'm going back—for good, I hope."

"Maybe we can stow away," suggested Bill Brown, who is 16, and who lost his Scottish accent in Yonkers, N.Y.

"Doris, Doris!" screamed one mother frantically as she spotted her daughter in the crowd aboard ship. "Doris!"

"Mother, I didn't recognize you," Doris shouted back. "You have changed so."

CITY PLAYGROUNDS CLOSED FOR SEASON

Completing a very successful season, all children's playgrounds in the city were officially closed on Friday.

The East and West playgrounds will celebrate the closing of their grounds with a picnic and wiener roast this afternoon.

The city playground at the corner of John and Alexander Streets which was opened a few weeks ago was an unqualified success during its brief tenure of activity this year. This playground was installed by the City Parks Board and has proved such a success that the Board will endeavor to operate more in various parts of the city next year, Parks Board Chairman Cleo B. Colling stated today.

BOYS' CAMP AT MOIRA LAKE IS CLOSED

Following a summer of considerably increased activity the Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake was officially closed on Friday with Y.M.C.A. workers today putting the camp in shape for the forthcoming winter season.

Approximately 65 boys and 45 girls enjoyed the facilities of the "Y" camp period, while about 100 C.G.I.T. girls also had their camp period at Moira Lake.

On the vegetable market potatoes sold at 60 cents the peck with bag lots being held at $2.75. Summer vegetables sold at the customary dime per bunch; cauliflowers sold up to 45 cents with cucumbers ranging up to 75 cents the basket.

Harvest apples brought 40 cents the half peck or $2.75 per bushel; pears sold at $1.10 and green gages at $1 the basket or 25 cents the berry box. Clover honey was 43 cents per two pound container.

Whitefish brought the usual 40 cents per pound.

A few young pigs were offered at the usual $9 to $10 each with one lot of shoats being held at $12 each.

Hail Damages Tomato Fields, Garden Produce

Considerable damage to tomato fields and to garden produce resulted from the hail storm which swept through the Bay of Quinte district on Wednesday night, it was reported Saturday by district farmers attending the market.

Tomato fields in the path of the hail storm possibly suffered the worst, it was stated, with the hail stones cutting leaves off the vines to seriously lessen chances of the fruit maturing. Green tomatoes will accordingly suffer the most damage as the ripe fruit could be immediately picked and processed in factories.

Garden produce, especially peppers, was damaged with the hail stones punching holes into them. Damaged peppers at cut prices were offered on the market Saturday.

Angus Macdonald Is New Premier Of Nova Scotia

Halifax, Sept. 1 (CP)—Returning to the job he held for seven years before going to Ottawa in 1940 as Naval Affairs Minister, Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, yesterday was chosen by a Liberal convention here to succeed 74-year-old Premier A. S. MacMillan as leader of the Nova Scotia Liberal party.

The 55-year-old veteran of 15 years in provincial and federal political warfare, was the unanimous choice of the convention. He will step back into the premiership in a few days, when Premier MacMillan told the convention that he would resign as soon as his successor was ready to take over, and in any event he would step down in the next few days. Last week, when he first announced his intention of resigning, the Premier said he was relinquishing the premiership to "let a younger man handle the job during the trying days of reconstruction and rehabilitation ahead.

Thus Mr. MacMillan ends a year stewardship of the affairs of Nova Scotia during the absence of the younger Mr. Macdonald, who became naval minister July 12, 1940, and resigned April 8, 1945.

Hydro Consumers To Receive 15 P.C. Refund on Bills

For the second year in succession the Belleville users of Electricity will receive a refund of 15% on their Hydro bills. This action was taken at a special meeting of the Public Utilities Commission held Thursday and attended by the Commissioners Wotten, Duff, and Follwell, and followed a most favorable report on the year's business which showed sufficient surplus to not only warrant this rate adjustment but also to allow for ample reserves for future extensions and improvements to the local system.

It was estimated that approximately $30,000.00 would be disbursed to Hydro users during the months of September and October.

This year the refund will take the form of a cheque that will be attached to the bills when delivered to the customer and it was the desire of the Commission that these cheques be either, cashed, or applied on utility accounts at the earliest date convenient.

All three classes of users-Domestic, Commercial, and Power will receive the benefit of this money

Obituary

1,064 Canadian Prisoners on Main Islands of Japan

By COL. R. S. MALONE

Yokohama, Sept. 1 —(CP)— A Japanese Foreign Office official Friday produced figures, which he claimed accurate up to July 30, showing 1,064 Canadian prisoners in the main islands of Japan.

Records of this official, detailed by the Foreign Office as liaison with the Allies in prisoner matters, differ from latest Canadian records, but his picture is somewhat encouraging. He said his figures were official and gave this distribution:

Fukuoka, 157; Hakodate and Osaka, 128; Tokyo, 286; Nagoya, 47; Sendai, 445; Hiroshima, 1. The official said no Canadians now are at Fukushima, Nigata or Zentsuji. Canadian records listed no prisoners formerly at Nagoya or Sendai. The official said this difference was due largely to recent moves.

(After the Dec. 25, 1941, fall of Hong Kong, where Canada's contingent numbered about 1,985 men, the Japanese reported they took 1,689 prisoners)

The official had no records of Canadian prisoners outside Japan but had the numbers of Canadian civilian internees in assembly centres in China.

This was broken down as follows: Shanghai, as of last May 3; Kosei No. 2, 10 male, 10 female; Koto, eastern area, four female; Chapei, seven male, seven female; Lunghawa, 10 male, 13 female; Poetung, 11 male, six female.

In Yangchow, as of last Feb. 28, there were seven male and nine female white in Weichien as of the same date there were eight male and 14 female.

No totals were available for the number of Canadian civilian internees in Japan proper, but the official, named Fujisaki, said all now were released.

The chief difficulty these first 36 hours in Japan in obtaining prisoner-of-war information is the extreme shortage of local transportation and the ban on movement outside the Allied perimeter until after formal surrender.

Adding to the problem of locating Allied prisoners is the fact that Allied figures of various nationals in the respective camps are estimates placed together from various sources during the last year. Also, many prisoners were moved to different camps in recent months.

In a second accident at Twelve O'Clock Point, Albert Hubbs, 15, Shuter Street, Trenton, had his leg pierced by a car door handle, when he was pinned between the car and a tree. Stitches were required to close the wound.

Two girls were injured in a third accident which occurred on the Trenton-Frankford road, while a fourth accident was reported in the Stirling district, and still another on the 2nd Concession of Thurlow.

Details of the last three accidents, nor names of the persons involved, were obtainable from investigating police officers at press time today.

Important Clue Found in Home Of Murdered Girl

Victoria, Sept. 1 — (CP)—Discovery of a "very important clue in the basement of 2658 Roseberry Avenue, home of murdered 18-year-old Phyllis Stroud, was announced last night by Detective Inspector J. H. Rogers.

The discovery was made during an examination by Inspector Rogers, Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance, Vancouver Police Department analyst, and Detective Louie Cellon and Angus Munro.

No further information was given by Inspector Rogers but suggestion in some quarters is that the furnace may have revealed ashes believed by Inspector Vance to be fro msome of the clothing worn by the girl on the night of her disappearance, Aug. 15. Search for these clothes has been unsuccessful.

The girl's body was found buried in a pile of sawdust in the basement on Aug. 27 by police after she was reported missing Aug. 16. Today a coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder by a person or persons unknown.

When found the body was scantily clad and police have made an intensive search for her clothes.

Residents Asked To Disregard Emperor's Words

By RICHARD CUSHING

Tokyo, Sept. 1 — (AP) — The Japanese said today that for two days after Emperor Hirohito told his people the war won over, several planes — evidently flown by fanatical suicide pilots — dropped pamphlets on major Japanese cities asking the people to disregard the Emperor's word and fight on.

A Tokyo resident, describiug their action, said that the great majority of the people were shocked by the mere thought of disobeying the Emperor. The move died quickly, he said, for lack of popular support.

He quoted the Kamikaze planes' pamphlets as saying: "Don't listen to the Emperor — he has been ill advised. The Emperor doesn't know the real conditions.

"We have enough food and planes left to continue this war. We shot down an American plane and the pilot told us food conditions in the United States were very bad.

"When the Americans land in Tokyo we are going to give them a real surprise."

INSURES VOICE

Hollywood, Sept. 1 — (AP) — Rise Stevens, of the Metropolitan Opera, now has a million dollar insurance policy on her voice. Her agent said that Lloyds of London cabled yesterday it had accepted the policy. If Miss Stevens loses her voice temporarily, Lloyds will pay her $3,000 a week and if she is unable to sing for a year, the policy will be paid in full. The premium is $10,000 a year.

Members of Cub Troop Report Excellent Treatment on Tour

Relating glowing accounts of the fine treatment accorded them during their holiday experience six members of the 4th Belleville Wolf Cub Pack returned Friday from a 4-day bicycle trek along both sides of the St. Lawrence River in the Kingston-Thousand Island area. The Cubs were under the supervision of Cub Mistress Twila Langman.

The Cub party started from Belleville atop their bikes and rode to Kingston where they laid in a supply of fresh meat "just in case." "And it was just as well we did," Mrs. Langman said, "for we crossed the river to Clayton, N.Y., decided to save our meat rations for future reference and went into a restaurant. We were served a small piece of meat each which from its texture and taste must have been taken from the rump of a retired milkhorse. That was bad enough—but the food cost us $5.90."

The little party was met with generous hospitality wherever they went, Cub Mistress Langman said. "We asked farmers if we could sleep in their barns and they went all out to help us. It was grand. It gave me a different slant on human nature."

The party biked its way along the American side of the river stopping at several points of interest until the Thousand Island Bridge was reached. They crossed to Ivy Lea without incident until they reached a point four or five miles east of Belleville.

Here again, the generosity of human nature was exemplified Cub Mistress Langman said. "The chain on my bike snapped in two and I had no repairs or parts with me. I sent the Cubs on ahead hoping to get a ride in. What happened was this. A neighboring farmer seeing my plight, sent his son over to help. The boy gave me the chain of his bicycle and I was able to make the journey home O.K."

"It was a grand trip and people generally are pretty good scouts."

France May Spend Half-Billion For Goods in Canada

Paris, Sept. 1—(AP)—France is expected to buy nearly $900,000,000 worth of goods from the United States and perhaps half that amount from Canada as a result of economic agreements reported to have been confirmed during Gen. deGaulle's visit to the two countries.

The purchases will include food, but little if any other consumers' goods. Most of the purchases will be fuel, raw materials, heavy machinery, ships, trucks and other transportation equipment.

Purchases in the United States will be on a basis of a cash payment of 30 per cent of the purchase price, and the balance on long term credits. A similar arrangement was understood in informed quarters to have been reached with Canada.

Negotiate Agreements

Ottawa, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Informed sources here said today agreements with France for extensive purchases in this country were being negotiated but it was expected they would be completed in a few days when an official announcement will be made.

Commenting on a Paris dispatch which estimated France might buy about $450,000,000 in goods in Canada under the agreements, these sources said the figure was somewhat high but that the purchases would be substantial. They would include foods and such manufactured articles as heavy machinery, trucks and other transport equipment and possibly ships.

The sales also are likely to include metals and other raw materials.

FLUORESCENT LAMPS FOR YULE TREES

New York, Sept. 1 —(AP)— Fluorescent Christmas tree lights in varied colors will make their bow this holiday season, it was learned today. Bigger than ordinary tree lights, the new bulbs are round and are designed to fit standard incandescent Christmas lighting string. White when unlighted, they take on pastel tones when illuminated.

Threshing Operations Destroys Hillier Barn And 55 Loads of Hay

Fire, starting at the end of threshing operations yesterday afternoon completely destroyed the large barn on the farm of Mr. Lyle Leavens, Hillier township. Fifty-five loads of hay, a large quantity of grain and other feeds fell victims to the flames.

William Benway, local thresherman had just concluded threshing operations in the barn when fire leaped from the straw mow and spread swiftly through the dry feed and structure.

Threshermen managed to extricate the threshing equipment from the blazing building, but efforts to save other material were futile. The building is a complete loss which was partially covered by insurance.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 4

Jim, Myra Marry.

"I've registered at Hospitality house," she would say casually but choosing her moment when Chan would be present, knowing his face would light up with pride in grandpa's favorite. But this small triumph was denied her. Neither Hazel nor Marta appeared in answer to Chan's summons.

Folly, who had been out all afternoon and just returned, slid into her chair saying, "Where are the girls?"

Chan served her with the ox tail soup which was one of his specialties.

"I call them," he assured her.

As he spoke Hazel entered the dining room.

"Miss Marta doesn't want any dinner," she said to the servant. After he had disappeared and just as Folly was about to tell her own news Hazel said in a low voice, "You were right about Myra Wilson. Jim married her this afternoon."

Folly was sorry for her sister but more certain than ever that Jim's desertion of Marta was not her fault. Neither of the younger girls could eat the well cooked dinner Chan had put before them. They could hear him muttering about it in the kitchen. Nothing made him crosser than for any of his family not to eat. And presently his shuffling feet were heard climbing the back stairway. Even though Marta had said she didn't want anything Chan had prepared her tray. A cup of the ox tail soup with crisp celery and salted crackers. A thin sherbet glass of strawberry mousse.

Marta In Tears.

He knocked at her door but when she did not answer he opened it saying, "Better you eat something."

Face down on bed Marta mumbled a half choked response.

"Thank you, Chan! Just put it on the table. I'll eat it later."

"Eat now," he commanded standing beside the bed until she sat up mopping her wet eyes. "Soup get cold. No good if standing."

His wise, old eyes met hers with affectionate understanding. No one had told him but he knew everything that went on in that house.

"Crying no help," he assured her picking up the hat and coat she had tossed upon a chair.

Marta had swallowed a mouthful of soup and was nibbling at a cracker.

"You're right, Chan. Crying isn't going to help and neither is talking about it. But there is something else I've been wanting to tell you."

"Mr. Rains, you know the lawyer I work for, needs a cook. The one they had was a Japanese. He will pay you twice as much as you've been getting with us and I think you'd better go to him."

His unruffled dignity reproached her.

"You not wanting me any longer?"

"Oh, Chan, you know it isn't that. But the cost of everything has gone up so this past month we really can't afford any one. If Folly can't get a job she will just have to take over the housework."

"Miss Folly no good at it."

"She can learn," Marta said firmly.

"I stay," he informed her. "I promised your grandpa."

"You can't stay," Marta argued wearily, "if we can't pay you."

Chan's impassive face was lighted by a faint flicker of interest.

"Costs very little to feed one more—maybe two," he suggested. "Why not take in roomer and boarder?"

"Where would we put them?" Marta asked glancing about her room.

"Move Missee Folly to sewing room," Chan continued. "Grandpa's room have private entrance and bath. Can charge enough to pay grocery bill to right persons."

"I see what you mean. It might work out," Marta admitted. "Except that Folly is sure to object to it."

"Leave to me," Chan said and shuffled from the room.

Jim's marriage to Myra Wilson was still uppermost in Marta's mind but the idea of renting grandpa's room served as a counter irritant. There would be trouble with Folly of course but it was high time that young lady shewed some co-operation. It might be true what Jim said about neither of them loving enough but Marta knew they would have been married long ago if it hadn't been for Folly.

Folly Opposes Idea.

In no mood for argument she called Folly and Hazel to her room and told them of Chan's suggestion. As she had suspected Folly was against it.

"Give up my room?" she demanded. "Why should I take the sewing room? There wouldn't be the right light in there nor any place for my drawing materials."

"You could store them in the attic," Marta said briefly.

"And give up my work? After all the money you've spent on me?"

"That's not the point," Hazel reminded her. "Conditions are altogether different now than when you took this up. Every one is going to have to make sacrifices."

"I don't notice you making any," Folly said wickedly. "Marta is working for the Fourth Interceptor Command three nights a week and I signed up today as a hostess at the Hospitality house but what are you doing?"

Hazel flushed.

"I haven't decided just what I'm going to do yet."

Sign on the Door

"Taking in roomers isn't going to win the war," Folly insisted. "And as far as I'm concerned I'm not in favor of it. If you want to take in a couple of nice old ladies put them up here. They'd like it a lot better anyway."

Nothing more was said about it that night. Hazel left the next morning on another case and Marta, returning tightlipped and weary from her control room shift of six o'clock to midnight, found a neatly lettered sign on the door.

"Exceptional room with private bath and board with family," it read.

Marta unlocked the main door and went inside passing down the hall to grandpa's room. The outside door was still bolted but the room had been entirely cleared of Folly's belongings. Swept and dusted free of the accumulation of rather startling ladies in feather and fur costumes. A fresh fire was laid ready to light in the fire place. There was even a late winter rose glowing from a small crystal holder on the old-fashioned, heavy desk. Marta had forgotten what a charming place this old room was. Her heart softened toward her young sister as she climbed the stairs to the sewing room but it too was vacant. Folly was in Hazel's bed with her dark curls flowing about the shoulders of a pale peach colored bed jacket.

Chan Put Her Out

"I'm sleeping in here," the girl said defiantly. "At least while Hazel is on a case. Chan has moved all my clothes to the sewing room but he can't make me stay in it. And Marta, do you know what he did with my drawings? He has hidden them. Everything except the cardboard and heavy black crayon to make that sign."

"I supposed you had made it," Marta sighed removing her hat.

"Not me. He worked on it all afternoon. Honestly, Marta, something ought to be done about Chan. He has no right to put me out of my room."

Marta said, "He is only trying to help. It's better for you to give up your room than for us to give up Chan, isn't it? Or would you like to take care of this big, old house by yourself and get all the meals?"

She went into her own room feeling rather heartless because after all it was partly her own fault that Folly was so helpless. But the idea of moving back into grandpa's room was not brought up by her again and in less than three days it had been rented.

It was Chan who had rented Grandpa's room to Hilton Wood. Folly, sulking in the sewing room, had refused to have anything to do with the transaction. The other two girls were not at home. So it was the impassive Chinese who passed upon the prospective tenants attracted by his sign.

Five of them including two women had been politely refused. "Room already taken," he had lied. To one lady who insisted upon peeping through the window at the quaint old room with its books and desk and old-fashioned fireplace Chan said, "Very sorry but family not renting to anybody but business person."

He knew whom and what he wanted and he had no intention of having an elderly female around. Hilton Wood, dark-eyed, intelligent and business-like, said he was employed as a metallurgist in a defense plant. Chan had no idea what that was but he liked the sound of it and recognized the man before him as the right one for Grandpa's room.

A Man and Three Girls

He also suspected that Hilton might not take it if he knew "the family" spoken of so deferentially consisted of three young girls. This was the reason Chan accepted the check proffered him as subject to their approval.

Once Hilton had eaten one of Chan's special dinners, after one meal with those three unattached but charming girls he would probably raise no objection. When Hilton telephoned the following morning to know if the room was his, Chan told him it was. The young man's trunk was moved in that afternoon and his first appearance was at dinner that night.

Hazel was on night duty now so all three girls glanced up expectantly as Hilton entered the dining room. Marta being the oldest, introduced herself and her sisters.

"I hope you won't mind having to eat with three women," she said frankly. "It will only be for dinner. Chan will serve your breakfast on a tray."

Hilton's dark eyes flashed from one pretty face to the other, finding each attractive in her own way.

"I shall be delighted," he declared. "But tell me is this the family your Chinese boy mentioned? I didn't ask him, but had the idea he referred to some nice middle-aged couple."

Labor Day

Labor Day 1945 is set in a time of the beginning of peace. The enemy powers have been smashed and Germany is occupied and the occupation of Japan has begun. From this pinnacle of peace after the years of struggle the world of Labor looks out over the future with hope and confidence.

Labor Day 1938 saw the world most uneasy with signs of impending war. Labor Day 1939 had seen Hitler a few days before throw his German legions against Poland in his bid for world power. On Sunday before that memorable Labor Day Britain's Prime Minister officially declared a state of war existed between Britain and Germany. Canada a week later became at war with Germany. Labor Day in 1940, 1941, 1943, 1944 was spent under the shadow of the greatest struggle in the history of the world. Before Labor Day 1945 the war has closed.

Labor now greets the annual anniversary of the day set apart for its observance because peace has come at last. Labor which helped to make so strong the Canadian front at home and in conflict has spent the most active period in its history. What labor has contributed towards the national strength and towards the salvation of the world is an achievement which Canada will ever prize as the proof of the all-out spirit of her people when the Dominion, the Empire and all the democracies were threatened by the tyrants and aggressors.

Now the nation's effort is being thrown into the plans for the stabilization of employment at a very sound level in the era of peace. The best minds of labor and business organizations, industry and government are at work laboring to make the future sound from the employment and industrial standpoints.

The future of the Dominion of Canada at the beginning of the era of peace is most auspicious. This nation as a producer rich in its soil and in its water and timber resources and blessed with an ideal climate and with a people of great spiritual resources, dynamic energy and love of freedom should find the future opening with the greatest hopes realized as a land where everyone is busy, agriculture advancing and great plants and smaller industries at work producing for the Canadian consumer and for the world at large. This country is well known in the world and the future of great promise lies ahead.

In the development of this future, labor and industry will have a great role to play—the making of the greater Canada.

Peace will be the impetus which will make coming Labor Days more and more marked as milestones of Canadian progress in every field and undertaking.

24 Named

Twenty-four persons have been named for trial as German war criminals. These include leading Nazis and Prussian military leaders who will in October come to trial at Nuremberg, the former centre of Nazism.

Early in the war the Allies announced that they would at the close of the struggle bring to trial Germans responsible for the war and for war crimes. Later Hitler spoke of the reign of Nazism as assured of victory, so as to set the course of history on the basis of Nazism and the Third Reich that would last a thousand years. But now a bare few years later the Third Reich has gone, many leading Nazis and Prussian leaders have also gone and these twenty-four Germans named are to face trial. They are the first to be tried and they will have a mass trial.

There are different categories under which Germans may be charged, for crimes against the peace by conspiracy and conduct of aggressive war; for crimes of war, such as plundering and violation of recognized rules and customs of combat; and also for crimes against humanity.

This trial will be one of the great events of the world and will set a precedent in history. It will place forever before humanity the fact that must be recognized by Germany and the world that those who launch wars of aggression and conspiracy against the peace of humanity commit a crime which cannot be overlooked.

British Radio Plan for Europe

Britain's radio industry has planned a new system of wavelength allocations to bring better all round listening for every country in Europe. It is designed to kill interference as far as possible and give free and more selective listening for all. The plan is put forward in the report of the Technical Committee of the British Radio Equipment Manufacturer's Association. Experts from five of Britain's biggest radio firms worked for nearly eighteen months on the scheme, which is to be sent to all interested governments. The plan aims at clear "local" services, by replacing the present longwave band of 2,000 to 1,000 metres by one of 2,000 to 600 metres, and by using 259 to 192 metres as the medium or regional wave band. Places on the long wave band would be given to stations which have the largest areas to cover.

Warriors With Humor

(New York Times)

Underlying our victories in the war is something quite as important as the outpouring of industrial might, the fine leadership of our forces and the brilliant achievements of our laboratories. It is that unfailing sense of humor and instinctive feeling for the right phrase which is part of the spirit of a democratic army. This sort of thing is as far apart as the poles from the heavy-handed product of totalitarianism, which turns out soldiers who have lost whatever they may once have had of human sparkle, in a regimentation and discipline which not merely controls but robotizes. Time and again in the war in Europe and the Pacific have come, not only great phrases in the hours of darkness like MacArthur's "I shall return," and Commander Gilmore's "Take her down," but pungent uses of the right word in the right place, often derived from slang or the specialized language of sport. We can be proud, indeed, of our people's army and navy and air force. Their quality and their attitude toward war will live forever in catchwords such as the message from the young bomber pilot over the Atlantic, "Sighted sub; sank same;" and, now the message of Rear Admiral Badger to Admiral Halsey after the touch-and-go trip through the Uraga Straits to Tokyo Bay, "No runs, no hits, no errors."

British in Burma "Go Dutch"

British troops in Burma have voluntarily gone on half rations in order to send parcels of food, medical supplies, newspapers and cigarettes to Allied war prisoners held by the Japanese. The parcels are flown through monsoon-like weather to the Burma-Siam frontier by R.A.F. pilots of the Jungle Air Force.

The officers' shop in Rangoon has closed down and is receiving its entire stock of clothing and personal requisites for released prisoners, who are said to be down to a single tattered pair of shorts—a contrast to the Japanese prisoners who not only do no work, but have good food and adequate clothing.

The "Heirs" Are All Busy

(Collier's Magazine)

The largest number of "heirs" to an American fortune turned up in Philadelphia in 1935 at the proceedings to determine the rightful owners of $25,000,000 which had been left unwilled by a Mrs. Henrietta Garrett. Although this wealthy widow had lived alone without communicating with a friend or relative for 35 years before her death in 1930, more than 26,000 alleged relatives from 48 states and 27 foreign countries claimed a share of her estate. But so far, no one has received a cent.

Aluminum Houses

The first pre-fabricated aluminum houses have appeared in the city of Bristol, England. These houses took three-and-a-half hours to erect and during that time, water, gas and electricity were laid on. "We took rather a long time," remarked the foreman. "With a little experience we shall be able to put them up more quickly."

PRE-AUTUMN DAYS

This is the garden's middle-age;
That period of rest between
The toiling and the final stage,
The golden old and youthful green.

The shaping tasks are all complete.
There's little further to be done.
The trees, with all their leafage, sweet,
Are changing color in the sun.

The splendor of the spring has flown.
The summer blooms prepare to go.
All things about are fully grown,
Awaiting autumn's afterglow.

A few brief days before the close,
With killing frosts and north winds cold,
When even the humblest bush that grows
Will wear a robe of red or gold.

Joseph Peltier In 'Fair' Condition

Montreal, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Nineteen-year-old Joseph Peltier, shot by a bank accountant yesterday while attempting to cash stolen bonds, was in "fair" condition in hospital today following an operation to remove a bullet from his back.

Hospital authorities indicated that if Peltier should live, he probably will remain crippled with his lower limbs paralyzed as the bullet lodged close to the spine.

Meanwhile, police maintained an intensive search for 22-year-old Vlysse Lauzon, wanted for questioning in connection with half a dozen bank robberies in Ontario and for jail breaking, and his 20-year-old wife, Eileen.

POUNCE ON PASSENGER

Simcoe, Ont., Sept. 1 —(CP)— Three youths pounced on Paul Lambert of Ottawa while he was waiting for a train here yesterday, threw him to the station platform, snatched his wallet containing $150, and ran. Police arrested John Meagher, 19, of Halifax, William Houghan, 22, and William Swatuk, 21, both of Toronto.

Bormann Reported Allied Captive

London, Sept. 1 —(AP)— The Russian-controlled Berlin radio reported without amplication last night that Martin Bormann, Adolf Hitler's chief deputy in the Nazi Party who faces war crimes charges, "is in Allied hands."

The terse announcement did not say exactly where Bormann was or what official announced his arrest.

A few hours before the broadcast, an Associated Press correspondent, Charles Chamberlain, reported from Field Marshal Montgomery's Hamburg headquarters that "British military circles believe that if he (Bormann) is a prisoner, he is in the Russian zone."

Chamberlain said the Nazi leader, once reported to have died at Hitler's side in the ruins of the Reichschancellery in Berlin, had been seen in a Hamburg suburb on the night of May 1 by an anti-Nazi German physician who had been acquainted with him.

The fact that Bormann's name appeared on the first list of Nazis to be tried as war criminals at Nuernberg next month has "led to the assumption that he is in Allied hands," Chamberlain said.

Bormann rose to the position of Hitler's right-hand man after Rudolph Hess made his historic flight to Britain in 1941.

When the Russians crushed Berlin last May, first reports said the short, stocky, square-jowled and cropped-haired party stalwart had died with his defeated leader.

Subsequently there came a multitude of reports—followed by denials—that Bormann had been captured.

Two Marshals Arrested.

Hamburg —(Reuters)— Field Marshal Heinrich von Brauchitsch and Field Marshal Fritz Mannstein were arrested in the Schleswig-Holstein area today and interned.

Mannstein was a hospital patient and both field marshals were removed in an ambulance.

The action is understood to have been taken on the instructions of the British Army of the Rhine Headquarters.

Field Marshal General Fritz Erich von Mannstein, whose original name was Levansky, is 58 and a professional soldier. He was commander of the Army Group "South" in Russia, where the capture of Sevastopol was his greatest success.

Field Marshal Heinrich von Brauchitsch, also a professional soldier and now 64, was appointed commander-in-chief of the German Army in 1938 but was dismissed by Hitler in December, 1941, because, according to some reports, he failed to take Moscow and retreated before the Russian counter-affensive. He was on the German general staff during the First Great War.

Not in British Hands.

Herford, Germany, Sept. 1 (Reuters) — It was officially stated at Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters today that Martin Borman, former deputy Feuhrer, whos name appears on the first Allied list of war criminals, is definitely not in British hands.

"We have not got him," the statement said. "That is definite and it is not believed that the Americans have him either.

Otto Dietrich, former Reich press chief, who surrendered to British authorities this week, is said to be in poor health.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 1 — (CP) — The tall pens've-eyed general folded arms and sat back to listen intently to the translation of his words and nodded assent at the emphatic gestures of the translator.

It was the team of deGaulle and Mathieu handling a press conference. It was their umpteenth and it was a lot harder on Mathieu than it used to be.

Mathieu is working himself out of a job teaching the chief to speak English and with his new use of language the French leader can check interpretations.

Gen. deGaulle never finds anything to criticize in George Mathieu's work though. The sprightly, white-haired interpreter is a mimic with a photographic memory.

At the press conference in the French Embassy the other day, Mathieu relayed the questions and replies back and forth from the reporters to the general, giving the general the emphasis the reporter wanted to make and giving the reporters a perfect interpretation of what the general had said.

He passes on his chief's words with a rather high-pitched voice that seems to capture deGaulle's every inflection.

Perhaps one of Mathieu's greatest accomplishments is the way he can pass on the general's dry touches of humor. A reporter wanted to know what the general thought of the effects of the atomic bomb in future defence planning and referred to the French leader as a "recognized military authority."

Mathieu passed on the query and the general's eye twinkled at the compliment and he started his reply. The French-speaking reporters laughed and then when Mathieu started the translation the English language reporters caught the wit of the reply as Mathieu also twinkled and said: "At the risk of prejudicing my record as a military authority . . ."

The 48-year-old former League of Nations interpreter is teaching English to his chief. "He is a willing student and I'm afraid in another year or so I won't have my present job," he said.

DISINFECTION OF DRINKING WATER

Water from the tap in almost any community where there is municipal water supply is as safe to drink as is the food in the same area to eat. Besides the local health board or department, there is the state or provincial health board or department backing — these officers, experts, authorities are responsible to the public and, if you ask me to have a drink, I'll take mine from the tap of the village, town or city supply.

However, how can one tell whether water from a wayside spring, well, stream, pond or puddle is safe to drink in an emergency? One can't be sure it is safe to drink just because it looks clean, clear and pure and tastes all right. One way is to carry a small supply of Halazone tablets in the pocket emergency kit and add one tablet to a quart of the water, shake it up, let stand a few minutes, when the water will be safe to drink. Halazone is a chlorine compound, designed for emergency disinfection of drinking water. Another way is to dissolve a level teaspoonful of "chloride of lime" (chlorinated lime, bleaching powder) in 1½ pints or 3 measuring cups of 8 ounces each of water, to make the mother solution. Use a teaspoonful of this mother solution to a gallon of the questionable water, shake it up, let it stand twenty minutes, and then the water will be safe to drink. A third way for emergency disinfection of questionable water is by putting five drops of standard Mild Tincture of Iodine (U.S.P.) in a quart of the water, shaking it up, letting it stand fifteen minutes. In this method it is all right if you use anywhere from three to eight drops, five drops being just the approximate amount required.

All of these methods for disinfecting drinking water are for emergency use only and are not suitable for constant use, although any of them is reliable and unobjectionable to use for several days or a week if necessary.

Now for Pete's sake don't get into a technical discussion with the druggist's devil about which iodine you want—no matter what the boy says about it there is just one strength of Mild Tincture of Iodine and if the label says mild Tincture of Iodine you need not bother about the 'steenteen other strengths the clerks enjoys telling you about if you look dumb. If you let the clerk sell you anything else than mild Tincture of Iodine, that's your problem—I can't help you. I'm warning you to make certain the label on the iodine vial is printed mild Tincture of Iodine—and beware of the stuff if the word mild is written on the label printed Tincture of Iodine. Incidentally, mild, Tincture of Iodine comes with a "poison" label, for a peculiar trade reason which we need not stop to deplore here. If you are likely to be frightened by the "poison" or skull and crossbones label, just forget the whole business, or use one of the other methods for disinfecting drinking water.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Vitamins for Baby

Do you agree that old fashioned cod liver oil is better for a baby than the concentrated kinds or the pure vitamins? Our 7-months-old baby gets 35 drops of straight cod liver oil daily and seems to thrive. (Mrs. M. L.)

Answer—Any fish liver oil, if the baby takes it well, is at least as good, but I believe in no way better than pure vitamin D and vitamin A in equivalent amounts. Every baby should receive a daily ration of vitamin D in one form or another from the age of two or three months to the age of eighteen years. Older children more readily take pure vitamin D, in tasteless oil solution or in tablets they can enjoy eating.

Child Controls Parent

I have a fourteen-year-old boy who insists on smoking cigarettes. What can I do to discourage his taste for them? (Mrs. B. F. J.)

Answer—Depends on several circumstances. For instance, how long has he had the "taste" for smoking? How did he acquire it? What sort of precept and example in the home? What is the boy's I. Q.? Ln a generad way I suggest appropriate parental discipline, if necessary corporal punishment.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

The baseless myth that an ostrich tries to hide by burying its head in the sand dates back at least two thousand years.

The ostrich has become the symbol of folly and is proverbial in literature for its stupidity.

Even in the Old Testament (Job 39:17) it is said of this bird that "God hath deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he imparted to her understanding."

In his "Natural History," according to Philemon Holland's quaint English translation, Pliny the Elder wrote of the "Camel Sparrow": "But the veriest fools they be of all others;—for as high as the rest of their body is, yet if they thrust their head and neck once into any shrub or bush, and get it hidden, they think then they are safe enough, and that no man seeth them."

Alexander the Great may have gotten his idea about other worlds to conquer from his famous dad. Philip of Macedon is reputed to have once said: "Oh, how a small portion of earth will hold us when we are dead, who ambitiously seek after the whole world while we are living!"

Cats, flies and women are ever at their toilet, says a French proverb.

That ostriches can digest anything is an old fallacy that often works hardship upon these birds. Several ostriches in the London zoo have died after visitors fed them trinkets such as coins, keys, pocketbooks, handkerchiefs, spectacle cases and watches.

In his "Vulgar Errors" (1646) Sir Thomas Browne undertook to explode the notion that the ostrich can digest stones and pieces of iron. "The common opinion of the Ostrich," wrote Sir Thomas, "conceives that it digesteth iron, and this is confirmed by the affirmation of many: besides swarms of others, Rhodiginus in his prelections taketh it for granted, Johannes Langius in his epistles pleadeth experiment for it; the common picture also confirmeth it, which usually describeth this animal with an horseshoe in its mouth. Notwithstanding, upon inquiry we find it very questionable, and the negative seems most reasonably entertained."

Case of Skeleton In Cylinder Still Remains Unsolved

Liverpool, England, Aug. 31 —(CP) — The strange case of the skeleton in the cylinder remained a mystery today when a coroner returned an open verdict in the death of a man who he said probably died in 1885.

The steel cylinder, with its strange burden of a fully clothed skeleton, was found lying in a bombed-out place last July 13.

Evidence suggested that the man, from 30 to 50 years old, might have been T. Williams, a paint and varnish manufacturer in the 1880's, but the coroner ruled that this could not be established definitely.

Witnesses said a search of records in England and Wales disclosed the grave of Mrs. T. S. Williams, but not of her husband. A postcard, diaries and billheads found in the cylinder bore the name of the paint manufacturer.

One witness said he believed the cylinder, in which the body was lying on sacking, was part of a ventilator shaft. The coroner declared there was no reason to doubt that the man had crawled into the steel container. He ruled that a skull fracture under the left ear was not necessarily an indication of violence.

ASK FOR CLAIMS

London, Sept. 1 (CP)—The Foreign Office Tas distributed questionnaires to countries entitled to reparations from western Germany, asking them to specify their claims. Claims must be limited to actual damages suffered and costs incurred by action of the "European Axis powers." Demands against Japan are ruled out.

Police Hold Vet For Questioning In Infant's Death

Vancouver, Sept. 1 (CP) — Police are holding a 39-year-old war veteran for questioning in connection with the brutal killing of four-year-old George Joseph Higginson whose body was found in a rooming-house on the Vancouver waterfront.

Mrs. Dorothy Rogers, mother of the child, said she had left the infant in the care of a 10-year-old boy while she went out with the latter's mother.

The boy, Pat Parker, told police the child was asleep on a mattress when a man whom police said they believed is Mrs. Rogers commonlaw husband entered the room. The man fondled the child and then took it into the next room. The Parkin boy told police he heard a banging sound and the baby began screaming. A few minutes later he said he saw the man come out of the room holding the infant by one leg.

After a glance at the infant's bleeding body the boy fled to the proprietor of the rooming-house who notified police.

Queen Wilhelma Marks Birthday

By WILLIAM BOSS
(C. P. War Correspondent.)

Utrecht, Holland, Sept. 1 (CP Cable)—Canadian troops throughout Holland Friday joined the Dutch in wishing Queen Wilhelmina a happy birthday.

It was a dual celebration—marking the 65th anniversary of the Queen who has been on the throne since 1890 and also the liberation of Holland from German control, a task accomplished mainly by the 1st Canadian army.

Everywhere Canadian troops were stationed they joined in local festivities, participating in parades and sports meets despite drizzling rain. At Canadian forces headquarters at Apeldiirn, 150 members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps paraded behind Maj. S. Beatty of Toronto with 150 members of the Lorne Scots and 700 Netherlands troops.

The C.W.A.C. officers were Lieuts. Phyllis Dover of Vancouver, Ann Crapleve of Winnipeg and Alexandria Phillmore of Halifax.

KNEW WAY AROUND

Toronto, Sept. 1 —(CP)—When Petty Officer W. Rimmer of Toronto saw floor boards smouldering as he walked into the Varsity Arena grandstand last night, he knew where to find a fire extinguisher. He went to the rugby team room, got the extinguisher, and prevented what might have been a serious blaze. "I was a water boy to the Varsity football team in 1938 and 1939," he explained.

Children Must Attend School To Get Allowances

Ottawa, Sept. 1 —(CP)—Health Minister Claxton in a statement Friday reminded parents that family allowances will not be paid in respect of children absent from school without good reason.

Mr. Claxton said the family allowance act stated that the allowances will be payable only in respect of children attending school or receiving equivalent training, but the conditions regarding attendance at school vary from province to province.

In drafting the regulations, it was the intention of the government that as far as possible the Family Allowance Administration would co-operate with the provinces. According to the regulations, as adopted, a child must attend school as required by the laws of the province in which he resides.

If he is not attending school, evidence must be produced to show that the child is receiving equivalent training satisfactory to the superintendent of education for the province in which the child resides.

Discussions have been under way with the provincial educational authorities which will, it is hoped, lead to co-operation in making arrangements so as to enforce this attendance requirement, said Mr. Claxton.

Already some of the provincial educational authorities have issued instructions to their own staffs with regard to this matter because ensuring school attendance is within the jurisdiction of each province.

(The Nova Scotia Department of Education announced Wednesday that if a child was absent from school for more than five days without legal excuse they will not be eligible for family allowances.

(The announcement said that if a boy or girl wanted to leave school and go to work before they were 16 they would have to obtain a permit from the family allowance board).

Bear Eats Berries To be Used for Pie

Algonquin Park, Sept. 1 —(CP)—Blueberries are scarce this year and it took Mrs. A. Wilson Dodds several hours to pick enough for a pie. While waiting for the oven to heat, Mrs. Dodds sat down to a game of cribbage. There was a sudden uproar and the clatter of a tin pail outside the cottage. A black bear had got the blueberries and there would be no pie. A park ranger, Claud McFarland was in the cribbage game but had left his guns at home.

1,800 Farmers Sent to West

By GREN ALLEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Sept. 1 (CP)—More than 1,800 husky farm workers from eastern Canada, mostly Ontario and Quebec, are in western Canada today aiding hard-pressed prairie farmers in the cutting, stooking and threshing their grain crop.

More than 3,000 others are expected to arrive within the next week. They have just completed heavy harvests in their own districts.

This year's trek of eastern workers to prairie fields is late due to the late eastern harvest. Last year 4,000 easterners were in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta by Aug. 15.

Western farmers expect to harvest a lighter crop than last year which may be some consolation. Preliminary estimates have placed the wheat crop at 300,000,000 bushels compared with 410,000,000 bushels in 1944.

Harvesting is well advanced all across the prairies with warm, dry weather aiding operations.

Layoff Reflected In Employed Figures Released

Ottawa, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Increasing lay-offs in war plants were reflected in employment figures made public by Labor Minister Mitchell at a Press Conference Friday.

The report covered the week ended Aug. 24 and thus did not include personnel reductions in Toronto and Montreal aircraft plants this week. A summary of conditions in 17 larger centres showed a net labor demand of 73,647 workers and 30,443 unemployed workers not yet referred to jobs.

The maritime region reported about 1,000 persons affected by recent lay offs but many were returning to pre-war jobs. Demand for potato pickers was increasing and assistance of soldiers would be needed to take in the crop.

The Quebec report showed most evidence of a labor surplus. This was being partly met by an increasing demand from civilian industries and the wholesale and retail trade.

"Due to a large number of lay-offs the labor situation is fast deteriorating but it is felt that this state of affairs will improve shortly," the report said. "In a large number of cases lower wages are the reason for unsuccessful referrals."

Toronto reported lay-offs affecting 4,700 workers in the week under review but on the other hand there were acute shortages in many fields, particularly construction.

Lay-offs in war industry were also reported from Winnipeg.

The labor demand of various cities, with number of unreferred applicants in brackets, follows:-

Halifax 2,861 (237); Saint John, N. B., 677 (380); Montreal 27,900 (5,543); Quebec 1,551 (5,380); Toronto 14,784 (3,321); Kitchener, Ont., 1,390 (15), Hamilton 4,455 (964); London, Ont., 1,628 (425); Ottawa 2,282 (476); Windsor, Ont., 585 (2,012); Winnipeg 4,497 (3,645); Saskatoon 542 (628); Regina 1,067 (675); Edmonton 1,811 (1,101), Calgary 1,470 (1,151); Vancouver 5,095 (3,931); and Victoria 1,052 (559).

Only One Plate For Next Year

Toronot, Sept. 1 (CP)—Ontario license plates for 1946 will have white figures on a black background, J. P. Bickwell, motor vehicles registrar, said Friday, adding that the prevailing metal shortage would make it necessary to continue the policy of issuing only one plate to an automobile.

Bickwell said the number of registered passenger cars in Ontario was 550,000, while the number of trucks registered was 95,000.

Rehabilitation Program Planned

Brockville, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Members of Canada's Far East force, who only a short while ago were taking special training in preparation for combat against the Japanese, now are busy with a rehabilitation program which is planned to ease their speedy transition back to civilian life.

Started here by Lt.-Col. E. D. Danby, D.S.O., and Maj. J. H. Mahony, V.C., once it was clear Canadians would not be needed in the Japanese fighting, the program consisting of lectures, discussion periods and visits to factories replaced customary combat training.

Headed by educational, personnel selection and demobilization officers, the new training encourages soldiers to attempt to solve their rehabilitation problems Main part of the course consists of lectures concerning gratuities, post-war credits, technical and educational schemes available to discharged servicemen and other points which will help servicemen return to civilian life with a minimum of worry.

Chief lecturer is Capt. Len Chellew of Toronto who had a large part in organizing Canada's first rehabilitation centre.

Defence Ministers Announce New Discharge Policy

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP) — Farm work or a return to former employment or to university on a similar educational institution will be accepted as eligible grounds for discharge for any serviceman in Canada under a joint policy announced by Defence Minister Abbott and Air Minister Gibson. It applies to all three services.

In a statement last night the two ministers said the new policy had been planned "with a special view to meeting the demand for industry, business and the professions for return of trained personnel" and that release from the forces on these grounds would be carried out "to the maximum extent which the continuing requirements of the three services permit."

It was emphasized, however, that while fulfilment of these discharge requirements —farming, former employment or return to university—entitled personnel to more speedy release, it did not constitute grounds for priority over long service men and women now in the process of repatriation.

Broadening Plan.

The statement said it was a broadening of the plan to release "key" personnel. Under the previously announced policy members of the three services in Canada could become eligible for speedy discharge only on the ground of pursuing educational studies. Now they are also eligible for release from the forces to take their pre-war jobs and to go to farm work and the statement said in the latter case the regulation applied to personnel now on farm leave without pay.

Classes Eligible.

The three classes eligible for discharge were defined as follows:

Personnel in Canada who produced satisfactory evidence that they are entitled to be reinstated in their former employment in accordance with terms of the reinstatement in Civil Employment Act and who in fact intend to return to such former employment.

Personnel in Canada who provide satisfactory evidence that they will undertake or resume farming operations where there is need of their services, including personnel now on farm leave without pay.

Personnel in Canada who intend to proceed with university or similar educational studies, provided satisfactory evidence is produced that they have been accepted for training at a university or other similar institution.

The statement, in which Defence Minister Abbott spoke for the army and navy, followed by only a few hours another by Col. Gibson. He announced that naval and air personnel in Canada, who planned continuing educational studies were eligible for discharge. A similar policy had already been in force for the army.

General Election In B.C. Oct. 25

Victoria, Sept. 1 —(CP)—British Columbia's 20th legislature was dissolved Friday and a general election called for Oct. 25. Voters lists will close Sept. 17 and Nomination Day will be Oct. 4.

Premier John Hart, head of the Province's first coalition government in recent history, formed in 1941 of Liberals and Progressive-Conservatives, announced dissolution and the election date after a cabinet meeting today. The last election was held Oct. 21, 1941.

He said the preparations for taking the soldiers' poll in the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland, in Newfoundland and Eastern Canada, have been almost completed.

In making the announcement, Premier Hart said that coalition had at all times endeavored to be a government of action and had accomplished a great deal for British Columbia and for Canada as a whole, giving the Dominion fullest co-operation in the war effort.

Indications point to four-way contests in at least half of the 48 constituencies. The C. C. F. and Social Credit Party have announced tentative planes to nominate in all ridings; the Liberal-Conservative coalition in 47, and Labor-Progressive in at least 25.

Party standing at dissolution was:

Government coalition 30 (19 Lib. 11 Prog.-Cons.)

CONGRESS TO CONVENE

By C. R. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 1 (CP)—Congress reconvenes next Wednesday with an opportunity to take over control of United States affairs to a degree it has not enjoyed in nearly four years of war.

With the end of hostilities and of the need for emergency action the administration seems disposed to hand back to Congress the prerogatives which its members loudly protested - had too often been taken over by the executive branch of government.

Varying the Uppity Hairdo

Adele Jergens' upsweep suits her face

By HELEN FOLLETT

UPPITY hairdos offer exciting possibilities; there is no end to the clever arrangements of rolls, curls and undulations. One can appear severe and regal, one can be a fluffy girl, one can be pompadoured to the limit. What one does with the pigtail material that has suddenly appeared upon feminine heads is simply wonderful.

Maybe you like the low, full chignon at the nape lines. Maybe you are going in for the new Grecian effect, a large up and down roll between nape and crown, surrounded by sculptured curls. Yes, my little chickadees, this last mode is not easy to put in place oneself. You can indulge in it when you go to the hair stylist on the afternoon of the big date.

Middle-Age Coiffures

Middle-aged lovelies still like the swirl; it does away with tag ends that may fly loose. When the hair is grey, little shags and bob tails just won't do. With the back parting on the left, a mass of rolls snuggle up against the right ear in a soft, glisteny nest. What you do with your fore locks are your own business. You don't have to pomp them, if pomps are not becoming. You can stick to your side parting. There's no law against it.

You can wear bangs. That's the nice thing about fashions these days. You have plenty of leeway to express your own ideas. You can have a lot of fun with the woman in the looking glass.

Keeping Hair Neat

Few of the lofty hairdos can sustain themselves without plenty of hairpins, clips and tuck combs. We allow that the hair acts like all get out when it is taken off the shoulders and mounted on the head. It doesn't know what is happening, it doesn't know what it is all about. In time it settles down, becomes amiable.

For the evening party you can bind it with a fillet. Lovely ones in the shops. Or you can form one of fresh flowers.

WEDDINGS

HOLLAND—WHITFIELD

Wedding bells sounded in the Church of the Assumption, Windsor, on August 18, when Reverend Father Donlan united Rita Whitfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitfield, Windsor, and William John Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Holland, Belleville, in the holy bonds of matrimony. The altar adorned with Summer flowers blended fittingly with the sacredness of the event.

With the church organist playing the Bridal March from Lohengrin, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in a street-length dress of white lace and wore a corsage of red roses and carried in her hand a small prayer book from which hung tiny streamers with rosebuds caught in the ends.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Madeline Savage, Windsor, who looked charming in a frock of rose colored lace and who wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. Cyril Holland, brother of the groom, Belleville, attended the groom as groomsman.

Following the ceremony the bride's mother attired in a blue flowered crepe dress and corsage of roses and the groom's mother who chose a powder blue sheer frock with corsage of roses received the immediate families at the wedding breakfast which was held at the home of the bride's parents. The rooms were prettily banked with gladioli.

Following the breakfast the bridal party left on a motor trip to Amherstburg, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside in Windsor.

Delightful Shower Given Bride-Elect, Miss Frances Scott

A delightful shower was tendered Miss Frances Scott, bride-elect of the month, at the home of Mrs. J. Scott, when Mrs. G. Cooney played hostess to fifty of the bride-to-be's friends. The evening proved a very successful one with some of them taking to the card tables for a game of euchre and with others trying their luck at the bingo table. The winners of the euchre were: first, Mrs. Cunningham, second, Mrs. C. Greatrix, third, Mrs. John Vinkle; bingo winners were: Mrs. Jack Canning and Mrs. Ron Walden. Miss Scott was then escorted to a table beautifully decorated with pretty gifts under an arch from which fell pink and white streamers and the traditional white wedding bell. The young lady took her place under the bell and opened her presents with great fervor and thanked her friends most sincerely for their gifts and the thoughts that were placed behind them. Refreshments brought the pleasant evening to a delightful close.

Color a Beauty Stimulant

Chili Williams wears colors to accent her blonde hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

COLORS exert a profound influence upon the majority of us. No woman can be truly lovely, dress in a charming and distinguished manner, unless she has studied color, its delicate variations, its effect upon her hair, complexion, eyes, even the figure. If she has gone into the subject with keen interest and intelligence, she will realize that color influences her moods and spirits.

To have established in one's mind fixed ideas on color is a good looks handicap. Victims of this deplorable habit are the red heads who fancy that brown is their best bet, the one color that offers little contrast to their flaming thatches, that makes them a picture of a single tone, which in no way enhances the Titian tints.

Blondes in Blue

There are blondies who believe they must robe themselves in some shade of blue. (To match the eyes, they say. Why must eyes be matched, anyway?) or who select tints that impart no feeling of vitality, make a girl a pictorial wash-out. Certain shades of blue are all right. But there are other colors equally becoming. For blonde and red head, black is wonderful. It forms a background for cameo-like loveliness.

Blondes can wear certain shades of green. Grey is out of the question; grey is a trying color for almost all types, unless it is delicate dove grey.

Blue is a tranquil color. It soothes the soul. Yellow is cheerful, like sunshine. Green is a cool number. Reds are warm and stimulating. Orange is exciting, purple is depressing; they are two colors that no woman should wear unless they are used sparingly.

Older women need gayly colored accessories to make them feel young and cheerful. A red hat makes white tresses glitter like silver threads. Because one has accumulated birthdays is no reason why one should assume drab draperies; they drag down morale.

Improved Light Feature Of Our Post-War Homes

New York, Aug 28 — (CP) — Thousands, war-working women, accustomed to well-illuminated plant interiors, are going to see the light when they settle down to being homebodies again. They're going to flick on their electric light switches, and realize something is missing.

That something will be fluorescent light, says designer Lurelle Guild, who predicts a bright future for post-war homes with the slender "pencil lights." The things he promises they will accomplish would make Aladdin and his lamp look like amateurs.

There'll be light tubes eight feet long and less than an inch wide to throw an even, shadowless, good-to-the-eyes light. There'll be daylight 24 hours a day, because the light tubes are made in tones to kept fluorescent lighting out of decoration motifs —will be as good looking as anything you've seen, and will match a variety of decors. There'll be standing tables lamps, with the tube running in a circle; overhead circular pieces and even square-cornered lights, in a variety of shades, including white, soft white, daylight, green, blue, pink, gold and red.

As if that weren't enough, Guild says the light is flattering, because it casts no deep shadows; and cool, because it throws no heat, despite the fact that the fluorescent lamp provides two or three times the light for the same power as regular bulbs.

The time isn't far off, Guild believes, when whole houses will be equipped with built-in fluorescent fixtures, to give the same maximum light orientation an architect figures out when he decides which room should have sunny southern explosure.

Fluorescent fixtures super-imposed on homes already decorated will make a slight change in the appearance of colors, particularly the warm tone red, rose and brown. The change is not sufficiently large to upset most decorating schemes, but light experts recommend selecting under fluorescent lighting the fabrics and colors you plan to use under this lighting wherever possible.

FASHION FLASHES

A RISING TREND appears in coat collars. A new suit topper, fashioned of bold brown and lime checked woollen has a cup collar of bever curved high around the neckline. The collar is finished with a fabric bow with fur-ball ends. Worn with lime green jacket and brown wool shirt.

Very neat, yet spectacular, is an afternoon suit hat—a little black velvet derby—its curved brim edged with jet bead embroidery.

For easy change, consider the claims of a well-made black jersey sweater that for late afternoon becomes dressy with the aid of a gold kid belt, and gold clips on necklace.

Fantasy rules, especially in accessories developed for teen-agers. A decorative pin for sweater or suit lapel is a Scotty in black curly lamb, with a red stone eye, a green leather bow, and a brown leather bone on which to gnaw. It's so cute that mother might borrow it!

It isn't easy to resist the attraction of some of the new fabric bags, even if one does dote on leather. A long, narrow, flat-looking bag is of quilted faille. It has double handles above a wide top of mock shell which is ridged to suggest a quilted effect.

• Something new in the costume jewelry line-up is a set consisting of matching choker and bracelet. One set is fashioned of large baguette-cut stones linked together with fine chains. The choker is flat; the bracelet rigid and very wide.

GOOD MANNERS

Wedding Reception Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—If there is to be a small wedding reception (25 guests, approximately), is it necessary to have a receiving-line? If so, who is included in this line, and in what order do they stand?

2.—Is it necessary to ask the minister and his wife to the reception? Also if the soloist and organist are only acquaintances, should they be invited to the reception?

3.— Should the engagement ring be worn on the proper finger and slipped off just before the wedding ring is put on, or should it be worn on the right hand during the ceremony?

4.—What is the general procedure regarding the proposing of toasts at the reception?

5.—What are the duties of the bridesmaid (the only bridal attendant)? Of the best man?

G. C.

1.—No, it is not necessary to have a formal receiving-line. You and your bridegroom and your one attendant may receive the guests, standing on the side of the room opposite the entrance, your mother first having greeted the guests at the entrance to the room. Your mother may graciously invite your bridegroom's mother to stand with her.

If you decide to have the more or less usual formation of the receiving-line, your mother will be first in line to receive; your father may or may not receive with her, and if he does, he stands next to her. Then the bridegroom's father (unless he prefers not to be in the line); next, the bridegroom's mother; then the bridegroom, you on his right, and at your right, your attendant.

2.—At such a small reception you need not invite the minister and his wife unless you wish to, because they are especially close friends of your family.

3.—The bride usually wears her engagement ring on her right hand during the ceremony. . . it is certainly awkward for her to have to slip it off before the wedding ring is to be put on.

4.—The usual procedure is for the best man to propose a toast to the bride and bridegroom; and the bridegroom responds to this, with thanks for his bride and himself. Other toasts may be proposed by anyone wishing to.

5.—The duties of your bridesmaid (since she is to be the only attendant, she is really your maid, or matron, of honor) are: to look as lovely as possible; to be as charming as possible; to co-operate with you in all your plans, and to be helpful in carrying out these plans; to pay for the costume that you have planned for her; to hold your bouquet during the ceremony, and, when the recessional is about to start, to return your bouquet to you and to arrange your train (if any) as you start down the aisle. Also, if it is a double ring ceremony, she may take charge of the bridegroom's ring, handing it to you as the best man hands the bride's ring to him.

The best man is "guide, comforter and friend" to the bridegroom. He is helpful with all plans. Before the wedding he goes to the bridegroom's house, is "at his service", collects from him the bride's ring and the envelope in which is the minister's fee, goes with him to the church, enters with him following the minister, stands at his right during the ceremony, hands him the bride's ring at the proper time. He does not take part in the receiving-line, but is a kind of deputy host during the reception.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Why Not Try, At Least, to Save the Wreckage?

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"At 38, I'm trying to decide what's best for me and my six children, who range in ages from 3 to 17 years.

"I was the local school teacher when I married a classmate whom I'd known all my life. And after our marriage went to live on a farm that had belonged to his family for generations. We made the farm pay, and we were all very happy there. Then came the offer of a big job in a defence plant with my husband as foreman. The two older boys and I took over the farm—milking the cows, making the butter, atten ing to milk sales, raising chic ens, ducks, turkeys and making go of everything.

"My husband worked terrib hard, sometimes as much as si teen hours a day, and as a resu of this couldn't sleep. The me at the plant urged him to go to tavern for relaxation. There met the woman who has wreck our home.

It would have been wi to have worn the gardenin gloves. But you were impatie fancied you could do your wee ing and harvesting more quick with free fingers.

Something must be done. Yo still enjoy a bridge game now a then, even if you are busy, a you can't very well sit on you hands and hide them. So get o the cream jar and see what yo can do.

Scrub your hands with a thick lather to which cornmeal has been added. You will be surprised to find how the tiny grains will remove dark knuckle lines, how the starchy content of the meal will make the skin soft, smooth and white. Rinse well, dry thoroughly, give yourself a hand massage. Won't take ten minutes. The hard-working paws deserve tender care.

Rub from finger bases to fingertips, doing circles on the nails that also suffer from soil and grime. Thumb the knuckles. Friction from wrist to fingers with heavy pressure. Force as much cream into the flesh as you can. It will lap it up as a kitten laps up milk.

The Marry Go Round

In Defense of Women

One of my favorite male columnists recently wrote jestingly of one of the foibles of women—namely their passion for show-weddings, showy funerals and what he terms "flub-dub" in general.

This column, as you and he and I know, will probably bring down on his head a bushel of letters of protest. Whereas, I might write columns kidding the foibles of men for twenty years, without drawing more than a hundred or so good natured letters of protest and a dozen or so agreeing with me, or trying to date me.

This is not necessarily because men are better natured than women, or because women can't "take it". It is because of a masculine philosophy that dates back to aboriginal man—a philosophy that not all the feminism in the world can eradicate.

It is the beautiful philosophy of self assurance or self complacency. The average man is so perfectly certain that he is Heaven's Masterpiece in the animal kingdom that any little reference to his foibles, frailties or even she loves to celebrate anniversaries, particularly her wedding anniversary, with dinners and flowers and parties; she loves exciting going-away parties when somebody is sailing on a long trip.

Most of all she loves a romantic proposal of marriage that she can remember all her life, and a beautiful courtship with flowers and love-letters, neither of which she is likely to get in these prosaic, hurried days when even on the stage and screen, men either stumble into their proposals or wait for the girl to make them. And, if love dies, she wants to give it a decent burial with farewell tears and a dramatic parting. But a man only wants to get away!

If it were not for woman and her love of "flub-dub", there would be no art, no grace, no beauty and no ceremony in the world. Men would still be going around in bear-skins, without a shave, and eating their salad without dressing. It is woman who invented love-making, flirtation, romance, conversation, cooking, curtains, polished floors, seven-course dinners, pink lamp-shades, spring cleaning, church weddings and all the other cultural and beautiful things, which go to make man more civilized.

And yet there are times when every man secretly suspects that woman was sent into the world, for the sole purpose of making a man suffer with all her "flub-dud!"

N.Y. Yankees Loom as Team To Beat in American League As They Are Only 4 Games off Top

Win Double Bill From Washington as Cleveland Defeats Tigers

When the Yankees sold Hank Borowy to Chicago they supposedly kissed off their 1945 flag hopes but here it is September first and the New Yorkers are only four games out of first place, steaming down the stretch like another squadron of the famous Bronx Bombers.

With the exception of Washington, every club in Will Harridge's American circuit gets a bang out of the Yank revival. Detroit, because they can continue to hold first place while losing five of their last six as long as New York keeps on beating the Senators. Cleveland likes the idea because they too get a chance to close in as does third place St. Louis.

Ernie Bonham and Al Gettel of the Yanks teamed up on the Senators last night in Washington in a twi-night doubleheader, Big Jumbo whipping them in the first tilt, 3-2 and Gettel following up with a 3-1 job in the finale.

Anything Goes

Bobby Feller hardly expected a world series slice when he came out of the Navy to finish up the season with Cleveland but anything goes this year. Rapid Robert goes again today against Hal Newhouser after Allie Reynolds beat the Bengals yesterday, 7-2 with the help of Felix Mackiewicz' 3-run homer. The Tigers now have lost their last four to the Tribe and have six more to go that may cost them the pennant.

St. Louis and Chicago were rained out of a game in the second inning, necessitating a two-night double tonight and Boston divided two with Philadelphia, the Red Sox bouncing back in the second, 4-2 after Russ Christopher had topped a six-hit, 6-3, job with a home run in the opener.

Big news in the National League was the fourth successive decision the St. Louis Cards grabbed from their Chicago "cousins," 4-1, making it 11 out of 14 for the year with eight to go.

Pittsburgh scored six times in the first two heats and held on to trim Cincinnati, 6-5.

The Phillies staged one of their rare rallies to shade Boston, 6-5.

New York and Brooklyn were not scheduled.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Capt. Dave Zinkoff, assistant special service officer in Iceland, reports that most of the Americans have left Iceland but they left their sports behind . . . "We sold Andrews Field house to the Icelanders," he says, "and they're running monthly boxing shows. They hope to make it twice a month. The sport that really caught on there was bowling . . . You see, the Red Cross put in two makeshift alleys in Reykjavik and two in Keflavik and they were in use 13 hours a day. The soldiers began bringing in Icelandic girls to watch them and first thing the girls wanted to try the game. Their enthusiasm is terrific.

The big wind Zink adds they're still playing softball up to 11 p.m., but it makes things difficult when a 130-mile wind springs up suddenly.

BEARS REGISTER 11 STRAIGHT WINS BY BEATING BIRDS

Toronto Kept Pace by Taking Two From League-Leading Royals

By the Associated Press

Newark's once seemingly impossible chance to overtake the International league-leading Montreal Royals became more than a wish today.

The Bears registered their 11th straight victory last night when they defeated Baltimore Orioles 6-1 to advance to within seven games of the Royals, as the schedule showed only 15 games left for them compared to Montreal's 13. Newark's hope of catching Montreal hinges on the fact they gained six full games on the lagging Royals in the last 10 days.

Toronto remained in the fight for runner-up honors by winning two from the Royals, copping the regular scheduled game 4-3, after winning the first 7-4, playing one inning to complete an unfinished game of Aug. 24. Chet Morgan's single in the ninth scored George Ogorek with the winning run.

Buffalo split a doubleheader with Rochester, losing the second 4-2 after winning the opener 7-3.

Al (Dutch) Mele hit two home runs, a double and a single to lead Syarcuse to a 9-5 victory over the floundering Jersey City Giants.

Margaret Osborne Eliminated In Women's Singles

(By The Canadian Press.)

An upset occurred in the Women's Singles of the U. S. National Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, N.Y., yesterday when Doris Hart of Miami Beach, Fla., eliminated Margaret Osborne, San Francisco, last year's runner-up, in straight sets. Miss Hart went into today's semi-finals where she will clash with defending champion Pauline Betz. The latter, a three-time winner, disposed of Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, only after dropping the first set.

Bill Talbert, Pancho Segura and Elwood Cooke all earned their way into the men's semi-finals after overtime contests, with Cooke surviving after five sets against S. B. Wood of New York.

Trailing 12 others, Byron Nelson of Toledo came in with a one-under-par 70 in the first round yesterday of the Nashville, Tenn., open golf tourney, the leader of which was Ben Hogan of Texas who contrived a seven-under-par 64 for a two-stroke margin.

Between games of the American League doubleheader at Washington yesterday, pitcher Bert Shepard of the Senators received the Distinguished Flying Cross from Under-Secretary of War Patterson. Shepard is playing despite loss of one leg below the knee.

Veteran outfielder Johnny Moore has been purchased by the Chicago Cubs from the team's Los Angeles farm club and will report immediately, the Cubs management said last night. It was also announced the Cubs have purchased Regino Otero, first baseman, from Los Angeles.

More than 500 Chatham softball fans turned out last night at a memorial softball game for Flt. Lt. Jack Calder, former sports editor of the Chatham News and Canadian Press staff writer. He was reported missing in 1944 on an R.C.A.F. bombing mission.

Old Timers downed a younger Navy All-Stars club 9-4 in an eight-inning all-veterans game.

Proceeds of the game will be used to buy a memorial plaque to be put in one of the schools Flt. Lt. Calder attended.

J. J. Desjardins of Montreal defeated J. Dickinson of Toronto, 5-7, 6-1, 6-4, Friday to enter the quarter-finals of the third annual invitation tournament of the Toronto Tennis Club. Earlier in the day, Desjardins defeated O. J. Morris, Toronto, 6-0, 6-1.

Ed Murphy of Ottawa, reported erroneously Thursday as having beaten Cuth Hopper, yesterday defeated Hopper of Toronto, 6-2, 6-3.

Bobby Durford, Ottawa, defeated Morton Grass, St. Catharines, 6-2, 6-1.

Today sees the start of the quarter-finals with Sunday the semi-finals and Monday the big day of the tourney. Desjardins is the only one so far to enter the fourth round, but fans are also keeping their eyes on Gordon Robinson of Lockport, N.Y. and Beau Summers of Toronto.

Gerry Kesselring, smooth-swinging youngster from Kitchener Rockaway Club yesterday fired two par rounds of 73 to capture the Ontario junior golf championship at Toronto's Islington Golf Club. Kesselring's total was 11 strokes better than runner-up Elmer Cassidy of Royal York who posted scores of 77 and 80.

Anne Sharp of Welland, only girl contestant in the field of 77 and first feminine entry to compete for junior honors in the tournament's history, posted rounds of 51 and 53 for 104.

Winnipeg Globelites defeated Saskatoon Olympic 2-1 in Moose Jaw last night in the third game of their best-of-five Western Canada senior men's fastball championship series. Fourth game of the series will be played today. Globelites now lead the series two games to one. They won last night's second game in Regina 4-1 after dropping the opener to the Saskatoon team 3-1.

The winner of the series will battle Edmonton United States Army Clipeprs in the Western Canada final. Globelites were titlists last year.

Pitcher Zess of Guelph Callanders pitched a no hit game at Brantford last night but lost to Brantford Coach and Body team 1-0. This gives Brantford the lead in the first round of the Ontario Senior "B" series with the second game due in Guelph early next week.

The Brantfordites scored their winning run on a passed third strike a stolen base and two passed balls.

Following his discharge from the U.S. army early in the week, shortstop Luke Appling, American League batting champion of 1943, joined the Chicago White Sox yesterday and will face St. Louis Browns in Sunday's double-bill.

The third and deciding bout in Madison Square Garden between Johnny Greco of Montreal and Tony Janiro, Youngstown, O., has been fixed for Sept. 21 by promoter Mike Jacobs. Rocky Grazino and Al (Bummy) Davis will feature the Sept. 28 card.

Toronto, Sept. 1 — (CP) — The old diamond ditty that a-ball-game - isn't - over-until-the-last-man's-out applies forcefully to a foothills league game in Calgary between Purity 99 and Detroit Bears. With two out and two on, the Purity catcher trapped a third strike, tossed the ball over his shoulder and made a quick exit to the dugout.

Batter Jerry Fath thought he was finished, too, but a hurry call from the first base coach sent him hustling to the first sack. Then the fireworks started. Purity players came running in from the field, the Detroit runners headed for home plate and a bat boy threw a new ball on the field.

Using the illegal pellet, the Purity catcher tagged one of the Detroit runners but the run was allowed because of interference.

Six runs later, reports Bob (Calgary Herald) Mamini, Purity settled down to business — but too late to make any difference.

Paddock Patter:

When Noble King reeled off 6½ furlongs in 1:19 2/5 to establish an Edmonton track record, the early pacemaker and ultimate place horse was 10-year-old Chief Richie, owned by L. Powley of Calgary. Not bad, considering the Chief was listed as missing for several days after a fire in the stables at Fort Erie, Ont., about four years ago. Everybody thought Chief Richie had been destroyed in the blaze, but investigation showed that a strange horse browsing on a neighboring farm was the Chief. How he escaped the fire still hasn't been disclosed.

Around the Circuit:

German war prisoners who work from daylight to sundown at a Cooksville, Ont., brick factory spend their weekends playing soccer and chatting about British soccer stars. Efforts are being made to have a Toronto club visit Cooksville to play an exhibition game against the Germans, principally former merchant seamen who speak English fluently . . . Jackie McLean, whose chief function with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League was to soften up the opposition, is reported to have severed connections with the club because of salary differences. McLean, who says he prefers football to hockey, will play with Toronto Indians of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Canadians were in the sporting spotlight again, but even in a world at least at peace, the boys from the Dominion were still doing their athletic stuff on faraway arenas where the fortunes of war had brought them.

At Uterson, Germany, Sgt. Mervin Platt of Toronto, winning three events, led the R. C. A. F.'s 143 Typhoon wing to victory in a track and field meet between the three Canadian wings of the Tactical Air Force's 83 Group.

Platt won the 100-yard dash in 10.6 seconds, the hop, step and jump with a leap of 40 feet six inches, and the running broad jump with a 19 feet 10 inches mark. His wing scored 47 points to 37 for 126 Spitfire wing and 26 for 39 Reconnaissance wing.

LAC. George Wilson of Herschel, Sask., representing 39 wing, won the 220-yard sprint in 24.5 seconds and placed second in the 100 yards. The Recce wing had two first places, in the mile and three mile runs, both won by Flt. Sgt. Charles Mitchell of West Ham, London.

Continental swimming and tennis championships of the R. C. A. F. overseas were contested at Hamburg with competitors coming from many air centres in Europe for the meets.

FO. D. W. Davis, Vancouver, won the tennis title from Cpl. C. M. Allan, also Vancouver, and the doubles crown went to Capt. R. I. Morton, Yarmouth, N. S., and Salvation Army Supervisor L. E. Deebank, Cornwall, Ont., representing an air observation post attached to the Canadian forces in Holland.

Cpl. F. R. Bearman, Owen Sound, Ont., won the 100-yard free style swimming race and placed second to FO. C. Preston, St. Catharines, Ont., in the 50-yard free style event. Diving champion was LAC. R. Dowsett, Toronto. Other first place winners included Flt. Lt. A. E. Sawyer, Toronto, in the 50-yard back stroke, LAC. C. W. Logan, Hamilton, Ont., 50-yard breast stroke, and LAC. C. C. Clifford, Toronto, 220-yard free style.

Back in England, FO. W. V. Matthews of (806 Burnell St.) Winnipeg won the singles final of the R. C. A. F. overseas horseshoe championship after a stiff fight against LAC. W. Dumouchel of (6 Shakespeare St.) Eastview, Ont. Scores were 21-7, 19-21, 15-21, 21-4 and 21-3.

Matthews represented No. 5 District Men's "A" team and Dumouchel No. 5's "B" team. In Canada Matthews pitched for the Pioneer Horseshoes Club of Winnipeg and represented Manitoba in several interprovincial matches.

The doubles final was won by LAC. D. J. Deynam, Fenelon Falls, Ont., and Cpl. J. H. Eaton, Paddock Wood, Sask. They defeated LAC. D. E. Tugwell, Stella, Ont., and LAC. G. W. MacDonald, (44 Essex St.) Toronto by scores of 21-8 and 21-12.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Eddie Schrieder's junior pigskin punters held their first workout on the Collegiate campus on Thursday night and the results were satisfactory from a first-night point of view. The next session is scheduled for Tuesday at six o'clock and all potential aspirants for a spot on the squad are requested to be present. Eleven-man football is quite different to that of the six-man variety, for the information of these youngsters who have not played in the "bigger" game. There is a big margin between the type styles of the game and much more practice is needed for the eleven man set-up than the other. Therefore attendance at practice is necessary, and the youngsters should not pass up any opportunity to attend these sessions. Coach Schrieder requests a full-turnout at the campus on Tuesday evening.

A Word in Time May Save Your Line.

The new insecticide DDT is an atomic bomb as far as those friendly little cusses, the mosquitoes, blacks et el are concerned but it is not so good, 'tis said, for other things. For instance a veteran fisherman who is abreast of the times has these timely words to pass on to the angling fraternity:

"There seems to be a lot of talk about this new insecticide, DDT, and a number of fishermen's fly dopes containing it are coming on the market. It ought to be worth noting that there is no better varnish remover than DDT, and it will also peel the finish from your line, etch the plastic rims of your sun glasses and attack your non-breakable watch crystal.

"When I dope up with a preparation containing DDT, I wash my hands with soap before handling my rod or line. The bugs bite my hands, but that is better than damaging my equipment. Incidentally, a sample tube of shaving cream is handy on the stream. A little squeeze of it will sink the most obdurate gut leader, and a larger squeeze will wash line grease or other soil off your hands."

Horse Sense Bridge.

LESSON NO. 771
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Maybe you are a good bidder. Maybe you play the cards well. To be a good bridge player, you must be adept in both departments.

Some players can take tricks like candy from a baby. Others throw tricks away like confetti. A little simple reasoning is often the whole difference between the two.

Throw yourself into this deal:

NORTH
♠ 7 5 4
♥ 8 2
♦ A J 10
♣ K Q J 10 4

WEST	EAST
♠ K 8	♠ 9 6 3 2
♥ K Q J 7 5	♥ 10 9
♦ 3 2	♦ K 9 7 6 5
♣ 8 6 5 3	♣ 9 7

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 10
♥ A 5 4 3
♦ Q 8 4
♣ A 2

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 S	2 C
2 NT	3 C
3 NT	Pass

This bidding is sound. Even if you did not know a rule, common sense would have told you to do it that way. Thus, south becomes the declarer at three no-trump and west leads the heart king.

South can see five tricks in clubs and three tricks with the other three aces. That makes eight tricks that he need not worry about. Only one more trick is needed for the contract.

That ninth trick must be developed before opponents can take five to defeat the contract. To pick up that ninth trick, look to the diamonds or spades.

To pick up that trick in diamonds or spades, he is likely to lose a trick to the king. If he does and opponents get four heart tricks, there goes the old ball game. It would be his downfall.

Before deciding which suit to attack, he must learn which of the opponents has the most hearts. So, he waits for the third round of hearts before using his ace. Then he knows.

This tells him the safest play. It warns him not to take the diamond finesse. That makes his contract a cinch.

A head that is level can play like the devil.

SWACOS TAKE RELIANCE TO GET PLAYOFF BERTH

SWACOS City and District Baseball League entry eliminated the Reliance nine from the loop playoffs on Thursday night with a neat 6-3 win over the south end planters. The winners by their victory earned the fourth play-off spot and will meet Juniors on Tuesday in the first battle of the wind-up series.

Juby was on the mound for the Alemiters and scattered six hits over the seven inning route and walked four. Reliance scored one run in the 3rd on Lupinette's hit and a walk and an error, another in the 4th on two walks and Henn's clout to centre and their final marker in the 6th when Barriage's clout drove in Lupinette.

Barriage for Reliance deserved a better fate. He allowed only four base knocks all of them coming in the second innings when the winners shoved over their entire six runs. After that the Reliance righthander was invincible, pitching hitless and runless ball for five stanzas.

Latchford started the second inning rally with a triple and Dickey walked. Successive hits by Juby, Philp and Martin plus two walks spelt ruin for the downtowners. Goyer lead the hit parade for Reliance with a pair.

The score:—

Reliance	001	101	0	6	3	3
SWACOS	060	000	0	3	4	4

Columbian Squires Even 5-5 Draw Against Oshawa

Game Called at Completion of Nine Innings on Account of Darkness

Jack Boyle's local Columbian Squires juniors are still one game from winning their best-in-three softball series with the Oshawa Aces following Friday evening's game in the Motor City which was terminated following completion of full nine innings play with the score tied five-all.

Up until the fatal eighth innings the locals looked like sure winners and with Don Boyle hurling masterful ball were leading by a five-one score. Then the balloon broke and the Oshawa lads touched the local hurler for six of their eleven hits in the last two innings to score four runs and tie the game.

Arrangements now call for the locals to make another trip to Oshawa on Wednesday where a defeat will eliminate the Motor City squad, while if the locals lose they will still have a chance.

Five hits were all that the Aces could get off Boyle up to the eighth as he sent them back to the bench almost in order. Then McNabney got a life on a muffed throw by the first sacker and Wilson homered to deep left. Crowdiz hit safely and after stealing second rode home on Czerwaty's one base blow. Oshawa tied the game in the ninth when Porayko got a life to be followed by two successive singles.

Count Three Times.

The locals went scoreless in the first innings but broke out in the second to count three times on two walks and as many safeties. They counted again in the fourth as Donovan homered to right when Rollins tripled to score Wardhaugh.

Squires counted an even dozen hits in they hit safely in every innings, while Oshawa got to Boyle for 11 hits including a home and triple by Wilson, rightfielder. Heavy hitters for the locals were Rollins with a triple, double and single, Goyer with three singles, and Donovan with a round tripper.

Teams:

Belleville—Wardhaugh 3b, Rollins 2b; Boyle p; Goyer ss; A. Adams 1b; Culkin cf; D. Adams c; Locke rf; and Donovan lf.

Oshawa— Lyzon lf; McNabney c; Wilson rf; Crowdiz 3b; Denny 2b; Czerwaty 1b; Taillion ss; Crawford p and Porayko cf.

Score by innings:

Belleville	030 101 000—5	12
Oshawa	100 000 031—5	11

Umpires — Bawden, Belleville, plate and Reg. Fair, Oshawa, bases.

DESPITE SLUMP SHERMAN LOLLAR STILL LEADING

Frank Skaff Paces Loop With Homers and Number of Hits

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—Sherman Lollar, Baltimore's strong man, retains the International League batting lead despite a mild slump during the past week.

Lollar's batting percentage skidded from .384 to .378, including Wednesday's games, but the hard working receiver still led his nearest competitor, Roland Gladu of Montreal, by 46 points.

Gladu raised his average two points to .332, which gave him a 10-point lead over Walter Cazen of Syracuse for runner-up honors.

Although Gladu lost his runs scored lead to Frank Skaff of Baltimore, he still paced the boys in three departments with 181 hits, 42 doubles and 14 triples. Skaff tallied 122 runs to 119 for the royal outfielder.

Skaff was first in homers with 36, and runs batted in with 114. Lollar pressed his teammate in both departments with 32 round trippers and 106 R.B.I. Cazen led in stolen bases with 56.

Johnny Gabbard of Montreal, continued to pitch winning ball, adding another victory to his record to retain his lead with a won and lost record of 19-5. Teammate Jean Pierre Roy, who became Montreal's biggest winner in history with 24 triumphs and 10 defeats, was next.

Johnny Podgajny, Baltimore established a new league pitching record by appearing in his 62nd game. He has won 19 and lost 9. Roy, however, has pitched the most innings, 273; gave up the most hits, 246; walked the most, 137; struck out the most, 127 and hurled the most complete games, 27, in addition to winning the most games.

WHIPPER WATSON MEETS MCCREADY IN TITLE BOUT

Whipper Billy Watson can certainly be called a glutton for punishment. The handsome young British Empire-champion has agreed to lay his valuable title on the line once more against big Earl McCready. The match has been signed and sealed and has official recognition for its special extended time-limit of ninety minutes. The Whip came as close as it is possible to do, to losing his title here several weeks ago against the same Moose McCready and only an accidental injury to the Aurora Giant deprived the latter of the new championship. Now McCready is back in wonderful shape as witnessed by his magnificent decision win over the mighty Swede, Olaf Olsen last week. McCready and Watson will "have at each other" in the Hume Arena ring on Wednesday night and if the battle is any better than their bout of few weeks back, it will be the greatest match this city has seen. Along with John Katan, Watson and McCready make up the three greatest Canadian wrestlers this country has ever produced. The margin between them is small and the slightest break in one's favor could make him the new champion. Over ninety minutes and with both men making a herculean effort to wipe the other from his path with a decisive defeat, Wednesday's match is expected to bring out the record crowd of the season. The strong preliminary matches will have Whitey Hewitt meeting Olaf Olsen and Pilot Officer Pat Flanagan "bearding the lion" in the person of Bunny "Buffer" Dunlop. Looks like a super-colossal night for the mat fans. The opening battle starts at 8.45 this time to give those big main-bouters plenty of lee-way.

By HYE BOSSIN

The cowboy film, "Smoky," from the famous book by artist and author Will James, will feature someone new with something new — Burl Ives, folklore troubadour, who sings old and forgotten English-language songs. In "Smoky" he will sing "Barbara Allen," an Elizabethan melody, which makes it three centuries old. None of his songs are less than 100 years old, among them being "Bluetail Fly," a favorite of Abraham Lincoln, "Old Dan Tucker," once a popular minstrel number, and "Streets of Laredo". . . . Phil Silvers, the bespectacled comedian, is a scream in "A Thousand and One Nights," a lush Technicolor drama loaded with luscious ladies and starred in by Cornel Wilde. But it's Silvers' comedy which makes it a man's picture.

Claire DuBrey, a leading vamp in the silent days, resumes her film career in "Dakota". . . Bing Crosby's producing unit, which made "The Great John L.," will transfer "Abie's Irish Rose" to the screen again . . . A British film company is re-enacting the battle of Arnheim right on that scene of great valor. Not only will the residents be the extras but German prisoners will play the German military roles with captured material. Devastated sections of the town will be set afire, with permission of the authorities, in order to simulate actual battle conditions.

The next Screen Snapshots will be called "Continued Next Week," and, as that title indicates, will be about serials—or cliffhangers, as they are known in Hollywood. Old reelage of such stars as Pearl White, Ruth Roland, William Duncan, Lottie Pickford, Eddie Polo and Marie Walcamp is being assembled to make a subject that will cover 27 years of serial history . . . Yvonne De Carlo, Vancouver girl who is now a movie star, just purchased the home built in Hidden Valley by Francis X. Bushman when he was a great star. It's a long time since Bushman lived in it, his present domicile being a very ordinary bungalow. Yvonne will present it to her mother as a birthday gift.

William Lundigan, whose promising screen career was interrupted by military service, just married Rena Morgan, adopted daughter of the late Helen Morgan . . . Alexander Knox, the Ontario star of "Wilson" and other films, will play Somerset Maugham in the latter's autobiographical "The Razor's Edge" . . . Monty Woolley has been quite ill of late. Errol Flynn collapsed on the set recently and Betty Hutton became sick during an overseas tour. Who said it's an easy life? . . . "Out of This World," in which Eddie Bracken apes Frank Sinatra using Bing Crosby's voice, is fine, funny and friendly musical also starring Dianna Lynn and featuring Cass Daley. Another outstanding film is "Duffy's Tavern," in which the inimitable Archie stars, supported by Bing Crosby, the Crosby Kids, Dorothy Lamour and a dozen more stars.

AT THE BELLE — Sonny Tufts, Marjorie Reynolds and Eddie Bracken in a scene from Paramount's fun and music show, "Bring On The Girls," playing first times today at the Belle.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at his paper and ma was looking at hers, and I said, Hay pop, hay ma, dont you think I ought to have more allowance during vacation?

Why so? pop said, and I said, Because I've got so much more time to spend it.

That's very logical, now let's get practical, pop said. The only way I can get more money is by earning it with exter work, and if I let you have more money just because you take a notion to ask for it, you might get an entirely mistaken impression of the general rules of financial supply and demand, he said, and ma said, Your father is quite right for land sakes. There are lots of little things always waiting to be done around the house, and you're certainly able, if you're only willing, she said.

Well jimminy, ma, I'm willing, I said. I can even think of things to do without waiting to be told, I said, and pop said, Now that's the real constructive spirit.

Sure, pop, the next time you start to shave yourself and your whiskers come off like lightning, it'll be because I've done some exter work by taking your package of razor blades and making them all twice as good by sharpening them in that old Miracle Razor Sharpener on the top shelf of the medicine chest, I said, and pop said, Yee gods, that's a thought.

Sure, and the next time ma looks in her closit and sees all the stains are out of her clothes, she'll know I took them out with her bottle of stain remover and saved her all that money on cleeners bills, I said, and ma said, Oh dear such an idea.

Well gosh, ma, good night, pop, I thought they were 2 swell ideas, I said, and pop said, No doubt they have their points, but they're too ruggedly individualistic.

The result being pop and ma decided to give me a special vacation allowance on general principals and talk about earning it later.

FM Broadcasting Stations Will Be Set Up in Canada

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Permanent frequency modulation broadcasting stations will be established in Canada just as soon as the Transport Department discloses what frequencies may be used by FM stations in the Dominion Dr. Augustin Frigon, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, said today in an interview.

Dr. Frigon said he did not know how soon the Transport Department — radio licencing authority for Canada—would announce what frequencies might be used by stations equipped for frequency modulation, scientific radio development which brings in programs without static.

From other sources, however, it was learned that an announcement likely will be forthcoming just as soon as the signal corps of the armed forces no longer need the frequencies they now are using.

More than 60 applications for the establishment of frequency modulation stations have been received by the CBS, which passes the applications on to the Transport Department with recommendations for acceptance or rejection.

No action has yet been taken on the application and none will be taken until the Transport Department discloses what frequencies may be used for frequency modulation broadcasting.

The CBC has an experimental FM station in Montreal which carries all the CBC's regular programs. The Canadian Marconi Company also has an experimental station in Montreal which carries the programs of its station —CFCFS.

A second CBC experimental station will be built in Toronto just as soon as equipment now ordered is received.

Dr. Frigon said that the main feature of frequency modulation broadcasting was reception without static and interference and, when properly dealt with, high fidelity transmission of all programs.

Present day radio sets cannot pick up any frequency modulation broadcasts. Special sets are required. However sets can be obtained that will serve for both FM and AM broadcasts.

Bomb Death Toll In Japan 450,000 Diet will be Told

Tokyo, Sept. 1 —(AP)— Japan next week will hear from its Premier the staggering news that its bomb death toll was 450,000, nearly double the official figures thus far announced.

The revelation will be made in a frank discussion of the war before a session of the diet beginning Sept. 4 which Premier Prince Higashikuni promised in an interview with the Japanese Press yesterday.

His speech will be the first before the diet under the newly announced program of loosening official bonds on public discussion.

The address is prompted, he told the press, by the necessity of explaining "the collapse of Japan's fighting spirit" which he said caused her defeat.

Authoritative sources said 95,000 persons died in Hiroshima, which had a previous population of 250,000.

New deaths are occurring daily as a result of the atomic bombs and 10,000,000 homes were destroyed during aerial raids, the sources said.

Tokyo, once a proud city of 7,500,000, now totals 2,500,000—the result of emigration to the country plus the deaths. A German priest who lives in the capital throughout the war and visited every section, said 80 per cent of the city was destroyed.

This destruction was primarily of flimsy residences, small shops and heavily blasted factories. Some modern fire-resistant buildings, such as those around the palace, remain amid piles of debris.

Angry because they claim the Rev. Dr. J. W. C. The Rev. W. St. Clair-Taylor, of the National Union, is shown delivering a speech to the demonstrators at St. Mary's during the new bishop's confirmation ceremony at that church.

Canadians Were Gallant In Defeat at Hong Kong Says Col. R. S. Malone

By COL. R. S. MALONE
Director of Public Relations, Canadian Army.

Yokohama, Sept. 4 — (CP) — Canadian well be proud of the gallantry displayed by her Hong Kong contingent which fought against the Japanese until they overwhelmed that British crown colony on a black Christmas Day in 1941.

That is the conclusion reached from first-hand reports I received from men of the Hong Kong force liberated from Japanese prison camps after 3 1-2 years of confinement. The Dominion can be proud of the behavior of her soldiers—the 1,985 men from the Winnipeg Grenadiers, the Royal Rifles of Canada and a brigade headquarters and particularly of the officers, loudly praised by the men.

30 P. C. Killed.

I sought some estimate of the number still alive. A sergeant from brigade headquarters said 30 per cent of the headquarters staff had been killed, while members of the Grenadiers said that according to a check made by their officers after the surrender 136 Grenadiers had been killed in action and a little more than 200 died later in a diphtheria and dysentery epidemic. I could get only rough guesses of the Royal Rifles casualties.

(After the surrender the Japanese reported they took 1,689 prisoners and it had been officially assumed 296 Canadians were killed or missing in the fighting. Some of those taken prisoner are known to have died since.)

Some 200 of the prisoners who were in Japanese camps are in Allied hands and it was from them I learned of the last days of the gallant defence against overwhelming odds. The group interviewed included 15 Canadian soldiers. All are in reasonable health.

JAPANESE PEERS ADMIT 'REALITY OF OUR DEFEAT'

Hirohito Calls On People to Surmount Trials and to Win World's Confidence

San Francisco, Sept. 4—(AP)—The Japanese House of Peers today resolved "to acknowledge the reality of our defeat," and "to cut a way out of the present situation and embark upon a new course of national building."

Emperor Hirihito himself opened the parliamentary session this morning, calling for the Japanese to "surmount the manifold hardships and trials attending termination of the war, make manifest the innate glory of Japan's national policy, win the confidence of the world," and "devote ourselves to reconstruction in every field."

The resolution adopted later by the House of Peers expressed determination to rebuild the nation "with a veiw to safeguarding the age-old national structure and contributing to world peace, in order that his Majesty's mind may be put at rest."

Hirohito had terminated the war, the resolution said, "in profound consideration of the welfare of his subjects."

'Surrender' Not Used in Rescript

The Emperor did not once use the word "surrender" in the imperial rescript as broadcast by the Domei agency, but merely referred to "termination of the war"—and "cessation of hostilities."

A Diet member, 88-year-old Yukio Ozaki, speaking before the session opened, was quoted by Domei as declaring that "a complete overhauling of education is necessary to pound into the people's heads the laws of humanity—the difference between right and wrong."

Subsequently the Japanese Ministry of Education announced that it had abolished the student mobilization bureau and reinstated the physical education bureau.

Ozaki Lashes at Japan's Diet

Ozaki, long critical of his country's aggression, also lashed out at the Diet itself as being far short of "Constitutional Government." He remarked that in his opinion " the atomic bomb was necessary to revert the people's existence to the path of righteousness. "

First Occupation Of Tokyo District To Begin Friday

Emperor Hirohito Attends Brief Session of Jap Diet

Yokohama, Sept. 4—(AP)—New landings today expanded the American occupation forces' powerful grip on the Tokyo area, and Gen. MacArthur, in a general order, gave his armies authority to requisition anything they need in Japan.

First occupation of Tokyo itself, scheduled for Friday, is to be outlined in detail at a meeting of the Japanese 1st army command with Lt.-Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, United States 8th army commander, at Yokohama Wednesday.

Gen. MacArthur instructed the Japanese to turn all existing prisoner of war camps over to the highest ranking officer interned in each, and gave him authority to demand of the Japanese whatever food and medical care is necessary for his camp.

The initial Tokyo occupation force will number only 3,350, said the Japanese government communique.

The communique said policemen would be detailed to maintain law and order in all areas of occupation; government organs and public organizations would continue to function as usual, and all negotiations between Allied forces and Japanese authorities would be conducted by Liaison officials.

Preceding the occupation of Tokyo, Gen. MacArthur's troops were to half-encircle the capital with new landings today, while 120 miles southwest naval forces landed at Hamamatsu and other landings were being made at Takusu, port city of Kyushu Island, 600 miles southwest of Tokyo, and at Kanoya airfield, also on Kyushu.

Hamamatsu was shelled by the British and American fleets July 300. Kanoya airfield was the base from which the Japanese launched their heavy, costly Kamikaze suicide raids against Okinawa.

Led by minesweepers, two destroyers and six small troopships steamed without incident to Kagoshima Bay to land their forces at Takusu's beaches.

By nightfall, nearly 100,000 American troops were scheduled to be on Japanese soils—with four times that many due to be landed during the month for a total of 500,000.

Imperial Diet Meets.

Meanwhile, the Imperial diet held its first session under foreign surveillance. Emperor Hirohito attended the brief meeting in the House of Peers. He was away from the Imperial Palace only from 10:40 a.m. (9:40 p.m. E. D. T. Monday) until 11:15 a.m. There was no immediate mention of what occurred.

Correspondents were to be permitted to attend tomorrow's Diet meeting after Gen. MacArthur's headquarters uphold their protest against being searched at the door. Unsigned, unaddressed invitations delivered at the public relations office by Japanese said the correspondents would be searched and could neither drink nor smoke during the meetings.

Gen. MacArthur abolished all these restrictions.

The Japanese communiques, which have been announcing occupation schedules ahead of Gen. MacArthur's headquarters (but presumably with his permission) reported 15,460 occupation troops would enter a number of points in the Kanagawa and Shixuoka prefectures—west and south of Tokyo—preceding occupation of the capital.

Cities Listed.

It listed the cities to be occupied as Hiratsuka and Osio, 6,500 troops; Odawara, 2,250; Gotemba, 720; Hatano, 1,020; Uendhara, 1,020, and 3,350 in Hachioji City, the metropolitan district of Japan.

Hiratsuka, Oiso and Odaward all are on Sagami Bay.

Radio Tokyo also reported 20,000 occupation troops were landing today at the Tachikawa army air base, northwest of Tokyo, They will set up headquarters at Tokyo University of Commerce at nearby Yabo village and will extend their occupancy into other towns in the area.

As a precautionary measure, the broadcast said, Tachikawa police will establish "questioning posts" at several points to prevent "any untoward incident."

Japan Learns Cost of Losing.

Japan began to learn the cost of losing a war on Monday, one day after her plenipotentiaries at Emperor Hirohito's order signed the articles of surrender on the battleship Missouri.

Four army teams began plowing through records, questioning liberated war prisoners and compiling a list of Japanese war criminals to be held responsible for brutality in the internment camps.

The navy issued instructions to its occupation forces to deal "with a firm hand," declaring "the Japanese will not be allowed to forget they are defeated and are paying the penalty for their aggression and treachery."

The volcanic Bonin Islands, which had guarded the southeastern approaches to Japan's shores for decades, passed into American hands yesterday and the guardian Ryukyus on the southwest will soon follow.

Reds in Firm Control.

The Russians were in firm control of southern Sakhalin and the Kuriles, the buffer islands that once shielded Japan on the north.

Gone were more islands in the Carolines—Truk, the Palaus, fortified by stealth and in violation of international agreement giving Japan a mandate over them after the First Great War.

Often-bombed Pagaon Androta in the Marianas north of Guam surrendered Sunday.

Domei reported that Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, who signed the surrender for Japan, has conferred at length with Gen. MacArthur in the Supreme Allied Commander's headquarters here.

Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, conqueror of Singapore, surrendered his last 40,000 troops in the Philippines to Lt.-Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright yesterday and then was locked up in new Bilibid prison.

Tremendous Show.

The Japanese armies in China will capitulate formally at the old capital of Nanking Thursday.

A tremendous show of Allied military power was spread over and around the Japanese dignitaries as they signed the formal surrender aboard the Missouri Sunday.

Shigemitsu was the first to sign, and Gen. Yoshi Jiro Umezu added his signature for the Imperial Staff.

The 20-minute ceremony began with the slow, clear words of Gen. MacArthur, "We are gathered here, representatives of the major warring powers, to conclude a solemn agreement . . ."

MacArthur signed first. Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser signed for the United Kingdom and Col. Moore Cosgrave, military attache to the high commissioner to Australia, signed for Canada.

SAYSINFORMATION GIVEN TO ENEMY WAS MISLEADING

Martin Testifies He Agreed to Work as Informer to Help Allies

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Farnborough, Hampshire. England, Sept. 4 (CP Cable) — Pte. E. B. Martin, of Riverside, Ont., a member of the Essex Scottish Regiment of Windsor, who is on trial facing two charges of aiding the enemy while a prisoner of war, testified before a Canadian general court martial today that any information he had given the Germans was incorrect and misleading.

Pte. Martin, testifying in his own defence, was described by two witnesses yesterday as a member of the "big six" in the German-controlled, anti-Russian British free corps. Martin told the court he had agreed to work as an informer to try and find out the names of the Englishmen who were alleged to be helping the Germans and to gather any information that would be of use to the Allies.

"I tried to get into Sgt. Schappes' confidence so I could do some damage," he said, referring to his association with one ficer.
German non - commissioned officer.

Martin denied that he had disclosed to the guards the location of a radio set concealed at a camp used by Allied prisoners.

"I went to the camp in plain clothes with underofficer Huckel and changed into uniform before going in," he said. "I believe that the radio's location was revealed by an English prisoner of war or one of the guards found it himself. I believe that taking me to the camp was a trap to find out if I was really working for the Germans.

Enemy Had Information.

"I gave information to the Germans about small arms equipment used at Dieppe and about tank landing craft, because I knew they already had it and by that means I gained the Germans' confidence with the aim of doing real damage."

Martin said he also gave the Germans information about the two-pounder anti-tank guns because these guns were in tanks left at Dieppe.

"They asked me about the six-pounder guns and I told them I didn't know anything about them."

He denied evidence given yesterday by a witness for the prosecution that at a working camp he argued with sailors about motor torpedo boats in the hope of gaining information about these boats for the Germans.

Martin said he had never seen a motor torpedo boat.

This completed the defence's case on the first charge—that of aiding the Germans by acting as an informer, using information obtained from fellow prisoners. Defence counsel Lt.-Col. F. E. D. Wallace, of Brantford, Ont., then began to question the accused about his alleged association with the British free corps, on which the second charge against him was based.

Accepted $500

Martin said when he first heard of the Legion of St. George, as the corps was originally known, he was told three brigades already had been formed. He testified he told the Germans he was interested in the corps and would like to go to a recruiting camp to see what is was all about.

He said: "At that time I thought I could possibly find the names of the men in the corps or at least who the officers were and find out if they were working as a pro-British or pro-German unit."

Trio Sought in Bank Holdups Used Chalet Near Chicoutimi

Chicoutimi, Que., Sept. 4—(CP)—A trio who had been sought by police of two provinces in connection with half a dozen bank holdups in Ontario were using a summer villa near here as a hideout and the one woman in the group is expecting a baby, police revealed today.

This Lake St. John district now is being scoured for 22-year-old Ulysse Lauzon and his 20-year-old wife, Eileen, following discovery of the hideout after Joseph Peltier, 19, was seriously wounded after attempting to cash stolen bonds in a Montreal bank last week. The stolen car in which police found $20,000 in stolen bonds after the shooting of Peltier was the one which the trio used in this district, police said.

Neighbors of the three, who used a summer villa at Laferriere, 12 miles from here, said that Mrs. Lauzon could not have been in Montreal at the time Peltier was shot because "the excitement would have been too much for her" in her pregnant condition.

Probable Movements Reconstructed

Police here gave this reconstruction of the probable movements of the trio during the last few weeks:

After Lauzon and Peltier broke out of jail at Kitchener, Ont., they made their way to Chicoutimi with Eileen Lauzon and rented a summer chalet at St. Felix D'Otis nearby. They later bought the house at Laferriere in the name of James Waler Donnelly.

The house was occupied by the trio for several weeks, during which time two other men and another girl also resided there.

Lauzon and Peltier went to Montreal last week to attempt to cash some tolen bonds, using the automobile which they had been driving while in this district. When Peltier was shot, Lauzon abandoned the car—and $20,00 in bonds—and made his way back to the Laferriere house.

The Lauzons spent Friday night at a Chicoutimi hotel, and were reported to have spent Saturday night at nearby St. Simeon. They have not been reported since. Police said they believed the other trio who stayed with them were probably residents of this area and added they were attempting to link a recent burglary in Chicoutimi with the wanted persons.

Storekeepers in this district said the Lauzons and Peltier always had "plenty of large bills" with them when shopping here. A furniture store reported they had bought $500 worth of furniture for their camp at Laferriere and paid cash for it.

Phantom Voice Bewilders Police Radio Announcer

Philadelphia, Sept. 4 (AP) — The phantom voice of the police radio is really giving Philadelphia police the jitters.

A shrill, treble voice, warbling popular tunes over the same radio system that normally gives forth with calls to patrol cars, has been giving unscheduled concerts for two days.

The police radio's customary baritone announcer was in the midst of a call when the serenade began yesterday. Apparently flustered, the announcer stopped speaking as the singer—generally believed to be female—started in on "It Had To Be You."

Recovering his composure, the announcer retaliated by sounding a siren call that precedes all police messages and then went on: "Car 179, go to east . . ."

The message and "It Had To Be You" merged into a series of unintelligible noises. When the static cleared, the announcer was silent, but undaunted, the phantom voice continued.

Hiroshima, World's First Target Of Atomic Bomb, Simply Wilderness

By VERN HAUGLAND

Hiroshima, Japan, Sept. 4—(CP)—Street cars rattle along the streets where not a single building stands. A few deadpan civilians walk slowly through the rubble.

Block after block contains only a tin covering of rusting tin, a few stones and some broken bricks. The twisted frames of less than a dozen buildings stand forlornly alone in the midst of ruin that was once touted as Japan's most modernized city.

That was the Hiroshima I saw today with the first Allied post-war visitors to the world's first target of the atomic bomb.

We landed in a bomber at the 2,000-foot Kure airstrip and drove in cars provided by the Japanese for the 12 miles to Hiroshima.

For its size, no city in the world was so completely wiped out by bombs as was this war-swollen metropolis of 400,000, whose heart was smashed completely by a single application of atomic power. The buildings, once the most modern of the Japanese Empire, were simply smashed—not split apart as from an ordinary demolition raid—but levelled over the ground.

By contrast, Bremen, Hamburg and Berlin seem almost untouched. All that remains of the once impressive local palace of the Emperor is a three-foot pile of concrete very faintly resembling the base of a building.

Of the few recognizable pieces of buildings still standing, only one remains of possible service. In it Hiroshima's banks have set up counters.

Residents Hate Americans.

The Japanese newspapermen who had visited the city shortly after the levelling told me the residents of Hiroshima "hate you and think you the most fiendish, cruel people on earth."

Hirokuni Dadai, chief of the police prefecture, told us we might be attacked, but we were not. Pedestrians and cyclists stared blankly but docilely as our party wandered for two hours through the ruins. Photographing and staring in awe at the damage done by a single bomb.

There are no stores whatever in the downtown area.

News Withheld.

The news of the bombing was withheld at first from the people of Japan, the newspapermen told us, because the destruction was so great it was feared much criticism would arise from the lack of protection.

The Japanese 2nd army headquarters was wiped out and a number of generals were killed.

Dadai, who was the first to telephone the news of the atomic bombing to Tokyo Aug. 6 and then assisted in aiding the wounded, said "we expect the death toll to pass 80,000."

The death toll now has mounted past 53,000, with many only slightly wounded dying from no apparent cause.

BRITISH FLEET ENTERS HARBOR AT SINGAPORE

First Time in More Than 3½ Years British Units Have Been in Bay

Kandy, Ceylon, Sept. 4 (CP)—British warships rode at anchor in the harbor of Singapore today for the first time in more than 3 1-2 years, and word was expected here momentarily that occupation forces had landed to take over the once mighty naval base from the surrendering Japanese.

Triumphant entry of the British vessels was announced last night by the southeast Asia command, which said that landing forces would go ashore as soon as preliminary arrangements had been completed.

Leading the squadron into the bay was the cruiser H.M.S. Cleopatra, flying the flag of Admiral Sir Arthur Power, commander of the East Indies fleet. She was accompanied by light fleet units, including a flotilla of minesweepers which had been engaged in clearing Malacca Strait and the approaches to Singapore.

Additional naval vessels, including the cruiser Sussex, are expected to arrive in Singapore today under Rear Admiral C. S. Holland, who has been named commander of the naval occupying force. The commander of the army occupying force also is aboard the Sussex.

Herman Trelle, Wheat King Shot, Police Seek Slayer

San Oernardina, Calif., Sept. 4—(CP) — Herman Trelle, five times world "wheat king," is dead here of gunshot wounds. Police are searching for John Gilberti, "disgruntled" former employee of the one-time peace river grain-grower, who, Trelle told them while waiting death, fired the fatal shotgun blast. Trelle died Sunday.

The 50-year-old wheat-grower made the name of Wembley, Alta., known wherever grain is talked about. A decade ago his own name was one to conjure with wherever grain is grown. From 1926 to 1936 he won the World Wheat Crown five time at Chicago's international grain and hay show, a record achieved by only one other man, Seager Wheeler of Rosthern, Sask.

His hard red spring wheat, tested crossed and improved by him from a strain developed at the Ottawa Experimental Farm, was widely sought for seed purposes. He was the only man ever to win a "double" at the Chicago show, taking both wheat and oats awards in 1926, when he was only 31, and again 10 years later.

Trelle, who was born of German-American ancestry in Idaho, came to Canada and enlisted and obtained his commission during the First Great War in the Royal Air Force, but did not get overseas.

After studying engineering at the University of Alberta, he went farming.

Trelle also joined the army for the Second World War, serving in Ottawa. Later he joined the Canadian Pacific Railway's inspection department and worked in the Ogden shops at Calgary. He retired and went to California last June.

DACHAU CAMP NOW BEING USED TO HOUSE NAZIS

Transformation Since Taken Over by Allies Would Curl Hitler's Forelock

(By RICHARD KASISCHKE)

Dachau, Sept. 4 (AP) — The Dachau concentration camp, revisited four months after its liberation, presents a transformation that would curl Hitler's forelock.

This oldest of Nazi concentration camps—in the United States occupation zone—has been made a symbol of just expiation for Nazi crimes. Prisoners—those who survived—are out now and their guards are in, penned inside the very barracks and barbed wire enclosures they once guarded.

The place does not even smell of death any more. There are no crematoriums, the only human bones visible are those kept on exhibition for tourists, who come by scores daily.

Dachau now is prisoner of war enclosure No. 29. Smack in the centre are three courts in which all war crimes in this area are being tried.

The camp has a population of 18,495, composed of 10,000 S.S. men, some 300 former S.S. officers, 8,000 Hungarian prisoners of war and a number of war criminals and war criminal suspects. Two trainloads more of Wehrmacht prisoners from other camps trudged through gates as I was leaving.

Entering the main gate the tourist picks up a visitor's pass at the dispatcher's booth, and draws a guide from a staff of former camp inmates. I drew a Pole who had been confined five years and whose cheek bore a livid scar.

HITLER DEPUTY REPORTED HELD

Story However is Unconfirmed — Broadcast by Bormann Reported by Stockholm

With the British Forces in Germany, Sept. 4 (AP)—Mystery deepened Sunday concerning the whereabouts of Martin Bormann, Adolf Hitler's chief deputy in the Nazi Party, whom the Soviet-controlled Berlin radio Friday night reported "in Allied hands."

The broadcast, Berlin reported Saturday, was based upon a despatch from the Allied press service in London. The despatch said the publication of Bormann's name in an official list of Nazis to be tried at Nurnberg as war criminals confirmed that he "also had been arrested."

Twenty-four hours later, no Government or military spokesman had made public any information establishing that the stocky, square-jowled Nazi was in custody.

Authorities at Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters speculated that if Bormann is not dead, or not living in disguise in the Russian zone, he may be hiding among the drab masses of former SS men herded by the Allies into numerous prison camps, hoping for an opportunity later to escape.

Meanwhile the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet published an unattributed report that Bormann was heard in a broadcast Friday from a secret German radio.

Prisoners Forced to Sell Clothes, Even Gold Teeth, to Obtain Food

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Samshuipo Camp, Kowloon, China, Sept. 4 (CP Cable)— I spent several hours at this camp on the outskirts of Kowloon last Friday, where Canadian prisoners have been since the British and Canadian garrison at Hong Kong capitulated on Christmas Day, 1941.

To begin to tell the story of what has happened here since 1941 would take weeks and to get the individual stories of the prisoners now liberated —though still living in the camp because of the accommodation facilities and central feeding organization —would take months.

When I entered a little hut which was used as Canadian headquarters, I was greeted by Lt. Col. William James Home of Quebec City, who is commander of Canadian personnel here. He looked well but was anxious to get word to his relatives, as are all of the men here. Col. Home has a file containing the nominal role of 369 other ranks now in the camp as well as many other records, including a file of Japanese propaganda leaflets. He had difficulty in keeping records, for the Japanese usually seized such documents.

Col. Home introduced me to Lt.-Col. Jack Price of Quebec City and Lt. Frank Power, also of Quebec. Both were thin, but looked well. Lt. Power said he was naturally thin.

Many of the men sold clothes for food, which was worth fantastic sums in occupation yen, and then made such articles as sandals to sell. They also sold blankets, which were sorely needed during the cold weather, for food. Some even parted with their gold teeth.

The prisoners said they were always starved for news, though old newspapers sometimes came with the parcels from the Red Cross, to which they said they will ever be grateful. They were constantly bombarded with Japanese propaganda.

GRANTED DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Sept. 4 —(AP)—Actress Rochelle Hudson was granted a divorce from Lt. Cmdr. Harold E. M. Thompson, former screen writer now in the navy. She testified, she had returned to their Balboa, Calif., home from her film studio to find evidences of parties during her absence and impressions of lipstick other than her own. They were married in 1939.

STORAGE BUILDING DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire completely destroyed a laste paper storage building owned by J. Spiegel, on Station Street on Monday afternoon.

The fire, the origin of which is unknown is believed to have started from a pile of ten tons of cotton recently purchased by Spiegel in Trenton, which was piled outside against the side of the building. Inside the building was a quantity of waste paper, rags and old rubber tires, which was destroyed.

City Fire Department apparatus rushed to the scene and laid six lines of hose in a successful attempt to save the residence of John Shannon a nearby structure. Firemen also saved a large barn owned by Spiegel which like the Shannon house received a bad scorching.

The department had a call to the rear of the Goodman store Front Street this morning where a pile of rubbish became ignited. The blaze was extinguished before any damage was done to the building.

Formal Surrender Signed by Japan, Ceremony Solemn

Rigid Formality Marked As War Officially Ends

U.S.S. Missouri, Tokyo Bay, Sept. 4 —(AP)— Japan surrendered formally and unconditionally to the Allies Sunday in a 20-minute ceremony which ended just as the sun burst through low-hanging clouds as a shining symbol to a ravaged world now done with war.

The solemn ceremony marking the first defeat in Japan's 2,600-year-old history, took place aboard this battleship with 12 signatures which required only a few minutes to affix to the articles of surrender.

Over the battleship flew the American flag that fluttered from Washington's Capitol on the day of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941. Also displayed aboard was the flag which Commodore Perry unfurled in Japan 92 years ago.

Surrounded by British warships and under the eyes of the American and British commanders they so ruthlessly defeated in the Philippines and Malaya, the Japanese representatives quietly made the marks on paper which ended the bloody Pacific conflict.

The Japanese delegation faced a table upon which lay two large copies of the articles of surrender, the Allies' copy bound in green, the Japanese bound in black-symbolic of the mournful day for Japan.

Pacific War Officially Ended.

That horrible war, which had entered its eighth year in China and had raged for nearly three years and nine months for the United States and Great Britain, was finally and officially at an end with complete victory for the Allies.

There are rigid formality throughout. The Japanese stood aloof with no show of emotion during the proceedings. They had been the last to board the battleship.

With the Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, were Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu, who signed as Chief of the Imperial Staff, and nine other Japanese.

The signatories of the Allied Nations had assembled earlier in the cabin of Admiral Halsey and filed out in order of their rank, led by Admiral Nimitz who signed for the United States.

Gen. MacArthur strode to a small table covered with green felt placed on the starboard side of the great No. 2 turret of three 16-inch guns pointed toward the overcast skies.

Silence fell over the crowd of dignitaries as MacArthur at 8.58 a.m. (7:58 p.m. E.D.T. Saturday) began with dramatic emphasis:

"We are gathered here, representatives of the major warring powers to conclude a solemn agreement—"

Shigemitsu Signs For Japan.

On behalf of Emperor Hirohito Foreign Minister Shigemitsu signed first for Japan. He doffed his top hat and firmly affixed his signature to the surrender document, a paper about 12 by 18 inches.

Shigemitsu carefully signed the American copy first, then affixed his name to a duplicate copy to be retained by Japan.

Following him, Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu, of the Japanese Imperial General Staff, scrawled his name on the documents as if in a tremendous hurry.

A Japanese Colonel present was seen to wipe tears from his eyes as the General signed. All the Japanese looked tense and weary.

Gen. MacArthur was next to sign, as Supreme Allied Commander, on behalf of all the victorious Allied powers.

Gen. MacArthur immediately called for Lieut. Gen. Arthur Percival, British commander forced to surrendered to the Japanese at Singapore in February, 1942, and Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, the American forced to give up to the Japs at Corregidor in May, 1942, to step forward.

These two defeated Allied commanders, now savoring their hour of triumph, stepped up, and Gen. Wainwright helped Gen. MacArthur take his seat.

Gen. MacArthur signed the documents with six pens. His hand shook slightly as he reached "Don" in his first signature.

The first pen he handed to Gen. Wainwright, the second to Gen. Percival.

The third was an ordinary shipboard Navy issue pen.

He used another pen and then completed his signature with his own favorite red pen. One of the surrender pens will be sent to West Point and one to the National Museum at Washington but disposition of the sixth pen was not disclosed.

Generals Wainwright and Percival, both obviously happy, saluted snappily.

They were followed by Admiral Nimitz, who signed on behalf of the United States.

Others Signed in Order.

Gen. Hsu Yung-chang for China:

Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser for the United Kingdom:

Lt.-Gen. Derevyanko for Russia:

Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey for Australia:

Col. Moore Cosgrave for Canada:

Gen. Jacques Le Clerc for France:

Admiral D. E. L. Helfrich for the Netherlands:

Michigan Farmer Raising Hundreds of Wild Buffalo; Big Demand for the Meat

Wide interest is shown in the attempt at raising wild buffalo by a Michigan farmer. An article on the experiment by Byron W. Dalrymple, which appeared in "This Week" Magazine, is reproduced here:

On a cattle farm in southern Michigan a couple of hundred wild buffaloes are at home on the range. They got there because a 36-year-old farmer named Ed. Butters saw a way to do something about the meat shortage and tackled it with American ingenuity.

Two years ago he was worrying about the scarcity of meat—wondering what he could do to open up a new source of supply. That's when he decided to raise buffalo.

Today Ed Butters is in the buffalo business in a big way. He's trying to build his herd to 500 head, so that he can supply the market with 100 animals a year. And it all started with a "crazy" idea.

One November night in 1943, Mrs. Butters read aloud from a magazine article about buffaloes. Midway, Ed jumped up. "That's it! Buffaloes will be different, and we'll raise 'em for meat."

Mrs. Butters laughed, and didn't take him seriously.

Started with 21 Animals.

Once he'd made up his mind, he wrote to the Department of the Interior, to zoos, professors, and everyone who might know anything about buffaloes. Then he located a small herd of 21 to start with. And he whisked about the country looking for more buffalo—or bison, as they are correctly called.

On his trips he talked with hotel food buyers, trying to create a market for buffalo meat. Some were interested, but timid. Others sneered at the very suggestion.

"I had to find a man daring enough to try something new," he says.

In New York Ed managed to win the ear of Lucius Boomer fo the Waldorf-Astoria. As a result, buffalo meat headlined the menu of Mr. Boomer's Christmas Party of planked steak. And it was a sensation.

Overnight, voices of eastern gourmets were praising a pioneer commonplace. Ed was interviewed, guest-starred by radio, tempted by fat contracts for exclusive supply.

Friendly as a puppy socially, Butters proved as sharp as a bull buffalo's horn in a business deal. With markets lined up, he had to find more animals. He located a surplus government herd of buffalo, asked the banks for loans to bid on it. Interesting idea, said the banks. But their money belonged to solid citizens who weren't in the habit of taking financial potshots at wild animals.

Couldn't Borrow from Neighbors

Back home in Coldwater, Ed tried to borrow money. Staid citizens shook their heads.

"Ed," they'd say, "you're crazy."

He wasted no further time on skeptics. Instead, he mortgaged everything he owned, laid plans for outsmarting competitors in bidding for the government herd.

At last, Butters headed for the Indian Agency Office at Pine Ridge Reservation, South Dakota—1,000 miles from home. His bid was successful. He was the owner of a herd of 250 buffaloes—scattered 50 miles from the nearest settlement.

People laughed. "You've never shot a gun. Now you're trying to be a buffalo hunter."

"I'll learn," Butters answered. "I'll butcher some. And I'll bring the rest out alive."

"How are you going to get 'em out?" they jeered. "Nearest railroad's at Merriman, Nebraska."

Ed had an answer. "I don't know. But I'll figure it out." And he did.

Perhaps you read in the "Saturday Evening Post" how Ed and his helpers coralled the shaggy-headed monsters. How he and the native Indians on his payroll bucked a savage spring gale and evil tempers of the animals to finish the roundup, butchering 75, and corralling the rest.

With two carloads of buffalo meat riding the rails to New York. Ed had a moment to take stock of his new enterprise. In the East the meat would retail up to $1.25 a pound. Nothing to worry about—except that his financial shoestring was about to break.

"Mortgages behind me," he says, grinning, "the government closing in, workmen to pay, Mrs. Butters and the other three children back home in Michigan ..! The meat check had to come through — or I'd be bankrupt before an Indian rider could bring me the news."

The check came through. Seventy-five butchered animals had saved him. Ed paused just long enough for a smoke, then dived into the job of live-shipping the rest. He's raised them like stock on his Michigan farm.

'Among the 175-odd buffaloes Ed loaded was a little woolly, four-months-old calf. It nuzzled close to its 1,500 pound mama, When the eight cars were almost loaded, the young fellow balked. He refused to go along — and mama wouldn't go without him.

Tipped Mama on Board.

When they got the calf on board, mama refused to budge. chain over her head, tipped her Finally, they gingerly dropped a on end into the car—and the train was off.

After their 1,000-mile trip, the buffaloes were put into a temporary corral.

Meantime, the word got around. Hundreds of people began to swarm out to the farm. Traffic was snarled, roads jammed. When the herd shied away, the crowd followed. Ed recognized the danger of a stampede, patrolled the corral constantly.

Even when welders finished a tough steel fence to hold the animals, Ed's troubles continued. Crowds never let up. Neighbors demanded to be paid for helping to direct traffic. Others charged curious strangers for directions! In exasperation, Ed put up signs announcing that exhibitions would be held each Sunday. And now, as each Sunday rolls around, he mounts a saddle horse and herds his animals up where visitors may view them.

"Almost every time, several animals charge me," Butters says. He had intended to dehorn the herd, but he has not yet "worked up the nerve."

In addition to the crowds of curious visitors, there are stacks of mail every day. Some are legitimate business letters, others are honest inquiries. One man stated that he expected a small calf to be shipped on receipt of his letter, price no object.

Growing Feed Takes Time.

Ed and his wife attempt, evenings, to answer all the correspondence. They feel they owe it to interested people. But by sundown Butters isn't in a letter-writing mood. "What people forget," he says, "is that buffaloes have to eat. I've got several hundred acres under cultivation now, growing feed for them."

These are just a few of the responsibilities of a growing business. And it's still growing. In the past few weeks some 35 to 40 calves have been born. "I don't have an accurate count," Ed saying, grinning. "Can't find anybody to go in and count 'em for me!"

Butters has to work constantly at business contracts. Recently he sold a whole animal for a banquet in Detroit. Butters attended in person, rubbed elbows with big businessmen like Henry Ford II.

To supply his New York market, he does all the butchering himself. He has also learned to turn his animals into profits as by-products. He contacted taxidermy firms, learned that mounted buffalo heads bring high prices. So do robes. Buffalo tongue is a gourmet's dream .. it's black and can't be faked.

Butters is making arrangements now to have some of his buffalo meat canned for overseas shipment. A supply will also be kept at his farm to sell to visitors.

Altogether, Ed has turned his "wild idea" into a profitable reality. But he's getting restless again. He has another venture in the works. And it's a tough one, he says. He can't talk about it yet, but it's something absolutely new and different.

Mrs. Butters isn't laughing this time.

Accountant Tells How He Shot Peltier in Bank

Montreal, Sept. 4 (CP) — Hatton Langshaw, 55-year-old bank accountant who seriously wounded a man yesterday who was sought by police of two provinces in connection with half a dozen bank holdups, said afterwards it was the man's uneasiness under routine questioning which first made him suspicious.

Recounting events leading up to the shooting of 19-year-old Joseph Peltier in the St. Catherine and St. Matthew Street Branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in uptown Montreal, Langshaw said that "I asked a few questions as a mere technicality and seeing his uneasiness in answering them I thought maybe there was something fishy about the whole thing."

Langshaw, for 10 years an accountant with the bank, related how he had checked numbers of the bonds with a list of stolen bonds that was in his cage and saw that some of them were in agreement.

"I asked him to wait for me for a moment while I was going to see the manager, H. P. Hickson," he said. "I asked Mr. Hickson to call the police immediately. Apparently the young man sensed the trick because when I went back he insisted on taking the bonds. I did everything possible to keep him there but he started to walk away from the counter.

"He walked backwards, looking at the manager's office door. I was watching his every move, trying to fix his features in my memory.

Suddenly, for a reason I still don't understand, I saw him draw a revolver from his pocket and aim it at me.

"In circumstances like that, reflexes are fast. My life was in danger. Under the counter there was a revolver. I seized it and fired. The bandit turned around and dropped to the floor with a bullet in the back; the police were arriving and they took charge from there."

Playing safe with TEXTILES

The supply of textiles is not adequate to the demand.

For six years, most of the world output has gone to war.

Victory has not improved the situation.

There will not be enough textiles in Canada for many months to come.

HERE ARE SOME OF THE REASONS

Canada depends largely on other sources for raw materials and for some yarns and fabrics.

A serious manpower shortage still confronts the textile industry of all Allied countries.

Shortages overseas must be met. It will take months before production is resumed in Europe.

Substantial quantities of all kinds of textiles are still required by occupational forces.

Domestic demand for textiles increased sharply during the war. It is still going up..

Civilian clothing needs of returning servicemen and women are swelling the demand here at home.

CONSERVATION IS THE KEYNOTE

This year, production directives have again been issued to the textiles industry.

They are intended to divert output to more essential goods.

But directives alone cannot cure a situation arising from world conditions.

The answer lies in conservation. More than ever, the need is to conserve, to take care of what there is, to mend, make-over and make-do.

TO PROVIDE CANADIAN WOMEN with guidance and practical assistance in maintaining the family wardrobe, the Board has prepared a series of advertisements, to assist Canadian women. The Japanese Surrender

Japanese treachery has brought its penalty, the official surrender documents have been signed, she loses her stolen empire, China is vindicated by victory after aggression begun against her by Japan fifty-one years ago, Japan's representatives have had to come to appointments ordered by General MacArthur who is acting for the nations which have been at war with the Japanese Empire.

What must have been suggestive to the Japanese is that the men who had to struggle against the treacherous outbreak of war in December 1941 and who fought against great odds were on the scene of the great signing. They, the leaders of the law-abiding nations, have been vindicated by victory. Allied discipline over the islands that are left to the Nipponese will be strict. The former enemy have been warned that they must live up to the conditions of surrender.

General MacArthur in his remarks at the ceremony of signing pointed out that the powers he represented were the majority of the people of the earth and that "it is not for us here to meet in a spirit of mistrust, malice or hatred. But rather it is for us, both victors and vanquished, to risc to that higher dignity which alone benefits the sacred purposes we are about to serve committing all our peoples unreservedly to faithful compliance with the undertakings they are here formally to assume. It is my earnest hope and indeed the hope of all mankind that from this solemn occasion a better world shall emerge out of the blood and carnage of the past—a world founded upon faith and understanding—a world dedicated to the dignity of man and the fulfilment of his most cherished wish—for freedom, tolerance and justice."

The General added "let us pray that peace be now restored to the world and that God will preserve it always."

After the ceremony the General spoke of "the unnamed brave millions now homeward-bound to take up the challenge of that future which they did so much to salvage from the brink of disaster. . . . I thank a merciful God that He has given us the faith, the courage and the power from which to mould victory." The General was speaking to his fellow-countrymen.

President Truman pointed out "We shall not forget Pearl Harbor. The Japanese militarists will not forget the U.S.S. Missouri. The evil done by the Japanese warlords can never be repaired or forgotten. But their power to destroy and kill has been taken from them. Their armies and what is left of their navy are now impotent." The day of the signing he said was a day the United States would remember as a day of retribution as Americans remember the other day—the day of infamy of Japan.

The Allied Nations have known Japan from the tragic experience of the war and they realize the task that lies ahead requiring firmness and caution. They cannot forget the cruelties and sufferings that the Japanese inflicted upon prisoners of war. If ever nations fought a war nobly the United Nations have done so in this struggle against barbarism and savagery. They have won the victory and mean to maintain the peace which has come to the earth, so that no Japanese and no Germans will again have the opportunity to conspire and fight for the evil designs that these two Axis powers sought but failed in battle to achieve.

Pupils' War Years

As the boys and girls of elementary schools come back to their institutions of learning and training, they come, the great majority of them, for the first time in a world of peace. When Hitler on September 1st., 1939, threw his might against Poland, he started a war which has lasted six years from the time of the outbreak to the signing of the surrender of Japan. Many public school and separate school pupils were too young to attend school when Hitler threw the world into the greatest conflict in history.

In these six years that have since passed the boys and girls have become accustomed to conditions and events, differing greatly from those before the war and they are now attending classes in a day of peace which has been won for them and for the whole world by the brave youth of Canada and the rest of the United Nations. These six years will leave memories on these young boys and girls which they will never forget. They have seen history being made and they are prouder than they could otherwise have been because of the noble deeds of their countrymen, their fathers and elder brothers, or elder sisters in the women's services and the Allied servicemen. This war has more deeply impressed the young of today than any other war. They have seen a world saved from barbarism. Many of the boys who were attending secondary school in 1939 have been able to bear their share in the struggle.

These boys and girls who have been privileged to attend elementary and secondary schools in this era of struggle for righteousness and peace against the powers of evil as represented by Axis Powers realize the power of the spirit of right that has brought the vast majority of mankind to the armed side of righteousness and justice.

These pupils and scholars in their own way have been through the war and in them is the great hope of the world that what they have learned even in these their tender years will do much to maintain the world of the future on the basis of the just victory and peace which have come to the earth. They can see or will see the working in history of the principle of right as against wrong, and the importance of preparedness. Their school years have been years freighted with lessons which they will never forget.

After Six Years

Practically six years to the day when Germany, leader of the Axis, set out to dominate mankind, time sees her ally, the Japanese, signing their agreement of unconditional surrender and peace come to all mankind. The might that these two nations built up was the greatest threat that has ever been made against the civilization of the world. It was the most expansive war in all history, being more a world war than the struggle of 1914-18. It was much more bitterly contested and the Nazi Germans adopted a course of savagery while Japan likewise behaved with the utmost savagery as her treatment of prisoners of war has shown. There was no subterfuge and crime Germany and Japan did not employ or carry out to win if they could. They were in very truth associates with the very spirit of evil. But they failed before the loyalty of the peace-lovers of the earth.

Six years' time has demolished their grotesque and grandiose schemes of world power. Now they are under occupation.

So much does the loyalty of the free nations of the earth, the peace- loving peoples of the earth mean in the world! They have triumphed over armed might and the powers of darkness. The shield of the United Nations is untarnished.

It spells much for the security of the world that so great a majority of mankind has championed the cause of right and freedom. Such loyalty to freedom and love of native land is a pledge of the continued unity of purpose in loyalty to such principles and that pledge will save the world for peace and can prevent any possibility of recurrence of war.

All the might the enemies built up, all the evil they employed, failed. It took six years to do it. But there is peace, real peace now. The nations are determined that this peace will be maintained.

Many hundreds of barrage balloons, used in the defence of London and other cities in Britain, have been placed by the British Government at the disposal of industry. Raincoats, rubber aprons and various household goods are now being manufactured from the "demobilized elephants," which have been protecting vital targets from Nazi bombers.

FINAL VICTORY

What hostages for age provide?
  A chair for winter's blazing fire,
A few good books upon the side
  And little more will man require.
If but a friend or two remain,
  Youth's bygone triumphs to recall,
Then he can balance loss and gain,
  Discovering gladness through it all.

Time cuts the pressing needs in half
  And leaves the spirit glad to drift.
When man has found it good to laugh,
  To flare, his temper's not so swift.
When self's no longer first in thought,
  And others' welfare matters more,
Then peace of mind with love is bought
  And welcome waits at every door.

Of all the prizes man can win,
  A few last years of pride are best.
The fruits of labor gathered in,
  The sun declining in the west,
The home, where holidays are kept
  And all the family likes to be,
Despite the tears which must be wept,
  These are man's final victory.

CANADIANS

Hit With Clubs.

Three had been hit frequently with clubs and slapped on the face with an open Japanese hand. The men told of repeated cases of inhuman treatment, poor food, few Red Cross parcels, little mail, filthy camps in some of which "sanitation" was beyond description.

But even after passing through such an ordeal these Canadians were anxious to know how their comrades in arms in Europe had fared in the battle against Germany. Everything that happened there, however, was not entirely news, for they often bribed their Japanese guards with bits of clothing to learn the war news.

Liberated prisoners said a company of the Grenadiers had been deployed to positions on Kowloon on the Chinese mainland opposite Hong Kong while other Canadian soldiers elsewhere were equipped with rifles, Bren guns, Tommy-guns and some two or three in mortars, two or three borrowed carriers and an assortment of commandeered civilian trucks from a transport firm.

Moved in Dark.

When the Japanese were reported approaching positions on the Kowloon side Dec. 19, 1941, small patrols were sent out at two a.m. to establish contact and locate the enemy. Companies then were moved in the dark toward forward positions.

Fighting had started by daylight, the Japanese enjoying support from the air and heavy and small arms fire. It developed into almost hand-to-hand combat.

Eventually the Canadians had to withdraw and two days later were evacuated to Hong Kong proper, leaving a small rear-guard to cover their withdrawal. Most of the rear-guard was killed or taken prisoner but a few managed to swim across to the island.

Shot Japanese Down.

Once a sword-waving Japanese officer called on the rear-guard to surrender. The Canadians answered by shooting him down.

Meanwhile when the Japanese assault on the main island began, the enemy effected landings in great force under cover of a smoke screen.

Finally on Christmas day the enemy forced an entry into the city. They performed many inhuman acts and prisoners confirmed earlier reports that the Japanese had bayonetted patients in hospital beds.

The Kong Kong garrison made its last stand on Stanley peninsula while a handful held out in Hong Kong jail. They went without water for three days and had little ammunition left, but figured they could have held another two days, when the governor capitulated.

Some groups refused to lay down their arms and continued fighting till noon, Dec. 26, when a senior officer under Japanese escort, bearing a white flag, ordered them to cease fire.

The condition of the prisons at Hong Kong was considered better than those in Japan to which the majority of the Canadians subsequently were moved. They were transported in heavily-overcrowded ships below hatches.

Conditions Vary.

The majority of prisoners I visited today came from Niigata, Shinagawa and Omori. Conditions varied at the different camps. Niigata was called the hell-hole of Japan. Prisoners were forced to do heavy manual labor in the shipyards every day. Breakfast as a rule consisted of two boiled potatoes, lunch of stewed carrot tops and watery vegetables and soup. There was no break for supper which consisted of a handful of mixed red rice and barley. Prisoners were frequently kicked and slapped by civilian dock workers.

One of the sick men with whom I talked told me of how he had contracted tuberculosis sleeping on the floor. As a punishment he had been forced to stand at attention in the cold for three hours while a Japanese guard threw a bucket of cold water over him every half hour.

Collapsed a Lung.

He was later sent to a hospital camp where Japanese doctors experimented with his case. They collapsed one lung, but later allowed it to fill up again.

He was instructed by regimental authorities not to permit the Japanese to carry out further experiments, but said he was afraid not to submit to them.

He was required to work all the time he was in the hospital, cleaning urinals and toilets, and his weight dropped from 160 pounds to 108.

Six men from Winnipeg, whom I talked to, said the Grenadiers had killed 1,100 Japanese when a mass attack by the Japanese through a gap in the Canadian lines was repulsed by machine-gun fire.

How They Will Move Home.

Canadian prisoners of war will move homewards in three ways:

Those with lung trouble and unable to fly, as well as those who are seriously ill will remain aboard the hospital ship and sail to a United States port on their way home.

Those requiring only a few weeks of special feeding and care prior to travelling, will be sent to hospitals in the Marianas Islands.

All the remaining men will be sent by ship to the main reception camp at Manila for processing and to receive clothing before being shipped home. These men will return either by air or surface shipping.

On the basis of an ordinary private earning $1.50 a day and no trades pay such a man in the Hong Kong force would have approximately $2,050 in back pay coming to him, concluding that his pay was shut off with capture of the Hong Kong garrison on Christmas Day, 1941. For many of the Hong Kong force who were specialists drawing trades pay, in most cases an extra 50 cents a day, their back pay will be correspondingly higher.

In addition, members of the Hong Kong force will be eligible for all the governments discharge payments, such as one months' pay and allowances and a war service grauity of $15.00 for every 30 days' service overseas.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Tangier is back in the news again.

This city, port and district in northwestern Africa, occupying a strategic position just outside the Strait of Gibraltar, only about 30 miles southwest of Gibraltar, has long been a bone of international contention.

Lord Nelson said that Tangier would have to remain in the control of a neutral power or Britain would have to take it.

"Tangier," pronounced "tan-JEER," is the accepted English spelling of the name. A generation or two ago it was commonly spelled and pronounced "Tangiers," with a final "s," and that usage is still quite common.

"Tangier" is the French form and it has generally prevailed. There is a tendency among English-speaking peoples to add an "s" in spelling and pronunciation to French names that have no final "s." For instance, in English the French "Marseille" (ancient "Massilia") becomes "Marseilles."

The Spanish and German form of "Tangier" is "Tanger," and the natives call their city "Tanja." An ancient city near the site of modern Tangier was known to the Romans as "Tingis." The name is believed to be derived from Arabic "Tanja," literally "clay cooking vessel."

In English a native of Tangier is known as a "Tangerine," a term also applied to the mandarin orange, a small, oblate, yellowish-red Chinese orange with thin, easily detached rind, and dry, sweet pulp. The tangerine is the most important member of the so-called "kid-glove" group of oranges.

In some forgotten way a Virginia island in Chesapeake Bay near the Maryland line received the name Tangier. It was first settled in 1686 by John Crockett, who, with his eight sons and their families, came from the Virginia mainland. Even now virtually a third of the inhabitants of Tangier Island bear the surname Crockett.

PELTIER IMPROVED

Montreal, Sept. 4 (CP)—Condition of 19-year-old Joseph Peltier was described as improved by hospital authorities today, four days after he was shot in the back while attempting to cash stolen bonds at an uptown bank here.

Peltier was operated on for removal of the bullet and is expected to live but medical authorities believe he will be paralyzed from the waist down.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CAN YOU TAKE IT?

This is the menu for three meals submitted by a high school girls' physical education class:

Breakfast

Juice of half a lemon in hot water
Eight ounces orange juice
Large serving wheat germ cereal
One cup milk on cereal
One slice wholewheat toast
One-half pat butter
1½ slices bacon, dripped
Soft boiled egg
Half pint (8-oz.) whole milk.

Lunch

8-oz. glass tomato juice
8-oz. glass whole milk
1 wheat germ muffin
One-half pat butter
Large serving carrot and raisin salad on lettuce, with one tablespoonful mayonnaise
One-half cantaloupe

Dinner

Shrimp cocktail (6 medium shrimp)
Stuffed tomato salad with stalk of celery on lettuce, 1 tablespoonful mayonnaise
Beef liver and onions
Green steamed asparagus
One pat butter
One whole wheat roll
One pat butter
Stewed apricots
Half pint (8 oz.) whole milk
1 tablespoonful cod liver oil

These high school girls and their physical education teacher (I suppose the girls do not realize how lucky they are to receive physical education and especially to have such a fine teacher) estimate that the menu for the day provides the following:

Vitamin A, 51,000 units.
Vitamin B1 (thiamine), 8,731 units
Vitamin C 4,000 units
Vitamin D 2,000 units
Vitamin G, 4,600 units
Calcium, 2,900 mg.
Phosphorus, 3,600 mg.
Iron, 42 mg.
Calories 2,900.

These figures are well above the minimum daily requirements of the essential vitamins and minerals, according to the National Research Council's estimates.

Now arises the question whether an ordinary person can take it as it is given in the menu. I can't even begin to take it—that lemon juice in hot water would stop me. However, I may be unduly prejudiced against it — though I go for lemon meringue pie or for lemonade if there is enough sugar in it. I hope some of you readers will serve as guinie pigs—try the menu for a day and see whether you can take it. I'll settle for the breakfast, with these amendments: Either whole wheat toast or wheat cereal—never both bread and cereal; and a man-sized pot of coffee with sugar and cream in place of the lemon juice.

I believe I might stagger along somehow on the lunch as is. I could stay with you nearly all the way through the dinner, too—but goodness goshness, girls, how did that fish liver oil get in their? Don't tell me you like it on your apricots. If you don't mind I'll go out and take the air while you girls are sipping your fish oil. Don't you worry about me, now—I'll just nibble three or four of these pleasant tablets and get more vitamin D than you'll get from your essence of cod.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Unsanitary Housekeeping

Housekeeper throws the water she scrubs the floor with into the sink, washes out the sink with dish cloth, then washes vegetables in the sink to prepare them for meals. When I told her that might spread disease she laughed it off with the reply that we don't eat out of the sink, she has always thrown scrub water into the sink and nobody has taken any sickness. (J. E.)

Answer—Better way to dispose of scrub water is via bathroom closet drain. Of course thorough washing of sink with soap and water would make it perfectly safe to prepare food in or to eat from, in any circumstance. Soap and water is the most reliable disinfectant or antiseptic for that purpose.

Huge German Migration

(By Russell Hill, writing from Berlin, in New York Herald Tribune).

Over 12,000,000 Germans from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Silesia, East Prussia and eastern Pomerania have been forced to take to the roads since the end of hostilities in Europe, in one of the greatest mass migrations in history, and are flowing like a gigantic tidal wave into the Russian-occupied zone of Germany.

The figure was provided by the social welfare division of the Berlin magistrates. It sounds fantastically high, but an examination of pre-war census statistics for the evacuated areas shows that the figure is reasonable and possibly even conservative.

• •

The Poles have expelled all the German residents of all the territories east of the Oder and Niesse Rivers. This line, which may be the future international boundary, runs from the Baltic Sea through the cities of Stettin, Kuestrin, Frankfurt am Oder, Guben, Forst and Goerlitz to the Czechoslovak frontier.

Probably the most dramatic single operation has been the evacuation of the entire city of Breslau, with a pre-war population of over 600,000. The Poles want no minorities in what is to be their country, and they are being ruthless about getting the Germans out.

One may count that at least 2,000,000 Germans have come from pre-war Poland, including hundreds of thousands of "Volksdeutsche" (racial Germans) sent there to settle by Adolf Hitler from points as far separated as Estonia and Romania. Another 3,000,000 have come or are coming from the Sudetenland of Czechoslovakia, 4,500,000 from Silesia, 2,000,000 from East Prussia and 1,000,000 from eastern Pomerania. Thus the total of 12,000,000 is easily reached.

• •

German authorities here who have been co-operating with provincial government in attempting to deal with a situation which was bound to be chaotic say that practically all of the evacuees are already on the German side of the line but that only one-third of the number have been settled. Thus, some 8,000,000 are still jamming the roads or seeking temporary shelter in the cities or in the countryside.

Saxony alone, with a population of 5,000,000 has been swamped by the sudden addition of an estimated 5,000,000 refugees. An arrangement is being made whereby the government of Thuringia, where conditions are better will help out by sharing this burden.

• •

The evacuees are sent out by the provincial governments to small communities, which are responsible for giving them land and work. They are required to take women and children, as well as men. Some communities had accepted only able-bodied men and sent their families on farther.

In some places the big Junker estates are being split up and parceled out to the evacuees. Each farmer must sell a stipulated amount of his produce at fixed prices but can dispose of any surplus as he pleases.

• •

An effort is being made to single out the "Ost-Pioniere," who volunteered to settle on Polish farms in accordance with Hitler's policy of colonization beyond Germany's eastern borders. These people are put into special work battalions for rebuilding German cities.

Despite an order by Marshal Georgi K. Zukhov, Russian commander for Germany, forbidding evacuees to come to Berlin, between 20,000 and 30,000 pass thru' the capital every day. They are given medical examinations and put in some one of about sixty transit camps, many of which are former air-raid shelters.

They are given a liter (.04 of a quart) of soup and a hundred grams (about three and one-half ounces) of bread. In the morning they are sent out into the country. Sick people are put in hospitals and the very aged are kept in homes here.

In one camp, which holds about 2,000 people, there were twenty deaths in five days. From 2 to 4 per cent of those passing thru' required medical attention. In another camp those admitted during one day included 146 men, 350 women and 309 children. This ratio was described as typical.

• •

The net result of this shift of population is that the eastern frontier of Germany is being moved to a line running north and south about forty miles east of Berlin. Beyond this line there will be no Germans. West of the line there will be more Germans than the country can support.

Militarily, the line is more advantageous to Poland than the old frontier. The new one is short and straight, running from the Baltic Sea to the Sudeten Mountains. It would be more easily defensible for the Poles should Germany ever again be in a position to attempt an eastward expansion.

Advice for Court Witnesses

Being a witness on the stand, cross-examined by the opposing lawyer, seems like a terrible torture to most people. But it needn't be the ordeal you fear if you realize the lawyer is just as worried as you are and if you follow some rules worked out by the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation men who go through it often. How not to let the lawyer bully you and how to convince the jury is explained by Paul W. Kearney, an old-timer in the jury box, in Redbook Magazine for August:

"'Your witness.' At those two simple words, the heart of the hapless man in the witness chair climbs into his throat; his stomach begins to clap its walls together; his blood pressure soars. Now he's going to be cross-examined by the opposing attorney! This, to the average layman, is the ultimate in torture. He has doubtless seen many movies and read many mystery stories in which the unfortunate witness has been torn to shreds by a sharp, ruthless lawyer. As a consequence, the inexperienced witness approaches this crisis with his mind hitting on about three cylinders, ripe picking for any shrewd attorney.

"As a juror of long standing, I've seen this a hundred times. And each time I wish I could tell the quaking witness about a remark once made by one of the most famous lawyers in American history, Rufus Choate. He said: "I never sleep the night before a trial, worrying about what I failed to say."

"The best advice to any witness is: Tell the truth — frankly, deliberately and unequivocally. If you are in doubt about an answer, say so. If you don't know the answer, say so—there is no surer mark of the expert witness. If you are positive about what you have to say, say it positively — and then give the reasons which make you positive.

"Remember this when you are on the stand; a quick admission of what seems a damaging fact will hurt you far less than a futile effort to lie out of it. For if it is a fact, you're not going to be able to evade it.

"The trouble with most witnesses that I have observed from the jury box is that most of them are (1) so afraid that the cross-examiner will trip them up that they make it easy for him to do so because of their panic and their ignorance; or (2) are so glib and smart-alecky that they start right out to put the lawyer in his place—and invariably wind up behind the eight-ball; or (3) are so thoroughly dumb that they have to learn their testimony by rote and always repeat it verbatim, whether they are questioned by their own lawyer, cross-examined by the opposition or interrogated by the judge. Don't think for a minute that jurors don't notice such things—and don't forget that it's the jury, not the judge, that you've got to convince.

"Against the day when you may find yourself in this hot seat, here are some of the rules drilled into J. Edgar Hoover's FBI agents —who, incidentally, have become such crack witnesses that few attorneys now take the risk of cross-examining them:

"1. Make your statement truthful, straightforward, concise, but fully informative. Avoidance of unnecessary embellishments may relieve you of embarrassing cross-examination later.

2. Be positive and sincere, avoid any appearance of prejudice.

3. Avoid technical language when possible.

4. Remember your limitations as a witness of facts; confine your replies to matters of your own knowledge, not heresay.

5. Remain calm; a ruffled witness is at a great disadvantage.

6. Don't argue; your attorney will take care of apparently damaging points made by opposing counsel.

7. As an expert, never be afraid to say, "I don't know."

8. Don't give opinions, give facts.

9. Talk toward the jury, not the lawyer even if the latter resorts to the old trick of standing on the opposite side of the room.

10. Analyze each question before you answer it. Don't try to be fast with your answer. If you are too fast, the effect on the jury is bad—and it may be tough on you in cross-examination.

11. Never volunteer information; let your lawyer ask for it.

12. Never try to answer an ambiguous question; make the attorney clarify it, asking the judge for help if need be. And never let the cross-examiner misquote you; if he twists your answer to his own ends, stop him in his tracks.

13. Stop talking whenever either lawyer makes an objection —never try to ram something else in before the gavel falls.

14. Ask to see any paper the other attorney reads from, especially if he skims over parts.

15. If you have notes, have them in condensed form for quick reference. And never bring anything to the stand that you're not willing to have the opposing attorney see, because he has a legal right to examine it.

Five-Foot Trout Annoy Anglers

(By Ernie Hill, in Special Correspondence to the Chicago Daily News.)

Vexed native fishermen of Peru and Bolivia are dynamiting rainbow and speckled trout out of Lake Titicaca. They complain that the trout are getting too big and bothersome for the general welfare.

Their government, in collaboration with the United States, thought they had a great idea when they stocked Titicaca with trout five years ago.

The newcomers were supposed to tone up fishing in the big Andes lake of the two countries and improve the diet of the natives.

But up here more than two miles above sea level strange things happened to the fingerlings. Life was soft, the water cold and the lake big.

• •

So they kept growing when they should have stopped. Many trout three feet long have been caught. Five-footers have been seen.

The natives call them "devil fish" and blame them for most of the local misfortunes, including drought, storms and sickness in the family.

What's more, the 15,000 fishermen who work this tremendous body of navigable water claim that the trout have been eating up all the delectable little 'suche' fish. They have become so big and bold as to provide a threat against the small reed canoes used by the fishermen.

Several cases of dynamiting were reported to Moises Huerta, director of the Titicaca fish culture station. The natives, he said, were sore at the trout and would brook no compromise.

Huerta said that he had explained over and over again to prefer their "suches' 'and consider the trout a wild wolf hiding beneath scales and fins.

• • •

The trout, however, appear to have a head start on the dynamiting. They have increased in number tremendously during the past five years.

The fishermen shrug and say they didn't ask anyone to import the trout, that they were getting along all right until they were dumped into the lake.

"And just think," said Huerta, "fishermen in the U. S. drive hundreds of miles to catch 8-inch and 10-inch trout. It is almost more than I can stand."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

This Brave Mother Needs Help

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Recently I left my husband because he drank so much and when drunk knocked me unconscious several times and was very cruel too to my son. It was difficult for me to decide to leave him, but now that I have, I have started working and want so much to save all the money I can, so that my son and I can have a home of our own.

My problem is this: My grandmother, who is dead, has two wealthy brothers living in this city where I live. Not only have they always had a great deal of money, but since oil was discovered on their land, they have become millionaires. I do not know either of these great-uncles of mine, and I'm sure they don't even know that I or my son exist. I have heard that every year each of these men pays the board and tuition of several children in a boarding school here. I would like to write them and ask them to consider my child (who is 8 years old) since it has been their custom to send some children anyway. Do you think it would be proper for me to do this, Mrs. Beeckman?

I know that my husband will never help me financially as he has threatened to kill me if I ever ask him for money. It is so hard for me to meet all my son's and my expenses, for it costs so much more to live in town and work. If my son's school expenses were paid, I feel sure could save enough from my salary to feel secure in case of sickness and so forth.

If you approve of my doing this, would you please tell me how to word the letter to them? I don't want it to sound as though I were begging.

Undecided

Most enthusiastically I do approve of your writing this letter. By your bravery, by your courageous endurance, you have certainly earned the right to ask these relatives to consider giving to your young son the great privilege they give to other children. Since they are philanthropically inclined, they certainly should be philanthropically inclined to a little boy quite closely related to them, particularly a little boy to whom life has not been kind.

Your letter might be worded somewhat like this (addressed to one of the brothers):

"May I take the privilege of writing to you, introducing myself to you, and asking you for your kind consideration? Your sister, Mrs. ——, was my grandmother, my mother's mother. For a few years before her death, and since her death until lately, I lived with my husband and son in ——. Now because of my husband's excessive drinking, and his cruelty to us, I left him, moved here and am working to support my son and myself.

"My son is now eight years old, and naturally it is my earnest wish that he have the advantage of being educated. I have been told that every year you and your brother most generously give to several children a scholarship of tuition and board in the —— Boarding School. If this is your custom, I am wondering if you would be so kind as to consider my young son as a candidate for this great privilege and opportunity. I do not wish to ask for any special consideration of and for him, and of course will completely understand if my request is out of order or is inconsistent with the requirements of the applicants for the scholarships you bestow.

"Please know how deeply grateful my son and I will be for any consideration you will give this request and how entirely understanding I will be if granting it will not be possible.

"My cordial greeting to you and your brother, and my best wishes.

"Sincerely
"Mary Foster Breslin"

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

What Makes the Well-Dressed Woman.

Mannequins at the fashion show, girls who are successors to Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model, have a beauty code, that the candidate for chic should adopt. Their postures and gaits may vary yet they carry themselves with a certain elegance. They demonstrate the old bromide that it isn't altogether what you wear, but how you wear it.

The cash customers in the audience realize well enough that what looks well on the models may be a sour note to them. That is the wrong state of mind. They should give themselves a buildup. Any woman with a fairly good figure, of normal weight, can learn to dress well. She just hasn't educated herself. She may not know precisely what cut, colors and lines are her dress dish.

The simplest frock can make a lovely picture of a woman who has a well-developed dress sense; the most expensive gown has no meaning on a dowdy woman who carries herself badly. There has to be team work. Of course, good taste is the directing influence in the creation of style; without it all is lost. One must use the old head, keep the backbone tall, maintain the light step and the debonair air.

If you slouch or slink or have a jerky walk, if you put your clothes on crooked and do not pay any attention to whether your accessories are harmonious, you will not make the style grade. Put your clothes on neatly, look well harnessed. endeavor to assume a poised, confident attitude. Self-consciousness makes the body assume awkward attitudes; awkward poses throw even the loveliest gown completely out of form.

Through graceful posture the attire is given impartance. It assumes lines that are accented by the grace of the body. Wear your clothes as if you loved them and as if they were caressing you. They will bring out your good points, conceal the poor ones if you happen to have them.

Be fussy when selecting a foundation garment. Don't have any bumps or folds in your underclothing. Endeavor always to have smooth lines, especially at the bust and hips. No foundation garment can make a size forty woman look like thirty-four, but it can compress too abundant curves and improve the silhouette.

The usual under garb of the fashion model consists of a two-way stretch girdle, a pair of stockings, an uplift brassiere and a well cut petticoat slip. This statement may help you to understand why their figures are smooth and sleek. The choice of the girdle and brassiere is all important. The slip must fit neatly.

'The Rains Came' And Australia Rejoices

THE RAINS CAME . . . .
(W. S. Noble in the Melbourne Herald)

Across hundreds of thousands of square miles the rain that Southern Australia had been waiting for anxiously for months drummed down on the parched ground.

Perhaps the worst drought some parts of this country have ever known was ending.

This story of the breaking of the drought had a sweep to it, a touch of desperate urgency, an intensely human side that had been overlooked in the first news that at last the rain had come.

Like all good news stories, it involved people—men and women, and children—but it involved also the majestic processes of Nature that swept millions of tons of water out of their atmospheric track and poured them over the continent.

You can estimate how much rain it takes to break a drought like this when you realize that even to provide a fall of one inch over the State, Victoria needs more than 5,000,000,000 tons of water.

And this rain—inches of it in places—fell over an area many times the size of Victoria.

The meteorological forces that had a part in that titanic water-lift extended from the Indian Ocean to the lonely seas away to the south of New Zealand.

The Mallee farmer and his family, listening to the rain hammering down on the roof, did not worry much about meteorology. The rain meant something different to him.

• •

Here is how a man who has lived most of his life in the north-west and battled with droughts described what the rain means to the farmers:

"First of all, it means relief for the stock. Every farmer feels more for his animals in a drought than for himself.

"They flock outside the gate, looking for food, and he has nothing to give them. Now, the farmers know it is only a matter of days until there is some sort of a pick for the animals in the paddocks.

"Then it means the prospect of a good harvest. These people are born optimists—if they weren't they would have tossed it in long ago. And so they see in the rain possibilities that others not used to their country would never see.

"They have known good times in the past, and they are satisfied they will come again. That will mean a chance to get things round the home—perhaps a refrigerator when one can be bought, or a new motor car later on.

"One of the first worries of many will be to buy a cow, so that the family can have butter again and a bit of cream.

"There are perhaps 20,000 farmers who have been buying butter. When they can get their own cows again, not only will they be supplying themselves, but some will have a surplus to sell.

"Some of the younger children will wonder what has happened, for they have hardly ever seen water lying on the ground. They will get a lot of fun out of making slides in clay patches and coming home to mother with their clothes all covered with mud.

"For the older children at secondary school, it means relief from strain. It worries them to know that back at home father and mother do not know where to turn for money.

"But, though the rain means so much to these people, the wounds left by the drought will last for years. Many have lost all their stock. It will be years before some are in a financial position to replace them fully.

"Under ordinary conditions, it will take five years for most farmers to recover. With good prices they would do it in three."

That is the human side. On the national side the rain means a lot, too. Victoria has been close to disaster. The main water storages were nearly all empty, or pretty close to it.

• •

With the Winter nearly half gone, the reservoirs supplying the great Wimmera-Mallee stock and domestic system held practically no water. Without water from the channel, a lot of the 12,000 farmers depending on the system could not have held on.

Millions of head of stock have died. Without rain, millions more would have died in the next month or two, many are so reduced that heavy losses are inevitable.

At the end of March last year Victoria had 19,200,000 sheep. By March 31 this year, the total had fallen to 16,400,000. Since then, it is estimated, another 1,000,000 have died.

Estimates of the fall in sheep numbers over all Australia range from 15,000,000 to 25,000,000.

Across the Victorian wheat belt farmers whose crops have not yet been sown were waiting anxiously to get out with teams and tractors.

Australia needs that grain badly because, by the time the next harvest is due, we will have only one month's reserve of flour and about 6,000,000 bushels of wheat stored in Western Australia where it cannot be reached in time.

Last year's crop was almost a total failure. The one before it was only half a crop. Another failure this year would have driven many men from their holdings.

Even the rain that has fallen does not ensure a good harvest. More rain will be needed later to do that and to keep the grass growing.

The drought has brought with it its own grim lesson. A lot of the losses of stock could have been avoided had the supplies of fodder in the country been larger. Some of the reasons for that shortage, such as the lack of manpower, were directly the result of the war.

ADMIRAL BADGER'S FLAGSHIP ENTERS JAP NAVAL BASE

The U.S.S. San Diego, flagship of Rear Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commander of the first U. S. naval forces to enter Tokyo Bay, is shown pulling alongside a dock at the Yokasuka naval base as the occupation of the Japanese homeland formally got underway. The San Diego docked at the same spot where the Japanese battleship Nagato was hit by bombs during the last strike at the base by U. S. carrier planes.

Castle Where Churchill Can Fly His Flag

(By Eileen Ascroft in The London Daily Mail)

Winston Churchill has moved from Britain's Number One residence, 10 Downing Street, London, S.W.1, to a five-roomed flat.

This flat, near the Houses of Parliament, is his London home.

But one of England's most beautiful and historic castles is ready for him to move into at any time—as his official residence.

Walmer Castle, Deal, a grey stone fortress built in 1540 by Henry VIII as part of England's coastal defences, became Winston Churchill's home for life when he was appointed Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports by the King in 1940.

The custodian, who has been at Walmer nine years, tells me that the castle is all ready for Mr. and Mrs. Churchill to move in any time.

"Mr. Churchill has visited the castle only once, in 1941," the custodian says. "He drove up with Mrs. Churchill one day and stayed about three hourse. Since then there has not been a word from him."

Lord Willingdon, ex-Viceroy of India, who died at Walmer Castle during his term as Warden of the Cinque Ports, was the last tenant. Lady Willingdon had the lovely, spacious, curved rooms painted in French greys, lilacs, soft blues, and off-whites. They are still fresh.

The beautiful 50-acre grounds have been kept up all through the war, and the Churchill family when they move in will find a well-stocked vegetable garden, flourishing greenhouses, and fig trees, hundreds of years old, ripening their fruit in the sun.

• •

Mr. Churchill will probably occupy the bedroom where Queen Victoria stayed .. he may even sleep in her bed, which is still there.

The outer walls are curved, and the great, deep windows in the room look out over the Channel, which can be both calm and wild.

The walls are panelled, painted off-white, and fitted with book shelves. French windows open on to the ramparts where the Duke of Wellington used to pace.

The adjoining lilac bathroom has a plaque on the wall commemorating a meeting in the room, in its pre-bath days, between William Pitt and Lord Nelson in 1801.

The study, where Mr. Churchill may write his historic war memoirs, has one of the finest views in Kent .. over smooth, green lawns, and herbaceous borders, sweeping up to the wooded slopes of the countryside.

Little of the original military character of the castle remains. William Pitt and Earl Granville, while they were Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports, did much to turn the gaunt fortress into a comfortable dwelling house.

Earl Granville added a tower in 1863, bringing the stone from the ruins of Sandown Castle nearby. The walls are 30 feet thick at the base, tapering to 15 feet.

The castle is furnished with antiques belonging to William Pitt, the Duke of Wellington, and many other famous Lord Wardens. Exquisite paintings are still stored away in the vaults where they were placed to save them from bombs and shells.

• •

Many of the principal bedrooms bear the names of the famous men who occupied them .. the Duke of Wellington, William Pitt and Lord Sallisbury.

Before the war the Duke of Wellington's room was open to the public, preserved with its contents almost exactly as when the Duke occupied it.

It is an irregularly-shaped room on the south side of the castle and has a small annex.

Downstairs was a small one-room museum, where many of the Duke's belongings were displayed. These Wellington relics are heirlooms attached to the castle, and cannot be removed.

The bedroom includes the chair in which the Iron Duke died on September 14, 1852; his hard bedstead—only three feet wide — his washing utensils; his books, and the old camp chair that was with him on all his campaigns.

The great warrior's immortal remark: "When it is time to turn round it is time to turn out," is called to mind vividly by the sight of that narrow hard bedstead.

In Nelson's bedroom stands a mahogany chest of drawers, with the inscription: "Sacred to Nelson, Trafalgar," stamped on the escutcheon of each keyhole.

• •

The beautiful gardens were chiefly laid during Pitt's time, under the direction of Lady Hester Stanhope, his niece. Many trees and shrubs have been planted since by famous characters of their day.

An acacia planted by Queen Elizabeth, and a willow planted by the Duke of Wellington, raised from a sprig of a tree which grew over Napoleon's tomb in St. Helena, are in the grounds. Lord Clive, William Pitt, and James Fox also planted trees in the grounds.

Mr. Churchill will live at Welmer Castle as Chief of the Beaches. It is an ideal home for a traditional lover of the sea.

There has been a Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports ever since the days of the Saxons, when the five ports of Sandwich, Dover, Hythe, Romney and Hastings, were a vital feature of England's defence.

Winchelsea and Rye were added later to the warden's charge, but his title of the Cinque Ports has never been changed.

The Lord Warden has his own personal flag—blue and yellow, quartered with the arms of the Cinque Ports—and is entitled to wear admiral's uniform as Admiral of the Cinque Ports.

The flag had not flown over Walmer Castle since Lord Willingdon died in 1941, but local inhabitants keep an eye on the flagstaff these days.

They know that Winston Churchill is used to moving quickly, and it would not surprise them to wake up one morning and find the flag flying and their Lord Warden installed.

Well, Now There's This About a Jeep—

(By John Gould in Christian Science Monitor.)

Somebody who ought to know better has sent me all the information about the "Peacetime Jeep," a postwar adaptation of the army thing (and the word thing is used loosely) designed for everything from pulling teeth to doing needlepoint, and with the emphasis largely on its usefulness on a farm. Thus will the swords be beat to plowshares and the spears to pruning hooks, and somebody who is geared up to make jeeps probably anticipates a lively business.

I'm not so sure I want a jeep. Some of the boys who have had close contact with jeeps (and the word contact is used precisely) don't recommend them without reservation for much of anything except as a substitute for falling off a cliff, while others say they can almost stand up and talk and have been known to do many tasks beyond the belief of anybody with an open mind. One lad told me they weren't any better in snow than a wheelbarrow, and I can avouch that a wheelbarrow isn't any good at all. Another fellow said they would run up the side of a barn and pull a load of hay behind them, and that one had never been known to get stuck in the mud. The next day I saw a picture in the paper of a jeep stuck in the mud with a company of engineers standing around trying to rig a shears. So I don't know.

The pictures they sent me with all this information show a jeep doing a great many things. Anyone would assume, if he weren't acquainted with farm machinery, that the jeep, therefore, offers wonderful opportunities. Frankly, I have a farm tractor, designed, not for war but for agriculture, and it will do all the things the jeep is doing in these pictures, and cost me about one half as much as a jeep is going to. In addition, my tractor will do a number of things the jeep most certainly will not, such as pick up one corner of the henhouse while I renew the underpinning. The device on my tractor which thus lifts things will also operate a sweep-rake, shovel gravel, fill the manure spreader, and work a scoop. Furthermore, my tractor will do practically all tillage operations with no more exertion than the flip of my finger on a tiny lever, while a jeep simply hauls the implements around and a man has to lift or pull every time he sets his tools.

A jeep will probably come in handy if anyone has one, particularly when he wants to take the family to town, but on a farm I think it sounds like a poor second. One reason I think so is because the jeep is not exactly a stranger around here, and except for his name he was known long ago. He was called a doodle-bug. These doodle-bug tractors were made in great numbers by ingenious farmers who put several old automobiles tobether. They were, which a jeep is not, cheap.

We had one, and we did a lot of work with it. It was an old Model A Ford, about 1929 or '30, stripped down so Henry would have to look twice to name it. The rear end was cut off short, and a heavy Studebaker rear end was welded on, transmission and all. It thereupon has a gear shift at least anticipating the jeep, and while its power was exerted wholly on the rear wheels, it had power enough so we never needed any more. The Ford engine, in those days, was the same for both coupes and trucks, and by loading the back end with sandbags we had wallop and wumph enough to remove mountains. By jacking up one wheel and figuring out which gears to use, we could saw wood or thresh grain, and even belt onto a grindstone without danger.

Some of the boys who were handy with tools made better riggings than ours. They found great truck tires for the rear end to increase the drag on the ground, and one fellow built in a hydraulic lift and used it on a snowplow. Some had dual wheels on the rear. And then the mail-order houses came out with attachments so you could jack up an old engine, work a few hours, and drive off with a fairly good imitation of the better prewar tractors. You could put one of these together for anywhere from $10 to $75, and after you'd done a certain amount of work you could afford to junk it if something broke. If a gear played out on us, we used to jack her up, haul away the whole hind end, and put in another one. You could buy old rear ends at junk yards for five or six dollars.

Now these things were really pretty good, and in a way had nearly all the selling points of a jeep, but I remember how glad we were to get a real tractor, and how the neighbors all came and said they wished they had one, too. So I guess I'll wait until the evidence is all in before I make up my mind. On one point I'm already certain—the jeep will go 60 miles an hour, which is 50 mph faster than my tractor. I've yet to see the time I was in that much of a hurry.

Yankee Flag Hopes Still Hang In Balance as Crucial Series Opens Today With Detroit

Detroit Gains Full Game by Defeating Chicago White Sox Twice on Labor Day

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Opportunity is thundering on the Yankees' front door today as Detroit drags its two-game lead into the Bronx for a seven-tilt set with Joe McCarthy's revived contenders.

With the third baseball milestone, Labor Day, now a matter of record, the Tigers face the discouraging prospect of carrying their pennant drive into somebody else's back yards. Be it New York, Washington, St. Louis, Cleveland or some other enemy park, the Bengals' schedule calls for 28 more games and only four at home.

While Detroit tours the country, New York will be playing 26 contests in the friendly stadium where they have been able to look the part of a contending club.

Ever since Charley Keller rejoined the Yanks they have found the old spark, recovering from a dizzy nine-game losing slump to cop 15 of their last 20 and move within 4 1-2 lengths of the top. They're still fourth behind Washington and St. Louis, but they figure to be plenty tough at home.

Bridges Comes Through.

The Tigers picked up a full length yesterday by squeezing past Chicago twice by an identical 6-5 score. Tommy Bridges, making his first appearance since 1943 after his discharge from the army, received credit for the first game with the relief help of George Caster. Jim Tobin clinched the second with a two-run homer and an effective job of pitching.

Washington lost ground in its two-month chase of the leaders, by dropping the second of a holiday double to Boston, 8-4, under the spell of Vic Johnson after knocking out Dave (Boo) Ferriss in an 11-5 opening romp.

Charley Keller, Nick Etten and George Stirnweiss unloaded a barrage of extra base hits on Philadelphia as the Yanks swept two, 4-1 and 7-6 in 11 innings.

Difficult For Indians.

St. Louis whipped Cleveland's twice, 6-3 and 5-4 in 10 frames to further complicate the Tribe's difficult uphill struggle. Heading east for 19 games they trail by seven.

Chicago beat Cincinnati Reds for the 19th time in 20 starts, 7-2 and 7-1 before 43,161. Paul Derringer coasted home in the opener after Andy Pafko unloaded a grand slam homer.

Pittsburgh dropped St. Louis four full games behind the leading Cubs by handing the Cardinals a double dose of disappointment, 6-5 and 6-2.

New York Giants hit the 1,000,000 mark in home attendance for the first time when they knocked off the Phillies, 3-2 and 9-0, on a pair of neat pitching jobs by Harry Feldman and Sal Maglie.

A fist fight between Ed Stanky of the Dodgers and Dick Culler of the Braves enlivened proceedings at Ebbets Field where Brooklyn Dodgers took two from Boston, 4-0 and 4-3.

Surplus Sports Equipment Should Be Given Kids

Phil Marchildon, Canadian Hurler with A's, Believes it Would Help Baseball

By The Canadian Press

Sports equipment made surplus by the end of the war should be given youngsters to stimulate sports activity, Phil Marchildon, Philadelphia Athletics pitcher, said in an interview yesterday. It was the widespread sports program for the youth of the United States, did more towards furnishing the teamwork necessary to lick the Axis than any other single factor, said the former Penetanguishene hurler.

"It's a big job, but the payoff would be stupendous," he added.

"A happy, health, alert nation; a nation that would save money by being healthy; communities that would save money because they had fewer juvenile crime problems, fewer disgruntled servicemen."

Marchildon returned to the athletics 10 weeks ago after repatriation from a German prison camp. He was shot down over Kiel Bay in August 1942 while serving with the R. C. A. F.

France defeated Britain in an International Athletic contest at Paris Sunday by 73 points to 29. Sydney Wooderson of Britain, former mile world champion, broke the French record for the 1,500 metres by winning in 3.48:4 minutes. The former record of 3:49:2 was established by Jules Ladoumegue in 1930.

X-ray photographs at Detroit yesterday revealed that pitcher Hal Newhouser, Detroit's 21-game winner, suffered only a pulled muscle in Saturday's game with Cleveland and will not be a hospital case as expected. Newhouser said he probably would be ready to pitch Friday at New York.

FO. Mark Thompson, representing the Argonaut Rowing Club of Toronto, won both the junior and intermediate singles races in the 54th annual Middle Atlantic States regatta on Philadelphia's Schuylkill River Sunday.

Sir Van, owned by J. W. Brown of New Liskeard, Ont., won the 1945 futurity for three-year-old trotters at Toronto's Dufferin Park yesterday. Favorite in the stake, Sir Van ran second in the first heat, but won the second and third heats handily.

London Majors tied up the Ontario Baseball Association Senior playoffs last night when they won the second game of the series at Windsor 4-3 from Windsor Auto Wreckers. Windsor took the first game Saturday 5-1. The third game will be played at London Wednesday night.

"Here's another fellow who likes Grape-Nuts Flakes—he couldn't even wait to open the package!"

"Put it away, Doctor, you're making my mouth water for that malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut Grape-Nuts Flakes flavor!"

"But, my dear fellow—as you enjoy their delicious taste, you must never forget that Grape-Nuts Flakes supply such praise-worthy nourishment as carbohydrates for energy, proteins for muscle, phosphorus for teeth and bones, iron for the blood, and other food essentials."

"I know, I know—and it's because they're made of two grains—wheat and malted barley—instead of only one. Their special blending, baking and toasting is also important: it not only makes Grape-Nuts Flakes delicious to eat, but also remarkably easy to digest."

"Umm—is there a grocery store near here? I think I'll get one of those giant economy packages of Grape-Nuts Flakes, myself!"

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Speedy St. Louis' gang of junior baseballers snapped back into the form that carried them to the second slot in the City and District Baseball League over the holiday and handed their erstwhile Picton conquerors a 13-5 jolt at the Alemite Park that evened up matters in the first round of the junior O.B.A. playdowns.

The squads now stand at one victory each and the playoff tussle will take place on the Mountain View Air Station on Wednesday, 'tis reported.

The locals shed the sloppy play that characterized their performance in the Prince Edward County town the other day and delighted a large crowd of spectators with a fine display of the summer pastime. They retrieved their batting eyes from where they had parked them and manhandled the slants of two Picton hurlers with more or less reckless abandon. Sixteen base clouts cluttered the landscape as the men of St. Louis ran merrily along the basepaths. If they maintain the form that got them a very decisive nod on Saturday they should have little trouble in disposing of the Picton lads on Wednesday. But—you never can tell.

• • • •

Mountain View Bomberettes are the new city Ladies' Softball Champs by virtue of their sparkling win in the sudden death game held at the armouries last eventide. The tussle was a sudden death affair agreed upon by both managements due to the fact that a winner had to be declared by Wednesday in order to carry on the provincial playdowns. Mountain View will meet the smart Westclox team of Peterborough who won the ladies loop of that city in the first round series. The squads meet in the first game at Mountain View on Wednesday. The Bomberettes are worthy representatives of the city championship who came from the cellar position to go right through and win the title with the loss of one game only. Vicky Hillier, ace airgals hurler, and her mates developed into a smart aggregation and the team that eliminates them will know they have been in a ball game.

• • • •

The City and District Baseball League has been tossed askew again. The Roblin's squad claims it has two postponed games which were tied in the regular schedule to play and demand that the tussles be played to complete the schedule. Which is perfectly within their rights. By defeating Juniors and SWACOS the dairymen can get into a tie for a playoff slot. It only remains now for them to do that little thing. The games will be played this week according to Secretary Ernie Summers. The playoffs will also get under way some time during the next few days.

• • • •

Phil Loft's Point Anne softball champions took off for Napanee late this afternoon where they will play the pay-off tussle in the first round of the intermediate "B" softball playdowns with the Kingston Victorias. Both teams hold wins by decisive margins, and tonight's game which starts in "Gibbardville" at six p.m. should be productive of some good mushball. The winner will advance to the second round and will take on the winner of the Oshawa-Peterborough series.

Lend an ear to the pen of the Old Bambino (Babe Ruth) who columns a few thoughts anent kids and baseball. Here he is;—

"What about the kids and the future of baseball? The kids, mind you are the life blood of the game. And if the game does not come to the aid of the kids, baseball will strangle itself with its own hands. Today major league competition is a Class D standard. The majority of players who return from the service will be passe.

Comebacks for them is a rough assignment. The gap is big. Hank Greenberg is gamely trying to beat the rap and you can see from his batting average the going is tough—almost too tough. But gritty service guys like Hank should make it.

Night play, which I tagged as an out-and -out mockery of baseball in this same space last year, just about rubs out the kids for keeps. Sensible parents will put him to bed where he belongs but won't improve his baseball education. Meanwhile the owners are favoring fatter schedules under the arcs, which also makes CENTS. Occasional games under the lights, say, between 7 and 14 per season, is okay for the sake of novelty. If the owners play every night except Sunday—how are they going to replenish when the present crop of Class Ds run out?

Can be With the Kids

The reason I grabbed a chance to manage the Eastern teams in the Esquire all-American boys game is because I will be able to be with them for a week, seven days with a gang of kids. I plan to cram in as much teaching as I can. You'd be surprised how little some of them know about inside baseball. For example. At a baseball school in Florida some Springs ago I thought I had discovered another second baseman on the order of Charley Gehringer. That is, I did until I realized he didn't know he was supposed to cover second base.

The better ball players, equipment permitting, will continue to come from those cities in the South, Southwest and West where there is playing room. Go ahead, name the big leaguers of the past 10 years that were produced in the bigger cities. From New York, Philadelphia and Chicago? You can count 'em on your fingers. Well, let's see, there is—but I better not start dealing in personalities.

Personally, I think the big cities can find the space. Take New York. The city fathers may frown at this suggestion. But I'm saying it and I refuse to duck. Central Park may rate as a beauty spot. But I say—chop it up into baseball diamonds and playgrounds. As is, there is some ground allotted for this But not enough. The kids from a couple of Manhattan blocks could fill this if they allowed for the squeeze. Let's give 'em all a break.

What about the trees, lakes, promenades and statues? Well, what about 'em. I prefer beautiful kids to beautiful parks. I'd rather see kids developing healthy bodies on playgrounds than unhealthy heads and bodies off them. Cultural development is okay but exercise for the kids is first in my book. And incidentally, in case, (I say, in case) there's another war, those kids must fight it. Don't tell the old Babe it doesn't add up. He's had experience.

CATCHER AL LOPEZ EQUALS HARTNETT 20-YEAR RECORD

Pittsburgh Backstop Has Caught 1,793 Games in 17 Years in Big Leagues

By ELAINE KAHN

Pittsburgh, Sept. 4 — (AP) — Quiet, mild-mannered Alphonzo Lopez squatted behind the bat and caught his 1,793-rd game—thereby equalling the 20-year record set by Gabby Hartnett.

The Pittsburgh Pirate backstop, who tied the mark yesterday, telescoped his record into 17 big league seasons. Now 37, he figures he still has several years of good baseball in him and is likely to set a mark that will stand for quite a while.

He needs to play in only 21 more games this season to tie the mark set by Bill Dickey of the Yankees of catching 100 or more games in each of 13 seasons.

"I never bothered much with records," said the affable Senor. "If I did, I would have broken them long ago. One year I stopped at 90 games and another at 95."

Somehow the handsome Spaniard is rarely mentioned when great catchers are discussed, a neglect perhaps due to his biggest disappointment—he has never played with a pennant winner.

Pirate President Bill Benswanger feels this could have been corrected had Boston been willing to part with Lopez earlier.

"We tried to get him for 4 1-2 years," Benswanger said. "If we had, we would have won the pennant in 1938. Al is definitely one of the greatest catchers in the game."

Lopez finally came to Pittsburgh in 1940, after four years with the Braves. Prior to that he spent six seasons with Brooklyn.

Of the pitchers he has worked with Lopez lists Dazzy Vance as having the most ability, Van Mungo as the fastest and Deacon Danny McFayden as the smartest adding "but the greatest of all was Dizzy Dean."

Paul Waner, former Pirate outfielder, is his nomination as the game's most dangerous hitter. "He didn't have the power some of the other fellows had but he was a natural hitter."

New York, Sept. 4 — (AP) — Does anybody remember baseball's July 4 tradition? . . . Here it is past Labor Day and nobody knows for sure how those Major League pennant races will come out, what with the Tigers and Browns starting an eastern swing, where they may be waylaid by the Yanks and Senators within the next few days, and five Cubs-Cards tussles coming up later . . . Trainer Whitey Bimstein insists that Rocky Graziano eats only one meal a day—all day long . . . Bob Higgins, Penn State football coach, made a 20-yard hole-in-one the other day . . . POLLI SHATTERS 14-GAME WIN STREAK OF BEARS

Jersey City Hurler Pitches No-Hitter, His Third in Baseball Career

By the Associated Press

Crip Polli, of Jersey City Giants, shattered Newark's 14-game winning streak in the grand manner in the International League yesterday. He twirled a no-hitter.

The 42-year-old pitching veteran faced only 30 batters in whitewashing the second-place Bears, 11-0, in the first game of the holiday twin bill. Newark split the bargain bill by taking the nightcap, 4-1.

It was the third no-hitter of Polli's career. He previously had twirled one for Milwaukee against St. Paul in the American Association in 1933. His second game came in 1937 against Jersey City for Montreal.

First place Montreal split a doubleheader with Buffalo. The Royals took the opener, 4-3, while the Bisons pounded out an easy 10-3 triumph in the nightcap.

Toronto and Baltimore, the other two first division clubs, swept their twin bills with Rochester and Syracuse, respectively. Toronto tamed the Red Wings, 8-1 and 3-1 behind the pitching of Tom Ananicz and Luke Hamlin. Baltimore trimmed Syracuse 3-2 and 12-1. The Orioles' Frank Skaff hit his 37th homer in the opener.

Lisbon, Sept. 4 —(Reuters)— The Portuguese government plans to build a sports arena costing £80,000 at Braga, fourth largest city of Portugal, to celebrate the 20th anniversary next year of the military revolt which set up the present regime.

The arena will be called "The Stadium of May 28."

SGT. F. PARKER NS TENNIS TITLE AT N.Y.

Does Not Agree With Fans Who Consider Him Lucky to Win

New York, Sept. 4 —(AP)—Sgt. Frankie Parker, the first two-time United States Tennis champion since Don Budge turned professional, doesn't agree with the fans who consider him lucky to win.

After turning back the limping Bill Talbert 14-12, 6-1 6-2, yesterday to retain the title in a march that many thought would have been closer if it hadn't been for Bill's injured knee, Parker commented that he "got a bigger kick out of winning this time than last year."

The reason, he added, was that a good many people thought he was lucky to win in 1944 on his 13th attempt. He was classed as a wartime champion who won because the competition wasn't too strong. By repeating, Frankie figures he has earned the right to be called a real champion.

A good many of the 15,000 spectators who packed the ivy-clad West Side Tennis Club stadium for the finals, thought that luck definitely was on Frankie's side. Coming into the event without previous tournament tests this season, Parker reached the final test to find his opponent badly handicapped by a knee injury. Talbert had pulled a tendon in winning over Pancho Segura Sunday.

Under the circumstances, Talbert turned in a remarkable performance. Hitting forcefully from either side and even making his way to the net to put away a few points, Bill stretched out the opening set to nearly record length.

The day's most convincing performance, however, was turned in by the Women's Doubles champions, Louise Brought and Margaret Osborne, who won the title for the fourth year in succession by beating their perennial rivals, Pauline Betz and Doris Hart, 6-4, 6-4.

Talbert and Navy Lieut, Gardner Mulloy finished off a long match that was halted by darkness Sunday by defeating Bob Falkenburg and Jack Tuero, 12-10, 8-10, 12-10, 6-2.

Bill didn't stop there. He teamed with Miss Osborne to win the Mixed Doubles title for the third consecutive year, giving them permanent possession of the trophies.

LESSON NO 772
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The fumbling crimes of Elva Tymes are laughs for many gripers whose fingers, chums, would all be thumbs, if used for shuffling diapers.

Not all of us are good bridge players. Many are more adept at something else. So, you may not always get to the best final bid for your pair. Especially when you are in the slam department.

Let me tell you about this deal:

NORTH
♠A 6 4
♥Q 7 5 3
♦A 10 6
♣K Q 9

WEST
♠K J 10 8 7
♥8
♦K Q J 8
♣10 4 2

EAST
♠9
♥10 4
♦9 7 5 4 3 2
♣J 8 5 3

SOUTH
♠Q 5 3 2
♥A K J 9 6 2
♦None
♣A 7 6

The bidding went like this:

South	West	North	East
1 H	1 S	3 H	Pass
4 NT	Pass	6 D	Pass
6 H	Pass	Pass	Pass

That good looking hand in the south is no more than a one opening. It needs the help of three tricks to make a game. If partner has that many, he will make a bid of some kind.

The immediate one-jump assist by north was very welcome news. It showed a hand that contains heart support, at least five tricks, with at least two sure tricks among them.

With his own seven tricks, south knows a slam is quite safe in hearts. What he must find out is whether or not there is a good try for a grand slam. He must get a line on the aces and kings.

Four no-trump is the ace and king asking convention. Using The Kibitzer's convention replies, six diamonds is the signal for showing two aces and one king. South thus finds out that there are two kings in the hands of opponents.

With his void suit, one of the kings probably will not cause him any worry. But the other king is likely to. So, he decides on the sensible final contract of six hearts.

Now that he is there, his only worry is to make it.

Canadian Sport Snapshot

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 4— (CP) — Sport's most visionary revolt against front - office control faced first-round defeat frankly today, admitted the road to Utopia is hedged with ifs and ands, but avowed determination to continue co-operative club endeavor still is strong.

In their first progress report, Toronto Oakwood Indians of the Ontario Union announced football's share-the-wealth project will move from Oakwood stadium Wednesday and hold further practices in a public park or "any other place that is available."

"We're out on the street as of Wednesday," said a spokesman for the club which literally wants to give football back to the Indians. "But the boys want to stick together and if we can make the play-offs our worries should be over."

There is no attempt to sugar-coat loss of Oakwood stadium, Indian headquarters since the club's organization in 1941.

When Ontario's football underdogs decided this season to operate a club "by the players ers for the players," was taken for the players," it was taken ment would accept a 15-per-cent cut of gate receipts. But, say, Indians, Oakwood subsequently demanded as high as 35 per cent plus programs and other concessions.

Indians balked. Efforts to arrange another playing field before the O.R.F.U. season opens Sept. 15 were foredoomed to failure. The Indian player-executives finally succeeded in arranging a pooling of gates with Hamilton Wildcats and Toronto Balmy Beaches, but one of their moves—shifting of an Indian home game to Hamilton backfired when it was found Hamilton Tigers have reserved the field for that date.

Talks are to be held with officials of Maple Leaf stadium in the hope the ball park may be available after the baseball season, possibly late in September or early in October. Even Indians aren't counting on the possibility too heavily.

"It's just been one bad break after another," say the players who banded together in sport's first bigtime co-op.

Under the Indian plan two weeks ago, the players will have a deciding voice in club affairs and books will be open to inspection each Saturday. Name players committed to the enterprise include Coach Harry Sonshine and the Stukus brothers, Annis, Frank and Bill,

Hogan Defeats Nelson by Four Strokes in Tourney

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 4— (AP) — Golf's greatest show—the barnstorming professionals — moved west today featuring a rerun of Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan in the renewal of their prewar rivalry for the spots' top paychecks and plaudits.

The diminutive Hogan, just out of the army, reasserted himself as a threat to Nelson's fairway supremacy by winning the $13,333 Nashville Open yesterday over the tight Richland Club course. Hogan racked up a score of 265, just two strokes off the all-time tournament low, to hand Nelson one of his few setbacks of the year.

The Toledo shotmaker, winner of 16 of 21 major events in 1945, finished wobbly to record a 269 that gave him a tie with big Johnny Bulla of Atlanta for second money.

The pros move to Dallas for the $13,333 open, then to Tulsa and from there to the northwest.

Whereas the first half of the campaign has been all Nelson, the second half promises rougher sailing for the rhythmic swinger who has set records this year that may never be equalled.

Sidney Township Junior Farmers Win Championship

Sidney Township won the junior farmers' softball championship for Hastings County here last week when in playing postponed games with teams from other parts of the county they defeated North Hastings in the finals by a 15-13 score.

The games were originally scheduled for Tweed during the annual county field day but rain caused postponing of the game before the schedule was completed.

In the semi-final Fred Waite pitched the Sidney boys to a 11-7 win over Madoc township and repeated to eke out a close win over the North Hastings boys to win the championship.

Lineup for the victorious Sidney nine included O. Cole, F. Waite, G. Rogers, H. Kingston, C. Woods R. Sherey, R. Hall, D. Harder and B. Latta.

Battery for the Madoc nine which went down to defeat in the semi-finals against Sidney was Gordon Sager, pitching with Roy Rollins catching. North Hastings used two pitchers in the final, Barmen Shannick and Gordon Davis, while Trever Davis did the catching.

Fifteen Fatalities During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press.)

Fifteen fatalities were reported in eastern Canada over the long Labor Day holiday weekend. The figure of 10 killed in traffic accidents was considered low in view of the fact highways were congested with holiday traffic.

In a double slaying at St. Johns, Que., bodies of Leone Tougas, 45, school-teacher, and her 40-year-old sister, Marie Anne, a restaurant owner, were found in their apartment Saturday. Ovitda Samson, 53-year-old transient, will be arraigned at Montreal today on a charge of murder.

Prisoners Tell Stories of Starvation, Brutality, Torture in Jap Prison Camps

By SPENCER DAVIS

Yokohama, Sept. 4 (AP)—Prisoners freed from the hell-holes of Japan told their stories of starvation, brutality and torture directly today—and names of Japanese responsible were added steadily to a growing war-criminals list.

The United States navy simultaneously sent a hospital ship, four rescue destroyers to Hamamatsu, 120 miles southwest of Tokyo, to evacuate other hundreds of Allied prisoners. These ships earlier had helped evacuate approximately 1,500 from the Tokyo area.

Due this afternoon were 462 others being brought to Yokohama from the Ashio prison camp, and plans were rushed for release of 3,000 more at Nigata, a west coast port. In northern Honshu and northernmost Hokkaido an estimated 11,300 await liberation.

Eighty per cent of the 2,000 already examined here are in "serious" condition, medical officers said.

Carrier planes of the 3rd fleet search Japan for others, and spotted 60 excited prisoners waving wildly from a camp at Hikone village, 50 miles west of Nagoya.

Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, commanding the British Pacific fleet, also was checking lists of captured British subjects and reported approximately 39,100 Commonwealth internees in camps within his jurisdiction.

Officers of the General Headquarters War Crimes Branch listened with shocked gravity to stories of the prisoners they interviewed today aboard the hospital ship Benevolence.

Virtually all were suffering from extreme malnutrition and other complications—beriberi, dysentery, malaria, tuberculosis and various fevers. All had been beaten, and many had been denied medical attention until now.

Freed Canadians Have One Wish, To Get Home

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

Hong Kong, Sept. 4 — (CP) — Free at last after grim, weary months in Japanese prison camps, scores of Canadians taken when the Japanese overwhelmed this British crown colony Christmas Day, 1941 had one universal wish today—to get home quickly.

Remnants of the force of 1,985 men of the Winnipeg grenadiers, the Royal Rifles of Canada and a brigade headquarters that joined with Britons and Indians in battling the Japanese, they were freed last Thursday when landing parties from the Canadian anti-aircraft cruiser Prince Robert entered the prison camp at Shuion on Kowloon, peninsula, opposite Hong Kong.

The bulk of the prisoners, however, had been transferred from Hong Kong long ago. Four drafts totalling 1,084, were taken away —in January, August and December, 1943 and in April, 1944. In some cases the men were selected because they were able to walk across one of the camp roads while those who couldn't make it stayed behind. It was estimated about 300 were in the camps liberated in the Hong Kong area.

These men who stood with their Empire comrades against all the might that Nippon could hurl at the garrison paid highest tribute to Indian troops. Subjected to the most intense Japanese propaganda, the Indians generally remained staunchly loyal despite public executions and torture.

They told of poor treatment by the Japanese, of insufficient ration, lack of medical care.

Lieut. Doug. Osborne of Quebec listed the prisoners' main complaints in this order: poor rations, indifference to illness, lack of mail. Prisoners said medical supplies were adulterated by the Japanese and only 50 per cent effective.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 5

Even Folly smiled at this. Her stormy eyes had been searching his clean-cut honest features and she liked what they saw. He must be almost 30, not less than 28. Here was a man who looked as she had hoped Bruce Potter would the night they met in a blackout.

Marta, who took her position as head of the family seriously replied: "This is all of us. We lost our parents a good many years ago."

Hilton took a spoonful of Chan's delicious onion soup.

"I don't know what I've done to deserve it," he murmured with an appreciative glance at Hazel, blond and pink-cheeked. "But I've probably lived right."

"If you havent," Hazel murmured demurely, "you will from now on. With Chan to look after you."

Hazel, with her bands of fair hair, her serene gray eyes and tall, luscious figure was the one who attracted him most. Not only her appearance but her calmness and self-assurance. Yet each girl he admitted had a different appeal. Marta seemed the most feminine with her big, wistful eyes, her waxen skin and sweet, generous mouth.

But something was troubling Marta. She was not making any effort to interest him. Folly, he considered a lovely child with her flowerlike face, soft dark curls and sulky, gray green eyes. Of them all only Hazel was giving him her undivided attention. It seemed she knew something about metallurgy and was interested in it. Their conversation continued through the delightful dinner of avocado salad, roast chicken and feathery cocoanut cream pie.

Hilton Likes New Home

When it was finished Hilton said good night and withdrew contentedly to his room. Although he had planned to go out he decided now to sit by his own fireplace and savor to the full his new, comfortable quarters. Lighting a match he watched with pleasure as the flame of paper and kindling began to lick about the edges of the expertly piled logs.

Hilton filled his pipe with his favorite smoking mixture and sighed with relief. For the first time since he had left home he had a place he would like to come back to. Where a man could rest and be entirely undisturbed.

At that moment there was a light tap upon the inner door connecting with the corridor. Thinking it must be Chan, Hilton called cheerfully, "Come in."

But instead of the Chinese servant he saw the youngest of the three sisters, the one with the silly name.

"Oh, Mr. Wood!" Folly breathed, "I'm so sorry to disturb you but I wonder if I left one of my drawing books in here. This used to be my room. I mean I've been using it as a studio since grandpa died four years ago. I'm an artist you know."

Anyone less lovely could not have gotten by with it, Hilton told himself but she was as young and innocent as a rose bud just opening. In pale pink sweater and skirt with her dark curls tumbling about her neck and her eyes no longer sulky but staring with frank curiosity at his pipes and cans of tobacco, the small pile of books he had not bothered to put away yet, the dark blue dressing gown tossed carelessly across the old walnut bed, the photograph on the dresser.

"Oh, what a beautiful woman!" Folly cried "Is it your mother?"

Hilton nodded.

A Sophisticated Goodby

"I've one of my sister around here some place. She is just about your age. About seventeen."

"I'm almost twenty," she informed him.

"You don't look it," he replied mentally, "or act it."

Folly sank upon the familiar footstool with a little laugh.

"You know this still seems like my room. I guess I'm not used to giving it up yet," she explained but before she could say more Chan's slippers were heard shuffling down the hall.

"Your sister is calling you, Missee," he said as he reached the open door.

"Oh, bother," murmured Folly. Being sent for as if she were a child. Turning she gave Hilton what she hoped was an amused, sophisticated glance.

"Your book?" he said politely. "Do you see it?"

"No it must be among my papers, somewhere. Chan moved everything for me and I haven't straightened them out yet."

She glared at the old man but he stood his ground until she had left the room then he closed the door and followed her.

A Rebuke from Chan

"No business in Grandpa's room any more," he informed her.

"I was just looking for some of the things you've hidden," she retorted.

"Everything in sewing room tomorrow morning," he promised.

Folly smiled and went into Marta's room where the older girl sat knitting.

"Did you call me? Chan said you wanted me."

Marta shook her head.

"No but since you're here why don't you work on this baby sweater. The Red Cross needs everything they can get for the refugees that are coming over from Honolulu."

"Grandpa" Wood.

Folly took up the needles and soft wool. Better not tell Marta why Chan had made up that message.

"Well," she said, "what do you think of grandpa?"

Marta started.

"Do you mean Mr. Wood?"

"He's grandpa to me," Folly insisted. "Can you imagine him saying I remind him of his sister? A child of seventeen?"

Marta smiled but from then on the three girls in secret hilariously referred to their roomer as "Grandpa."

A Christmas unlike any they had ever known came and passed. No one was in a holiday spirit this year but an effort was made to recognize the day itself as an anniversary.

People said, "Merry Christmas" when they met on the street or talked over the telephone but their eyes were anxious, their expressions anything but merry.

Marta, free from the office, spent her evening as usual working in the control room of the Fourth Interceptor Command. Chan served dinner at five o'clock. He had cooked a turkey, filled with chestnut dressing and there was plum pudding blazing in a blue flame of brandy. Hilton had contributed flowers.

Folly Eyes Boarder

Bruce Potter, urged by Marta had brought a friend. But in spite of the delicious dinner the occasion had not been a happy one. Marta was smiling to conceal memories of former Christmas days. Hazel came for dinner but left again more absorbed than usual in the welfare of her patient.

"Her son is an officer at Pearl Harbor," Hazel explained. "She hasn't heard a word from him yet. I don't like leaving her even for my hours off."

As for Folly she had eyes for no one but the new boarder. Ignoring Bruce and the box of candy he had brought Folly talked over his head to Hilton who politely divided his attention among all the girls.

The truth was 'grandpa' as they called him, secretly was enjoying his position as the only masculine member of the menage served and managed by the old Chinese. Chan's loyalty now included the man in grandpa's rooms. Had he not selected him for this honor? Chan had kept his promise never to desert the family but he was happier to have another man in it.

Hilton's presence in the room with the separate entrance where he could come and go unnoticed, his pipes and tobacco and scattered newspapers and bath towels gave new meaning to Chan's life. This was the way it should be, Chan thought, picking up after him.

The three girls safely segregated on the third floor, Folly with her horrible feathered and flowered creations banished to the sewing room while a man sat before the blazing fire in grandpa's room or at the head of the table where Chan took care to seat him. Hilton's territory was now strictly tabu to the girls. Even Folly after her first visit had remained outside.

Folly in Flirtation

Nevertheless she did everything she could to lure Hilton into the drawing room after dinner. Her attempt to flirt with him amused the man who still considered her as younger than she really was. Hazel was the one he admired most and he planned to take her out some evening if she would go with him. Marta he could not understand. She seemed so forlorn and distant. Quite unconscious of him as a man. So far as Marta was concerned he really might have been grandpa although as yet Hilton had no idea that this was what the girls called him.

When dinner was over and Marta and Hazel had gone, Hilton went to his own room leaving the other three to amuse themselves. A fire was burning brightly in the drawing room fireplace and Folly sank into a chair wishing the two soldiers would go. She liked Bruce but she had never recovered from the disappointment she had felt the night of the black out.

He was so typical, Folly thought, of the soldiers who sought her out at Hospitality house. Nice, cleancut American boys eager for fun and lonely but without a particle of sophistication. Their line was always the same. How about a date? Where can I telephone you? Boy, can you dance?

Retreat to Dreams.

Folly smiled at them, flattered and joked with them, but none had made her heart skip a beat the way Bruce had that night in the darkness before she saw him. His hand warm and protecting, his voice intimate and concerned belonged to the ideal she had been seeking but Bruce had not lived up to them. She could not respond to his ardent pursuit after she had seen him. She had retreated into her dreams which were now being woven about Hilton Wood.

"How about going someplace for a little dancing?" Bruce asked now.

Folly said listlessly. "Not tonight. I'm too tired to dance. . . I think I'll go to bed early."

Bruce looked disappointed but he never seemed to realize that she was really trying to discourage him. An optimist if ever there was one he had complete confidence in his own ability to win her.

Health inspection day drew near,
When "Suds" and "Bubbles" would appear
Before the teacher, always keen
To see if hands and face were clean.

Clean, happy as a pair of larks
They both obtained the highest marks.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 4 (AP) — The stock market's upswing continued in spots today but exceptions were plentiful.

Volume tapered appreciably near the fourth hour and irregularity was the rule.

Higher by fractions most of the time were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, N.Y. Central, Pullman, Pepsi-Cola, Dupont, Sears Roebuck and Allied Chemical.

Lake Shore gained ⅜ at mid-day while other Canadian issues were unchanged.

Police Blotter

Assorted drunks, street arguments embellished with some fisticuffs, stolen cars and boys taking automobiles for joy rides gave city police a busy holiday week end.

Two gentlemen who had gazed on the wine when it was red attempted to stage a pugilistic argument near a Front Street hotel and landed up in the city cellblock. Another pair were celebrating near an industrial plant and nearby residents reported a break-in. The two inebriates were also brought in to cool their heels.

Minor disturbances occurred in various parts of the city and police were kept on the alert. Nothing of a serious nature occurred however.

Trenton police reported the theft of a cream colored 1935 Ford car, licence 2X875. Kingston police report the theft of two automobiles in that city, one a blue Plymouth sedan license number 61-K-79 and a 1934 black Ford, licence 20-X-43.

Stanley Edgley, 33 Murney Street reported to police that some light-fingered gent had quietly removed his fishing tackle from his verandah.

TRENTON

Trenton Police Had Busy Time Probing Crashes

Trenton, Sept. 4 — Five serious accidents occurred in Trenton and vicinity early Saturday morning, one west of the overhead bridge on No. 2 Highway in which two were injured; one at Twelve O'Clock Point, when a young lad was seriously injured, one on the 6 R.D. road off Highway No. 2 when a young man lost part of an arm; one at the north end of Front St. in town and one between Trenton and Stirling.

Sonny Hubbs, age 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hubbs, Shuter St., was severely injured at Twelve O'Clock Point about midnight Saturday when the door handle of a car was driven through his right leg. Hubbs, it was learned, had jumped on to the running board of a car which was hurriedly leaving the Point with another young chap who had been taken ill. As the car was backing up to make a turn, the driver was unaware that Hubbs had boarded the running board and without any warning he was pinned between the side of the car and a tree, the door handle piercing his leg.

Three Injured in Crash.

Shortly after one o'clock a car driven by Harold A. McDonald, R. R. 1, Frankford, while proceeding north on the Frankford road at the extreme end of the town of Trenton limits, received damages to the extent of $350 and the driver and two passengers were severely injured. It is alleged that another car was passing the McDonald vehicle at the time and cut-in crowding the McDonald car off the road. The driver is said to have lost control of the car and proceeded 150 feet to the west side of the road striking a Hydro pole.

The driver received severe chest injuries, while Geraldine Wallace of Frankford, a passenger, received severe abrasions of the face and a fractured nose and Marion McDonald, another passenger suffered a broken ankle.

Struck by Car.

Early Saturday morning Mrs. Cora E. Patrick, 101 George St., Trenton, was struck by a car owned and driven by Manley Noble, R. R. 6, Belleville. It is alleged, Mrs. Patrick stepped from behind a car which was proceeding east, at the corner of Front and Dundas Streets, directly into the path of Mr. Noble's car. The right front wheel of the car was reported to have passed over the woman's body, injuring her considerably. She was taken to the office of Dr. E. A. McQuade and later to the Belleville General Hospital.

About fifteen minutes later Dan Sharpe, 43 Leopold St., Trenton, fell over a tow chain which was linked between two cars on Dundas and Front Streets, injuring his wrist and head. He too was taken to the office of Dr. E. A. McQuade for treatment.

Trenton doctors were more than kept busy as on Saturday night there were three accidents within twenty minutes on Dundas St., in which two people were injured, though not seriously.

Traffic Extremely Heavy.

Traffic on Sunday and Monday was extremely heavy through town and on Monday afternoon about four o'clock cars and trucks were tied up for blocks when a load of hay on a truck owned by Ross Wellman of Trenton blocked the bridge. It is alleged the truck, undoubtedly overloaded, had just passed onto the bridge when a strong gust of wind struck the load blowing most of it from the truck. It was some time before the load could be replaced, though the driver worked feverishly, while horns of vehicles blocked on Dundas Street and both ends of the bridge honked loudly.

Busy Weekend.

Trenton police had an exceedingly busy weekend. In addition to work involved in the many motor accidents, they made twenty-two arrests between three o'clock Saturday afternoon and five o'clock Sunday morning.

In addition, a 1935 Ford roadster owned by Robert Haynton Cox, 46 Queen St., was stolen early Sunday morning. The car was recovered in the township of East York and John Mitchell, no address, was arrested by the township police. An officer from Trenton police force left Monday morning to bring him back to Trenton. It is alleged he is also wanted by the Toronto city police for car theft.

Thrown to Pavement.

Monday evening Alexander Zukowski, of 6 Academy St., St. Catharines, Ont., and a member of the St. Catharines' Motorcycle Club, while passing through Trenton on his motorcycle from Napanee to St. Catharines with eight other cyclists, hit the C.N.R. crossing on Dundas St. and lost control of his motorcycle and was thrown to the pavement. He received an injured right leg but after being given first aid at the Trenton police station was able to proceed on his journey.

BRITISH FLEET

Headquarters also disclosed that British marines were preparing to land on Penang Island, situated off the west coast of Malaya 375 miles northwest of Singapore. Formal arrangements for the surrender of Penang were completed Saturday aboard the battleship Nelson, headquarters said.

Royal Marines Assigned.

Arrangements similarly were completed for the surrender of the Japanese garrison at Sabangan off the northern tip of Sumatra, and Royal marines were assigned to occupy the island.

Singapore, one of the great outlying bastions of the British Empire, has been in Japanese hands since Feb. 15, 1942, when Gen. Sir Arthur Percival surrendered his garrison to the forces of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita.

Yesterday Gen. Percival — recently released from a Japanese prison camp—witnessed Yamashita's surrender to Lt.-Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright at Baguio, Luzon.

Directed to Meet British.

(A New Delhi broadcast recorded in London said Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Southeast Asia Commander, had directed the Japanese army and navy commanders at Singapore to meet Rear Admiral Holland aboard the Sussex today.

("The object of my order is to arrange for the landing of my troops without incident and for their orderly reception at Singapore," the order said. Admiral Mountbatten also directed, the broadcast declared, that by Wednesday "the total number of Japanese troops on Singapore Island and neighboring islands is to be reduced to the absolute minimum essential for preservation of law and order and essential services.")

No Great Surprise.

Arrival of the Canadian landing party from the Prince Albert was no great surprise to the men, for word had spread before arrival of the British force that a Canadian warship was with it. But when the party arrived the prisoners in their eagerness to greet their liberators, jumped aboard the running boards of automobiles the party had commandeered from the Japanese and painted with Canadian insignia.

When the landing parties stopped at the Samshuipo camp on their way from the naval dockyard, I went along with marines and seamen who occupied the area. I found Capt. Alex Prendergast, with whom I had had a telephone conversation previously and introduced myself.

First to greet the men from the Prince Robert at Shuion on Kowloon peninsula was Lieut. John Park of the Winnipeg Grenadiers. Kept in Hong Kong after the colony's fall, he later was transferred to Kowloon peninsula with other prisoners.

Men from all parts of Canada rushed up to greet their liberators. Among the excited prisoners was Frank Power of the Royal Rifles, son of Hon. Charles G. Power, former Canadian Minister of Defence for air, who asked first for his family. Like all others interviewed, he stressed the poor treatment given by the Japanese.

The men said the enemy had little regard for the prisoners' well-being and gave them only the roughest subsistence. Prisoners were allowed to receive only a portion of Red Cross parcels arriving, however, with what they got they were able to bribe guards to obtain fresh food from outside the camp.

"Thanks to you, Grandpa Kruschen . . .

MY LUMBAGO IS A THING OF THE PAST"

If you have suffered from lumbago, you'll understand why this man wants to pass on the good news as to how he found relief. He says:

"I had a bad attack of lumbago. When I got into bed I had to stay in one position—I could not move for pain. I was given the tip to try Kruschen and I am very grateful for it. For after taking a few doses I felt some relief: and after taking one large bottle I am glad to say that my lumbago has become a thing of the past. And there is no trace of it coming back."—E.A.V.

There are many instances in which the Kruschen saline treatment has brought happy relief . . . just as it did for Mr. E.A.V. So why not try Kruschen yourself? But be sure to take it faithfully for as long as needed and thereby give Kruschen a chance to overcome conditions in your body which have probably taken months . . . or even years, to develop. There is always a cause for lumbago and with many persons the pain can be traced to toxins or poisons in the system. Kruschen's action is to help your organs of elimination and thereby bring you relief. Kruschen Salts are procurable at all drug stores: 25c. and 75c.

Battle to Save Lives of Twins

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 4 —(AP) — The battle to save the lives of Louise and Macaila Miranda, Arizona's Siamese twins, went into the waiting stage today after doctors applied fiblin film to the dangerously exposed umbillicus—where death may strike at any time.

The film was applied last night after it arrived from Harvard medical school by plane. Dr. F. W. Edel declared all the medical men could do now was wait for the results in three or four days.

The film, a by-product of blood plasma, was applied to the underside of the umbillicus which conjoins the twins, in an effort to stimulate growth of a more protective covering. It is now covered only by a membrane which may herniate at any time, bringing death to the tiny girls, born six days ago in Coldwater, Ariz.

Firestone

THE ONLY SYNTHETIC TIRE Proved on the Speedway AT 100 MILES PER HOUR!

No need to wonder about synthetic tires standing up—not when you can buy Firestone DeLuxe Champions—the tires that were used on the famous speedway test supervised by officials of the American Automobile Association.

Imagine the punishment those tires took as Wilbur Shaw, the famous race driver, streaked over the 500-mile course to average 100.34 miles per hour . . . equal to 50,000 miles of ordinary driving. Not a skid or blowout occurred even when he stepped up to 135 miles on the straightaways! And the tires he used were Firestone tires taken from regular STOCK —the same as can be bought from any Firestone Dealer.

When you get your ration certificate to buy new tires be sure to insist on having speedway-proved Firestone DeLuxe Champions. In the meantime your nearby Firestone Dealer will do everything he can to help you make your present tires last. See him today.

FORMAL

The scene in Tokyo Bay was largely obscured by clouds which hung amid the surrounding hills.

The flags of the United States, Britain, Russia and China fluttered from the verandah deck of the Missouri. More than 100 high ranking military and naval officers of the Allies were in the colorfully-uniformed group watching the ceremony.

Gen. MacArthur, in his opening remarks, declared:

"It is my earnest hope and indeed the hope of all mankind that from this solemn occasion a better world shall emerge out of the blood and carnage of the past."

Finally, after New Zealand's signature, less than 20 minutes from the start of the ceremony, the sun broke through the clouds, and Gen. MacArthur formally and in a firm voice declared the proceedings closed. "Peace is now restored to the world," he said. "May God preserve it always."

The Japanese prepared to depart immediately, their bitter chore accomplished.

Gen. MacArthur informed the Japanese that "as Supreme Commander for the Allied powers I announce it my firm purpose in the tradition of the countries I represent to proceed in the discharge of my responsibilities with justice and tolerance, while taking all necessary disposition to insure that the terms of surrender are fully, promptly and faithfully complied with."

No Broadcasting Facilities.

All through this dramatic half hour, only those aboard the battleship knew of what was transpiring because the Missouri has no broadcasting facilities.

But recordings were rushed to the nearby communications ship Ancon, and the solemn words of Gen. MacArthur beginning the ceremony — "We are gathered here, representatives of the major warring powers"—were flashed around the world.

The hour for which all liberty-loving lands the world over had awaited for long and terrible years was at hand.

Yet at the hour of triumph, the world was sobered by the knowledge of the price which civilization paid to achieve this day, and that theme rang through the messages of America's commanders.

"Our first thought of course — thoughts of gratefulness and deep obligation go out to those of our loved ones who have been killed or maimed in this terrible war." President Truman told the world from a broadcasting room in the White House in Washington.

And there, where the Japanese warlords had once boasted they would dictate their own peace terms, Mr. Truman spoke these determined words:

"We shall not forget Pearl Harbor. The Japanese militarists will not forget the U.S.S. Missouri."

And, after he had proclaimed the peace "a victory of liberty over tyranny," the scene shifted back to this bay near Japan's ruined capital where Gen. MacArthur told his countrymen:

"Today the guns are silent. A great tragedy has ended. A great victory has been won."

Speaks For War Dead.

The Supreme Allied Commander said he spoke "for the thousands of silent lips, forever stilled among the jungles and beaches and in the silent waters of the Pacific which marked the way."

"As I looked back on the long, tortuous trail from those grim days of Bataan and Corregidor," he continued, "when an entire world lived in fear, when democracy was on the defensive everywhere, when modern civilization trembled in the balance, I thank a merciful God that he has given us the faith, the courage and the power from which to mould victory."

Possibly thinking of the atomic bomb that hastened Japan's decision to surrender, Gen. MacArthur declared that the war had become so utterly destructive that unless an equitable system of peace was devised "Armageddon will be at our door."

Admiral Nimitz, speaking next and praising all branches of the services and the Allies, declared that the United Nations must "enforce rigidly the peace terms that will be imposed upon Japan."

Out to Japanese field commanders went Emperor Hirohito's orders, issued after the articles were signed, commanding "all my people forthwith to cease hostilities, to lay down their arms and faithfully to carry out all provisions of the instrument of surrender."

By the signatures of his plenipotentiaries, the Emperor accepted the terms of the Potsdam declaration which called for the elimination "for all time" of those who led Japan to war and stern justice for war criminals.

Now Japan's sovereignty was limited to the will of the Allies, all her conquests were stripped away, and she was left completely disarmed.

Truk Surrenders

Guam, Sept. 4 (AP).—Truk in the Carolines, once the most powerful Japanese bastion east of Tokyo, surrendered Saturday, Vice-Admiral George D. Murray navy commander of the Marianas, accepted surrender of Japanese navy, army and civil officials aboard the light cruiser Portland.

Headquarters said the surrender was without incident. The Japanese representatives were not identified.

Preliminary arrangements had been made with Rear Admiral Michio Sumikawa, chief of staff of the Japanese 4th Fleet.

Truk was by-passed and isolated by invasion of the Marianas in June, 1944, and the Palaus in September.

The capitalization eliminates the strongest of Japan's by-passed strongholds. The garrison, whose condition was not mentioned in the announcement, is believed to number 50,000.

Selective Service Eases Controls On Help Advertising

Effective September 3rd, the Dept. of Labor, Ottawa, has removed certain advertising controls affecting employers, that have been in effect for about three years.

Any employer may now advertise for female or male help without consent of Selective Service, providing only that such employer file an order with his local Selective Service Office for such help, giving classification of help needed, hours of work per day and week and wages offered. These orders must be placed with Selective Service before advertising goes to press.

If necessary female help will be screened by Selective Service before referrals are made to assure the employer-advertiser he will be getting applicants with experience in his line of work.

In the case of advertising for male help the advertisement must carry a notation that applicants must apply to the nearest Employment and Selective Service Office. The advertisement must also show the Local Office of Selective Service file number or order number. The employer's name and address etc., and the rate of remuneration may be shown in the advertisement.

Persons seeking employment may also be granted permission to advertise freely.

With the cut backs on contracts for war materials groups of labour are becoming available for other peace time projects. Construction of housing units holds high priority and Employment Selective Offices will continue to refer help to high priority jobs in the national interest.

B.C. Police State Youth Confesses To the Killing

Victoria, Sept. 4 (CP)—Seventeen-year-old 210-pound Charles (Chuck) Kinney was scheduled to appear in Juvenile court today on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Phyllis Stroud, 18, whose body was found buried in a sawdust pile 12 days after she died by suffocation.

Chief Constable Jack McLellan of the Victoria police force said yesterday the youth had confessed to the killing, but the police chief did not disclose any further details.

It is expected the charge against Kinney will be removed to police court for preliminary hearings. If he is committed for trial the hearing will be in supreme court at the criminal assizes opening here Nov. 5.

Miss Stroud, a store clerk whose mother has been dead for 12 years, was first reported missing by her sister Doris, 24, on Aug. 6. Friends said she was last seen the evening of VJ-Day, Aug. 15, alighting from a bus near her home.

Twelve days later her body, clad only in silk panties, was found under the sawdust pile in the basement of her home. She had lived in an upper flat with her father Carroll Stroud, an uncle, Lawrence Stroud, a brother, Donald, and her sister. The Kinney youth lived alone in the lower flat.

An autopsy failed to reveal any signs of violence but showed the girl died from asphyxia due to strangulation or suffocation. A coroner's jury decided she had been murdered.

8,000 Persons Attend Napanee Motorcycle Races

Napanee, Sept. 4 (CP)—Close to 8,000 persons, largest crowd ever to attend a sports meet in Napanee, yesterday saw a program of international motorcycle races dedicated to remembrance of those who lost their lives in the war.

Jap Ingles of Calumet City, Ill., easily captured the three mile and five mile main events. Bill Matthews of Hamilton, Ont., was forced to withdraw due to engine trouble. Jim Chan of New Jersey placed second in each final. There were only six minor spills during the meet.

The crowd stood for one minute's silence in tribute to the war dead.

Ingles' time for the five miles was 5.27 and for the three miles was 3.15 4-5.

War Friendships Must Continue In Peacetime

Aboard H.M.S. Duke of York, Tokyo Bay, Sept. 4 —(Reuters)— Future world peace depends on friendships made and lessons the Allies learned while working together against the Axis, Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, Commander of the British Pacific Fleet, said Sunday.

In a statement thanking the navy for its contribution towards winning the war, Admiral Fraser said after signing the Japanese surrender document:

"On behalf of the British Government I have today joined in signing the terms of the Japanese surrender, which brings to its official close a war in which the British Empire has been actively engaged for six years.

Thanks for Loyalty.

"In my own fleet and in the fleet train which has done so much to support us we have representatives not only of the whole British Empire, but also of many of the Allied nations. To all of you I would like to say 'thank you' for your loyalty, your determination and your sacrifices.

"Let us not forget the friendships we have made and the lessons we have learned whilst working together, for on this strength and friendship in the years ahead rests the peace that all have so fully earned."

Admiral Fraser signed the Japanese surrender document on behalf of the United Kingdom aboard the American battleship Missouri after the American and Chinese representatives and just before the Russians.

Surgeon Lieut. George Gayman of the British destroyer Wagner was the senior Canadian naval officer present.

MAN FINED $15 FOR MISREPRESENTATION

Arthur Collier, Prince Edward County, pleaded guilty to misrepresenting himself as a police officer investigating the recent Windsor murders, was fined $15 and $16 costs by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court today.

Investigating Officer Sergeant Doug Ellis told the court that the accused had stopped two girls near a theatre and showed them a photograph stating that he was a police officer looking into the Windsor killings.

He was later seen doing the same thing to occupants of a car bearing a Quebec licence. No actual harm had been done and County Crown Attorney Donnan was of the opinion a fine would meet the ends of justice.

Several holiday drunks paid the conventional ten and costs while a second offence case was assessed $100 and costs.

INDIAN TROOPS LAND AT PORT OF SINGAPORE

Japanese Apparently Violated Surrender Terms by Setting Fire To Oil Tank Farm

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

Singapore, Sept. 5 — (AP) — Indian troops landed at Singapore today and began occupation of this one-time bastion of the British Empire which was surrendered to the Japanese Feb. 15, 1942.

The 2nd battalion of the 1st Punjabi Regiment made the initial landing from light craft at the main wharf.

The Japanese, in apparent violation of the surrender terms, had set fire to the oil tank farm at Fort Dickson. A huge column of smoke was observed there yesterday from the troopships en route to Singapore.

Troops of the 5th Indian division went ashore this morning from landing craft without opposition and marched past tamed Japanese sentries and cheering Allied prisoners of war still behind barbed wire.

Prisoners in a camp near the quay pressed against the wire and roosted in the trees, cheering their liberators.

An arriving Australian, recognizing some of his countrymen, shouted: "Hello, you beauties."

At first observation the damage to the harbor appeared slight, although some redflagged superstructures in the harbor indicated sunken ships—probably victims of Superfortress raids.

The reoccupation, which will include the Johore causeway leading to the mainland of Malaya, began a day ahead of schedule.

Chinese Cheer Troops.

The first area reoccupied embraces the quaysides and airfield.

A few Malayans and Chinese cheered as the infantry landing craft tied up at the deserted quays. Warships of the British East Indies fleet were anchored in the harbor.

The streets were clear except for stragglers and Japanese-manned sentry barriers through which we drove to the Cathay building with the personnel parachuted in a few days ago to look after the initial needs of the prisoners.

Chinese flags appeared everywhere along the route.

One Japanese sentry raised his rifle at a barrier as our car passed into the area not yet occupied by the troops, but he stepped aside at the honk of the horn.

British warships under command of Admiral Sir Arthur Power, commander-in-chief of the East Indies station, arrived at Singapore Monday. Sir Arthur flew his flag in the cruiser Cleopatra.

Not a white flag was in evidence, but two Royal Navy officers who motored 600 miles to Singapore after landing at Penang reported Japanese transport in Johore bore white stripes. The officers were aided along the route by Chinese guerillas.

Some 60,000 Japanese were withdrawing. Half of them were garrison forces and the remainder were beached seamen from sunken Japanese ships.

Aircraft Carrier "Puncher" Docks

Halifax, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Completing her first westward crossing as a troop carrier, the Canadian auxiliary aircraft carrier Puncher docked here yesterday with 733 Canadian service personnel.

Among the army-officers returning was Brig. William S. Smith of Edmonton, who served with an artillery unit overseas, and Col. Louis Keene of Oakville, Ont., a member of the famed Lorne Scots.

The repatriated army men were veterans of the Western Front operations and the fighting through Italy and Sicily.

Other personnel were Spr. J. F. Lavigne, Sudbury, Ont., former Allan Cup hockeyist and Sgmn. M. J. Antonia of Orillia, Ont.

LAST CHAPTER OF THE WAR TAKES PLACE ABOARD U.S.S. MISSOURI IN TOKYO BAY

Here is a general view of the signing of the Japanese surrender aboard the U.S.S. battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay. It happens to be China's turn to sign and Gen. Hsu Yung-Chang is at the official desk affixing his signature to the historic documents, which brought the end of a war which had lasted since 1931 for his country.

150 American War Prisoners Tortured, Shot to Death In Philippine Islands Last December Report Reveals

JAPAN'S PREMIER TELLS DIET HOW WAR WAS LOST

Surrender Instrument Signed Only After it Was Impossible to Carry On

San Francisco, Sept. 5 —(AP)— Japan's Premier Prince Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni, using the word "surrender" for the first time, told the two houses of the Japanese Diet in separate speeches today that "the surrender instrument" was signed only after "it seemed almost impossible to carry on . ."

The Federal Communications Commission recorded his Domei-broadcast speeches, which pictured a Japan virtually prostrated by Allied aerial blows, ground advances and sea-air blockade, suffering "enormous" naval and aerial losses, losing 2,200,000 homes to Allied firebombs and explosives which "killed and wounded hundreds of thousands."

The blockade was so chokingly drawn by Allied air power, his speech conceded, that "even communications with the China continent were rendered extremely hazardous."

"There is little use of getting back to the past, trying to put the blame on one person or another," he remarked, pointing instead to general factors which had brought signs of "impoverishment and exhaustion" to once-mighty Japan.

Rapid After Marianas' Fall.

"Especially after the loss of the Mariana islands the advance of the Allied forces became progressively rapid," the Premier said.

Unbelievable Record of Jap Cruelties Exposed by U.S.

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 5 —(CP)— A ghastly record of inhuman treatment, torturing and cold-blooded murder of prisoners by Japanese officers and men, with places, dates and names of the guilty, was made public today by the State Department with a promise that the guilty would be punished.

The report, covering part of the 240 protests and appeals sent to Japan through the Swiss government, reveals how the demands for ordinary, civilized decency to helpless prisoners fell on indifferent ears right up to the time of the Japanese surrender.

Until the surrender the Department feared to talk publicly about these incidents lest it might provoke the Japanese to greater excesses.

Given to Authorities.

Today's report admits that the department knew little of what happened to airmen shot down over Japan and Japanese-controlled areas in recent months and deals with reports received from escaped prisoners long before the surrender.

Evidence now being gathered will be submitted to "the properly constituted authorities" along with that already on record with a view to bringing retribution to the officers and units responsible for the atrocities, the Department said.

The most horrible single instance of Japanese savagery described in the release was the burning and shooting to death of 150 American war prisoners at Puerta Princesa, Palawa, Philippine islands last December.

The story has already been told publicly by a survivor of how the men, forced to work on an airport, were driven into underground air raid shelters, soaked with gasoline and set afire, while Jap riflemen shot those who sought to escape from the flames.

Threw Dynamite Charges.

The guards threw dynamite charges into the tunnels to take care of the Americans left inside.

About 40 got out and hurled themselves over a 50-foot cliff on to a beach. Shore sentries and landing barge gunners shot some. The Japanese captured others and buried them alive.

One they captured after he had tried to swim out to sea. They prodded him with bayonets; poured gasoline on both his feet and set fire to them. They mocked, derided and bayoneted him until he collapsed. Then they poured gasoline over his body and watched flames devour it.

"Such barbaric behavior on the part of the Japanese armed forces is an offence to all civilized people," former Undersecretary Grew told Tokyo at the time. In diplomatic language, he demanded that the Japanese promise not to do it again.

In a note dated March 10, Mr. Grew protested treatment of 750 American prisoners crowded into a Japanese freighter which was torpedoed and sunk off the Philippines Sept. 7, 1944.

Prisoners Starved.

The prisoners starved, thirsted and suffocated for nearly three weeks. When the ship was torpedoed, they were machine-gunned by Japanese guards, acting on orders of a Lieut. Hosimoto, as they floundered about in the sea.

Other guards threw hand grenades on the Americans trapped in the holds of the vessel. The Japanese recaptured 29 prisoners from the sea, took them to another ship in lifeboats, shot them, and threw their bodies back into the ocean.

There were less violent cases. Many messages protested lack of sanitation, food, medical supplies and clothing. One told how two Americans picked a papaya from a tree in their prison camp to relieve their hunger.

Broke Left Arm.

Japanese Mess Sgt. Nishitoni broke the left arm of each man with an iron bar as punishment.

Another message said the United States had intercepted orders of Japanese military authorities ordering the outright murder of individuals surrendering or captured.

Protests in many instances improved Japanese treatment of Americans, the report said.

The document did not name any military personnel among the atrocities victims.

Four American Girls Who Remarried Now Have Too Many Husbands

New York, Sept. 5 — (AP) — Four American girls who remarried after their first husbands were reported killed in action found themselves with two husbands each as a result of the release of their first husbands from Japanese prisoner-of-war camps.

One, Mrs. Ann Birdwell-Marshall, 19, of Kansas City, has filed suit for annulment of her second marriage, to Jack Marshall, 33, uncle of her first husband. She has said she will return to her first husband, Sgt. Gene D. Birdwell, 21, if he will have her.

Birdwell, reported killed in action in Burma, was rescued from a Japanese prison camp at Yokohama 12 days after his wife's second marriage.

Helen Goad of Portsmouth, O., who married Ensign Robert A. MacDowell of Saugerties, N. Y., after Lt. Harold Goad, bomber pilot, was declared dead, said her annulment had been "taken care of." Her first husband was found April 29 in a prison camp in Rangoon. He had been declared dead Oct. 14, 1944, and she remarried Dec. 15, 1944.

Mrs. Pearl Keiser of Williamsport, Pa., learned Monday night her first husband, Sgt. Earl Smith of Montgomery, Pa., had been heard in a shortwave broadcast from the Pacific.

Smith was reported dead May 26, 1945, and she married Pte. Hoyt H. Keiser July 30, 1945.

Mrs. Laurie Cales Bernstein, who married Lieut. Ethan Bernstein, a wounded veteran of the European war July 9, has learned that her first husband, Lieut. James Cales, has been found safe in a prison camp.

Cales, a navy flier was reported killed in action May 7. Yesterday his name appeared on a list of men liberated by a special mission of the 3rd fleet.

Mrs. Keiser and Mrs. Bernstein each have one child by their first husbands.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR EVACUATION PRISONERS MADE

Brig. Kay Has Arrived in Kowloon to Take Over This Canadian Task

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Hong Kong, Sept. 5 —(CP Cable)— Brig. Kay, Canadian military attache to the embassy at Chungking and former commander of the Winnipeg Grenadiers, arrived in Kowloon early this week to make arrangements for the care and evacuation of Canadian prisoners.

Brig. Kay set out by air from Chungking Aug. 23 but was delayed in flight at Kunming. He conferred with Rear Admiral Cecil Harcourt immediately upon his arrival, and then met Capt. Wallace Creery, skipper of the Canadian anti-aircraft cruiser Prince Rupert.

First task Brig. Kay set for himself is to send to Canada a complete list of Canadian personnel in Hong Kong as casualties. While there was some speculation the Prince Robert might be able to take some prisoners back to Canada, it has been announced such a plan is definitely impossible due to lack of accommodation aboard the cruiser.

Brig. Kay said he will seek every possible means of obtaining passage for the prisoners as soon as possible and in the meantime he said everything would be done to make them comfortable prior to their departure.

The Prince Robert is holding open house for all Allied prisoners and Cmdr. Peter MacRitchie, of Toronto, has done everything possible to help make them comfortable during the balance of their stay on the island.

Because of restricted transmission facilities, it has been impossible for Cmdr. MacRitchie to dispatch the list of personnel by official wireless or messages from prisoners to relatives.

The list, with official numbers, units, and addresses of next-of-kin, included the following:

JAP BALLOONS ENDANGERED VAST AREAS OF CANADA

Prairie Wheatlands And B.C. Wooded Lands Could Have Been Destroyed by Fire

Ottawa, Sept. 5 (CP) — Small towns and villages in the vast wooded areas of British Columbia and on the expansive wheatlands of the prairies might have faced disaster from fire had the Japanese been able to continue the war and maintain their incendiary balloon-bomb attacks on Canada, the army said today.

The bombs cascaded down in unknown quantities from the Pacific coastline to the north western Ontario border, and had their fiery loads not been smothered in the snowy vastness of the west, some rich areas would have fallen prey.

Disclosing some hitherto secret details of the Japanese device, the army said some of the bombs were of the high explosive type but any which were detonated fell in open country and no material damage or loss of life occurred.

Fragments of the balloons, which began falling on the United States and Canada last December, have been found as far south as Mexico and north to Alaska. In Canada to date 250 recoveries, from tiny parts to complete balloons, have been made, with the latest at McBride, B.C., Aug. 4.

Only Fraction Recovered.

The army statement warned it was possible the balloons recovered were only a fraction of those completing the lower stratosphere journey from Japan and there was danger for years to come of unsuspecting campers, trappers and tourists detonating unexploded anti-personnel bombs.

The self-destroying mechanism on many of the balloons did not function and the picric containers, designed to explode the paper balloon, can be just as dangerous as the unexploded bombs.

It is believed the Japs eventually hoped to gain information on weather conditions, prevailing wind currents and behaviour of their balloons for future systemized flights.

Research experts, inter-service bomb disposal squads, air force personnel, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, civilian police, Indian trappers and Forest Rangers joined as a co-operative force to comb the great hinterlands of the West to recover and render the missiles harmless. By 'plane, dog team, pack horse, and motor they gathered detail on the Japanese "silent V-weapon."

R.C.A.F. pilots were successful in shooting down several of the balloons. In one case a balloon was sighted by and R.C.A.F. crew was sighted by an R.C.A.F. crew, B.C., in March. The crew forced it down intact, using the slipstream of the aircraft as a steering guide. When it caught in a 200-foot tree, dynamite was used to bring it down.

Construction Details.

The balloons, constructed of tough paper, 33 feet in diameter and carrying 19,000 cubic feet of hydrogen gas, were designed to operate at a height of nearly five miles and to stay aloft for about one week.

This was done by an ingenious system of dropping ballast whenever the balloon dropped below its operational height. If the balloons went too high, gas was automatically released from the balloon. The mechanism, with its battery and aneroid barometers, was so arranged to release the bombs after all ballast had been dropped.

When completely filled, the balloon was capable of lifting at its operational height, a weight of 250 pounds.

Alcoholics If Treated as Sick Persons May be Cured Says Medical Group

Baltimore, Sept. 5. (AP)—Convinced that the emotional shocks and conficts of war may turn many veterans to alcoholism, the National Committee on Alcohol Hygiene has started to prepare scientific weapons with which to arm returning servicemen.

However, the problem will not be confined to war veterans, says Dr. Robert V. Seliger, executive director of the committee of Medical Men.

In a book soon to appear, the Baltimore psychiatrist, Johns Hopkins Medical School Instructor and Director of a Missouri Farm for Alcoholics, warns that "those in daily contact with the problem of alcoholism" feel it is "alarmingly increased and prevalent" in America.

With respect to the veterans, the N.C.A.H., organized in Baltimore in 1944, recommends "preventive mental hygiene" for former servicemen. What this means is a course of psychological preparedness for those who show marks of emotional stress.

Committee members from all sections of the country pool scientific data on alcoholism and related phenomena. Individually and as a group, they advocate community alcohol clinics.

"Alcoholics are sick persons,and, if treated as such, they may be cured", is the watchword of the group. Dr. Seliger explains the statement is based upon the view that alcoholism is not "caused" by alcohol, but by deep-lying emotional derailments which can be prevented through education and often cured through modern psychiatry.

The illness is the combination of emotional disturbances that give rise to the desire to flee from the ordinary tasks of existence.

Gen. MacArthur Clamps Down With New Orders for Japs

Dismounted Cavalry First To Enter Tokyo District

Yokohama, Sept. 5—(AP)—The occupation of Tokyo will begin Friday (Saturday, Japanese Time).

The United States 1st (dismounted) Cavalry Division will enter the bomb-shattered capital city then.

Gen. MacArthur is expected to move his headquarters from Yokohama to the United States embassy building in Tokyo about the same time.

The supreme commander of the Allied powers announced plans today shortly after he issued a far-reaching directive which drove home to the full impact of defeat on Japan.

The directive demanded forthwith all information—including coded—necessary for swiftly disarming Japan's war machine, and ordered the beaten nation to place vast facilities at the beck and call of steadily enlarging occupation forces.

Gen. MacArthur's lengthy directive included these specifications:

The commander of the Japanese 1st army will report to Gen. Eichelberger; the commander of the Japanese 2nd army will report to Gen. Krueger; the Japanese commander in Korea will report to Lt.-Gen. Hodge. Arms must be turned over on orders of those three generals.

Must Provide Names.

Japanese General headquarters must provide Gen. MacArthur immediately with designations and code names of all Nipponese military and naval units, their strength, location and commanders.

Airfields, with runways improved, are to be turned over for occupational usage as quickly as required.

Office buildings, living quarters, storage facilities, transportation and communication facilities must be supplied on demand.

Cable and radio facilities must be maintained.

Japanese work crews must be ready in quantity to repair roads, railroads and docks and construct occupational housing. Labor pools, both skilled and unskilled, must be available.

Signposts in English letters at least six inches high must be posted at highway entrances of towns and cities.

Japan's naval commanders must put themselves at the disposal of admirals Halsey of the 3rd fleet, Raymond A. Spruance of the 5th fleet and Thomas C. Kincaid of the 7th fleet.

Weapons on all ships must be made inoperative.

All vessels over 100 tons must be supervised by occupation authorities.

All seaports must be maintained. All minefields must be marked and removed.

The Kyushu landings, which began by air on Tuesday, were run off yesterday, without incident. Yesterday, while airborne landings continued, seaborne forces were brought in on six landing ships guided into Kagoshima by Japanese pilots.

The surrender of Japanese garrisons in stolen islands throughout the Pacific continued. Preliminary arrangements were completed aboard the Australian destroyer Vendeta off the New Guinea coast for the surrender Friday of an estimated 130,000 Japanese in the Solomons, New Ireland, New Britain and New Guinea, Melbourne radio reported.

General Freyberg Governor General Of New Zealand

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— The Dominions Office announced today the appointment of Lt.-Gen. Sir Bernard Freyberg, V.C., as Governor General of New Zealand. The commander of New Zealand's overseas forces during the Second Great War succeeds Sir Cyril Newall next February. Sir Cyril is Martial of the Royal Air Force.

London born, Sir Bernard came to New Zealand as a child. He won the Victoria Cross in the First Great War and came from retirement to command New Zealand's forces in the recently-ended conflict. One of the most gallant Empire campaigners during the two great wars, he commanded the New Zealand 2nd Corps which fought its way across North Africa and through the Italian peninsula with the British 8th Army.

Earlier the Corps—last reported sharing the occupation of Trieste—had helped win the central Italian town of Cassino in one of the bitterest fights in the Italian campaign.

When Germany invaded Yugoslavia and Greece, he was named commander-in-chief of Allied forces at Crete, which German parachutists subsequently overwhelmed.

Later with the reborn 8th Army under Field Marshal Montgomery, he was commander of New Zealand troops in the battles of North Africa and in the vanguard of the capture of Gabes and El Hamma where Winston Churchill credited him with executing "a decisive break-through."

His forces were prominent in the final Allied victory in Tunisia where German Gen. Von Sponeck surrendered to him personally.

In addition to the Victoria Cross, the Empire's highest decoration for gallantry, he won three Distinguished Service Orders in the First Great War.

In all, he was wounded nine times in the First Great War and cited six times in dispatches.

He continued his military career between the wars and in 1922 was beaten for parliament in Wales. Three years later, he came within 500 yards of swimming the English Channel but had to be taken from the water after almost 17 hours because an old wound annoyed him.

BRIGHTON POST OFFICE ENTERED, SAFE TAKEN

Ontario Provincial Police today investigated the breaking and entering of the Brighton Post Office Tuesday night from which a large safe was taken, broken open and left in a backyard.

No details were available at the time of going to press, but a more or less significant fact is that the affair follows closely on the heels of a similar one which occurred in Bowmanville when a flour mill was deprived of its safe in the same manner.

Approximately 105 retail meat dealers from all parts of the district heard ration officials discuss the mechanics and other essential points of the new meat rationing at a meeting held in the City Hall Tuesday night.

Mr. Fred Udall, meat ration superintendent, Brockville, outlined the procedure and mechanization of the rationing act while Mr. Fred Newark, pinch-hitting for a government official, answered queries pertaining to cuts, kinds of meat, etc.

Mr. Dougal Marshall, W.T.P.B. representative here, was chairman and asked the same co-operation of dealers in the forthcoming rationing of meats that characterized their activities during the last period of meat rationing.

"You are the people who will be handling these commodities and a lot rests upon your shoulders," he said.

A card has been mailed to all meat retailers to be used in applying for meat ration tokens which may be given their customers as coupon exchange when rationing begins. The dealers were asked to apply immediately for their ration tokens.

Retailers who serve more than 800 different households per week should apply to the nearest branch of the ration administration, while those who serve less than 800 different households per week, should apply to any local bank.

Asked Not to Overestimate.

When filling in the application card retailers were warned not to overestimate the number of households they serve and thus apply for more tokens than they will need during the first few days of rationing as the loan of tokens must be repaid by sending to the rationing branch coupons received from their customers.

After rationing starts further supplies of tokens may be received from banks at the rate of 200 tokens for every 25 M coupons surrendered.

The ration administration emphasized that, when making application for the loan of tokens, retailers should state the number of separate households served each week, not the number of transactions they make.

The use of tokens is being introduced in connection with the meat rationing and will be used to make change when a purchase of meat is less than the full value of the coupon and can be used later to make purchases of other amounts of meat.

Tokens will be of benefit to the consumer who buys meat in small quantities, such as a person living alone and those who lack refrigeration facilities.

Coupon Equals Eight Tokens.

One meat coupon will equal eight tokens. No consumer may be given more than seven tokens change at one time. The merchant may not exchange tokens for meat coupons unless a sale of meat is involved. For example: If a consumer buys a 4½-lb roast in Group C, she will give her retailer 3 coupons, and receive six tokens in exchange which she can use on her next visit to the store.

The tokens will be slightly larger than nickels. They will be of blue fibrewood composition similar to the U. S. tokens. The words "Canada Ration" and "Meat-Viande" will be stamped on both sides. There will be a small hole in the centre.

Meats will be divided into five groups. Group A represents 1 lb per coupon or 2 oz. per token; Group B, 1½ lbs per coupon or 3 oz, per token; Group C, 2 lbs per coupon, 4 oz. per token; Group D, 2½ lbs per coupon, 5 oz. per token; Group E, 3 lbs per coupon, 6 oz. per token.

TRENTON

68 Cases Heard In Police Court

Trenton, Sept. 5—The holiday weekend was partly held responsible for the fact that 68 cases were heard in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday afternoon, before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook. County Crown Attorney Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, prosecuted.

Twenty-one of the 68 cases were for breaches of the Highway Traffic Act. Seven paid $4 and costs each for failing to obey traffic signals, five paid $10 and costs for driving cars without permits, one $10 and costs for speeding, one $5 and costs for speeding, three were dismissed and three enlarged. Fifteen paid $2 for illegal parking and one charged with intoxication in charge of a car was enlarged for a week.

John Mitchell, no address, was given one year in the Ontario reformatory for the theft of a 1935 Ford roadster from Robert H. Cox, 46 Queen St., Trenton on Sunday morning. He was arrested by the East York police while asleep in the car. He was also charged with taking a car in the city of Toronto, without the owner's permission, commonly called ers permission, commonly called joy-riding. For this offence he got three months concurrent.

Patrick William Crossett, was given ten days on a vagrancy charge. He reported to the police that he had been robbed and assaulted, but he made one mistake in his statement that he had been robbed, he had forgotten that he had tried to borrow money from a Trenton constable earlier in the day, telling the constable that he wanted to get home to a town west of Trenton. When confronted by this constable he admitted that his robbery story was all a fake.

A Trenton young man was charged with obstructing the police in the execution of their duties, and his case was enlarged one week in order that he might obtain counsel.

George Stoneburg of Peterborough, was given seven days on a vagrancy charge, to date from the day of his arrest. George was found on the verandah of a house in East Trenton after the police had received a telephone call from the occupant of the home that a prowler was around the house. Stoneburg told the police that he went there to get out of the rain, and when told by the police that there had been no rain he had no further excuses to offer.

A minor charged with housebreaking and theft had his case enlarged for one week. In the custody of the Children's Aid So- meantime he is to remain in the ciety.

Another Trentonian was charged with assaulting his wife and was given a year's suspended sentence and ordered to pay costs of $4.50.

John Stewart charged with vagrancy had his case enlarged for one week.

Eighteen paid the usual $10 and costs for breaches of the Liquor Control Act, while C. Elliott paid $100 and costs for a second offence.

A. Carmichael charged with breach of the Liquor Control Act had his case enlarged for one week.

H. Cook was fined $150 and costs for a breach of the Liquor Control Act.

Britain, France Await Reply Regarding Tangier

Paris, Sept. 5 —(AP)— Britain and France awaited Spain's reply today to a request that she withdraw her troops from strategic Tangier as the first step toward reconstituting the international zone there under a governing body on which the United States and Soviet Russia will be represented for the first time.

Plans for re-establishment of the zone were announced by the foreign ministry in a communique disclosing the results of Paris conferences last month by British, French, American and Soviet representatives.

Neither the United States nor Russia participated in the note asking the withdrawal of Francisco Franco's troops, because of their status as newly-invited members of the control council. Franco took over the zone in a unilateral action in 1940 following the fall of France, and has remained in control ever since.

Situated on the African side of the strait of Gibraltar, Tangier is of great strategic important because of its potential value in controlling the western entrance to the Mediterranean.

(In Washington it was said that France and Spain would hold top positions in the international setup, with four representatives each on the legislative assembly and one eah on a control commission. Britain, Russia and the United States would have three places each on the assembly.)

R.E.L. UNION REJECTS MOTION TO GO ON STRIKE

Union's National Director Calls on Hon. C. D. Howe to Submit Resignation

Toronto, Sept. 5 (CP)—Local 1039 of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) and the Union's National Director, C. H. Millard, last night called on Reconstruction Minister Howe to resign unless he publicly retracts statements four Union members reported he made to them yesterday at the Lambton Golf Club here.

The resignation demand came at a meeting of members of the local who rejected a motion calling for a strike at the Crown Research Enterprises plant in suburban Leaside in which the local is organized.

Heward Conquergood, International representative of the Union, reported on the unscheduled conference with Mr. Howe in the golf club dining room and said that when the Union delegation told the minister a strike was threatening at the research plant because he had failed to reply to telegrams and phone calls about layoffs Mr. Howe replied: "Go ahead and strike—there isn't any better time than now."

In Ottawa, Mr. Howe told The Canadian Press last night that what he said was: "The responsibility is yours. That is a war plant and the war is over. But I advise you to be cautious."

Want Conditions Upheld.

The resolution passed at the Union meeting last night asked, in addition to the minister's resignation unless he retracted the reported statement: That employees at the Research Plant and elsewhere he guaranteed that present collective bargaining agreements and organizations be honored in the sale of Crown plants; that the 40-hour week with take-home pay unreduced be made a condition of sale; that where Crown plants are closed for reconversion workers be given reconversion pay of one month's wages for each year of service.

Mr. Millard told the meeting he was invited by Mr. Howe to go to Ottawa Sept. 12 to discuss steel industry reconversion problems but "unless Mr. Howe is willing to retract the statements he made today . . . then I don't feel I have any interest in going to Ottawa" for the conference.

Forced Way Into Room.

Mr. Conquergood reported that near the end of their 15-minute interview with Mr. Howe the minister protested he should not be disturbed and finally said: "All I ask is that you get the hell out of here."

Mr. Howe said in the interview last night at Ottawa that "I may have said that" and added that the Union men—Mr. Conquergood, Cecil Walker, Local 1039 President, Walter Ross of the Local 1039 executive, and Larry Sefton, "forced their way into the dining room in a manner that was very embarrassing to me." He said they could just as easily have interviewed him at his hotel where he kept a number of business appointments.

Won't Co-operate Unless Board Has Full Authority

Windsor, Sept. 5 (CP) — The United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) today made public a telegram announcing its refusal to cooperate with a conciliation board considering a dispute between U.A.W. Local 200 and the Ford Motor Company of Canada unless "your board has the authority and power and if it is prepared speedily and properly to finalize" the issues in the dispute.

The telegram was signed by Thomas MacLean, Assistant Regional Director of the Union, on behalf of Refional Director George Burt and Local 200 President Roy England and was sent last night to Mr. Justice G. B. O'Connor, Chairman of the Conciliation Board.

"We are in receipt of your telegram advising us that your board met privately this afternoon in Windsor and that without any representation from the Union at all you decided to open sittings on Thursday morning," said the telegram.

"We do not know the reasons for this privately arrived at conclusion or delay nor were we in any way consulted or informed. In view of this unavoidable and inexcusable conduct the policy committee of our Union has unanimously decided at a meeting held this evening that so far as we are concerned your board can continue to hold its sessions privately and without us and to arrive at any conclusion it desires."

Violates Conditions Claim.

The decision to begin hearings in the dispute Thursday violated "the first essential condition" under which the Union first agreed to participate in the board sessions "that it would sit at once in Windsor and continue sessions to an early decision."

The telegram said a copy of a telegram from J. L. Cohen, U.A.W. counsel, to Labor Minister Mitchell describing a company announcement that 1,650 employees would be laid off between now and Sept. 14 as a "provocative act" which destroyed the basis of conciliation was in the hands of the conciliation board secretary yesterday.

Also in the hands of the secretary was a telegram from Union officials "making it quite clear that any participation by us with your board depended entirely . . . upon your board being vested with full authority to deal with all issues and . . . upon complete assurance against layoffs while the board sat."

"The time to put a national policy of full employment and adequate income levels into effect is right now and even Thursday is one day too late," the telegram continued. "Windsor, if necessary, will play its part in a national movement for a modern national policy."

Frenchman Sends Letter of Thanks To Ameliasburg R.C.

Reminder of the outstanding work done by the Rednersville Red Cross Branch in sending hundreds of tins of jam overseas to the armed services and civilians of occupied countries came the other day to Mrs. Lorne Brickman, Rednersville from a grateful resident of Paris. It is one of the wrappers from a can of raspberry jam sent overseas in August, 1943.

Accompanying the label is a letter written in French, English and Esperanto. The quaint English is, according to the letterhead written by "Dronchat, docteur en droit, Avocat du Barreau de Paris."

The letter reads;—I will try to send you a translation in English language, but I beg your pardon for the too numerous mistakes I shall make because, since more than 44 years, I did no more neither write nor speak English. The son of my wife is a war-orphan from the preceding war. He has been captured at the beginning of June 1940 and he is just coming back from Germany with six of his comrades after staying in Poland and in Russia. For the seven, on board of the English ship which has brought them back to their country, one gave them a box of very delightful raspberry jam which made such a big impression that they asked me to thank you for the magnificent gift received through the Canadian Red Cross. Even, they wish to send you the label which surrounded the box. They tell it was the best they have ever eaten. French people know what it owes to the Canadian people which has always shown itself to very brotherly. Let us utter a Hurrah for Canadians."

H&PE Regiment To be Welcomed At Belleville

Picton, Sept. 5 — On its return from overseas as a unit, the 1st Battalion of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will be welcomed, following an official parade, in the city of Belleville. Major W. A. Davern, of Wellington, reported receipt of a letter from the Commanding Officer of the 1st Bn. overseas to the effect that the regiment expects to arrive in Canada, and detrain at Belleville, between the middle and the end of October. The present strength is about 36 officers, 500 other ranks and a 25-piece bugle band.

At a meeting of the Prince Edward County Reception and Welcoming Committee here, Major Davern, RSM Angus Duffy, Lieut. Dayton Wark and Ira Burd were named a committee to represent the County in connection with the welcome at Belleville.

News that the Regiment is not to parade in Picton where it was mobilized, and trained before going overseas in 1939, is disappointing to county people, as well as to the towns in Hastings County where companies were organized. However, it was pointed out the members of the unit now are representative of many parts of Canada. Most of the local and district men, who were members are already home: To parade in several towns would delay their returns to their homes. Belleville being centrally located, will cause but a short delay in this regard. Trenton was considered, it is understood, but lacks an armouries where the men could be handled.

Lacking a parade by the Unit, the County Committee, in conjunction with Picton Fair Board, decided to stage a great welcome for all members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, who may be home by Sept. 27, as well as all other Prince Edward men and women in other units and branches of the services. Plans were made for a free dance for service personnel, a parade to the Fair on Sept. 27 where there will be a suitable welcome and service of thanksgiving, and other features.

On November 12, a complimentary dinner is to be tendered service personnel. All organizations of the town are joining to make this welcome and parade one of the greatest in the town's history, and a fitting tribute to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, famed for their achievements in Sicily and Italy and later on the Western Front. Philip Dodds and S. G. Lockyer form the committee in charge of the parade and welcome.

New Zealand Relied On Her Air Arm

Wellington, N. Z., Sept. 5 — (Reuters)— Throughout the war New Zealand relied on her air arm as a defence against attack from the sea, it was disclosed today. She had no coastal artillery capable of engaging an eight-inch gun cruiser. Guns ordered from England between 1936 and 1938 arrived in 1943 because of urgent needs elsewhere, but lack of auxiliary equipment kept them inoperable.

Says Jap Warlords 'Not Half Licked Yet'

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 5 —(AP)— Japan's war lords "are not half licked yet" and are going to "take a lot more killing in the future," Vice Admiral John Sidney McCain, commander of Task Force 38, said yesterday. "I don't like the look in their eyes," he told reporters as he recalled witnessing the surrender ceremony aboard the U. S. S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

Mr., Mrs. Allison Given Boat Trip On Anniversary

Picton, Sept. 5—Marking their Golden Wedding anniversary yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Allison of Adolphustown, were guests at a family party of eighteen, dinner being served at the Globe hotel. As a gift for the occasion, the family presented Mr. and Mrs. Allison with tickets for a steamer trip from Kingston to Quebec City. Miss Edith Allison, of Windsor, a daughter, made the presentation.

Guests on this occasion included four children and eight grand children. The children are, Ross Allison, Hugh Allison, Adolphustown, Mrs. C. B. Creighton, Napanee, Miss Edith Allison, Windsor. The families of the first three were all present. Also a guest was Mrs. C. Townsend of Belleville who was bridesmaid at their wedding 50 years ago.

The table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, with yellow roses and white candles in brass holders on either side.

The youngest granddaughter, Joan Allison, presented Mrs. Allison with a bouquet of flowers. Mr. F. Allison expressed the appreciation of himself and Mrs. Allison.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison were married at the Cadman home, Adolphustown, by the late Rev. R. M. Pope. They have lived on the family homestead, one and one half miles east of Adolphustown village ever since. This property was received in the Allison family as a Crown Deed from George III. The first holder of the farm was Mr. Allison's great grandfather, Joseph Allison, who was one of the original party of United Empire Loyalists, who landed at Adolphustown in June 1784.

Mrs. Allison was formerly Martha Wright, a daughter of the late William Cadman and his wife, Agnes Murdock, all of Adolphustown.

Mr. Allison was secretary-treasurer for many years of the UEL. cheese factory at Adolphustown, and also acted as salesman. In earlier days much produce was shipped from the Allison dock, and Mr. Allison recalled buying grain from the James Richardson firm at Kingston when a boy of fourteen.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Allison enjoy good health and are looking forward to the trip to Quebec.

The one and only "Tokyo Rose" a Los Angeles-born American of Japanese ancestry was identified in dispatches from Tokyo as Iva Ikuko Toguri, 30-year-old graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles. Rflmn. J. Arthur Liberated From Jap Prison Camp

Picton, Sept. 5—Rifleman John Arthur of Picton is one of the Canadian soldiers who have been liberated as Japanese prisoners, and is safe in Allied hands. This welcome news was received yesterday by his wife, who is at present in Oshawa, and conveyed to his mother, Mrs. John Arthur, Sr., and sisters here.

By an odd coincidence, Mrs. Andrew Devine, sister of Rfmn. Arthur yesterday received a card from him dated Feb. 19, 1945. It stated that he was feeling fine, and that he had received mail.

His wife has had no direct word from him in more than a year, though a broadcast he made from Tokyo was heard in San Francisco and a copy of his message sent on to her. In this message, in December last, he stated that he had been in hospital for some time, that he had received Red Cross parcels for which he was grateful, a parcel from his wife and daughter Shirley and letters. He then had been in hospital for some time and he stated that he was being given good care by British and American doctors.

Rfmn. Arthur was a member of the Royal Rifles of Canada, and was taken prisoner when Hong Kong fell on Christmas day, 1941. Previous to enlistment, he resided in Picton. A brother, Gilbert Arthur, Toronto, recently received his discharge from the army.

Another Prince Edward County boy who is a prisoner in Japan is Pte. Leonard VanCleaf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank VanCleaf, Consecon. He was not mentioned in the list of those who had been liberated, but they have had word from him some time ago that he was well.

Point Traverse

Pike and Bass Fishing Good

Point Traverse, Sept. 5 — Pike and bass fishing at Black Creek is reported to be very good, according to the many anglers who visited that spot over the holiday.

A party of three Oshawa fishermen, guests of Black River lodge, returned home on Monday after a very pleasant holiday spent in the county.

Mr. Mark Larkin, one of the Oshawa party, is an employee of General Motors Ltd., and has completed 28 years service with the motor company. Mr. Larkin is associated with the paint department, and he informed this paper that it was he who painted Their Majesties' royal limousine, which was used by King George and Queen Elizabeth during their Canadian and American tour of June, 1939.

He has also painted cars for the Duke of Windsor, J. Pierpont Morgan and a Maharajah of India.

JAPAN'S PREMIER

Finally, he reported, "the country's production dwindled to such a point that any swift restoration came to be considered beyond hope."

The Empire's war resources by May and June, this year, had been disastrously undermined," he concluded, and "our losses in both naval and aerial strength were so enormous as to obstruct seriously the prosecution of the war."

On the other hand, he pointed out, Allied power "was ever on the increase."

Bomb Last Straw.

Dumped upon a country whose war-making power already had been "disastrously undermined," the atomic bomb—the last straw—was deemed "likely to result in obliteration of the Japanese people," Higashi-Kuni added.

"Moreover, the Soviet Union suddenly declared war . . . forcing us into the worst international situation . . ."

It was Emperor Hirohito who decided, he said, "to save millions of his subject."

The Premier urged strict obedience to the Imperial surrender command, "admitting frankly the fact of our defeat of today, and fulfilling manfully and faithfully the terms of the Potsdam declaration to prove to all the world the true worth of our pledged word."

Record Fall Fair Forecast

Agricultural societies have weathered the war years with a remarkable degree of success and were able in the midst of the heavy demand on man-power and on material resources not only to continue their annual exhibitions but also to aid in good measure the national effort. Exhibitions deal with primal things, nature, the soil, grain, livestock, and industrial developments and on the labor of the farmer and on the spirit of the people and these very same things are the means of combatting an enemy. The fall fairs fitted well into the picture of the nation at war. They had in all the generations before shown how important they were in peacetime and again they emphasize their value in peace.

Now another autumn season is near and it is the first autumn in six years that will be ushered in in the spirit and reality of peace.

Belleville fair, the record of which has been very satisfactory even in war years, will be held two weeks hence on September 17, 18 and 19, with the promise of being "the greatest in history." While the war was not ended when the early planning of the 1945 exhibition was begun, the foreword in the prizezlist notes that "the spirit of victory is in the air." The appeal of the directors for exhibits of farm, factory and all other lines of industry in the spirit of victory has been answered right royally by exhibitors. The result will be apparent on Monday, September 17 and the succeeding two days when the local and district exhibition will be held.

Officers and directors have been greatly cheered by the response of exhibitors and have no hesitation in forecasting that the coming fair will set a record. The numbers of the entries and their quality and variety will be the proof.

The fair is built upon the solid foundation of enterprise in the agricultural and industrial fields. The urban and rural communities are solidly behind this great institution for which the whole district is boosting. It has an enviable train of successes through the long years in which it has interpreted the spirit and the zeal and goodwill of city and countryside and in which it has been an unfailing aid in building up this section of the Province. It is a reflection of the happy conditions which exist hereabouts on the land and in the city, it is a show window in which the many thousands who live in the adjoining communities take great pride. It is central and is set in one of the finest and most progressive districts of all Canada, a section of firmly established enterprise, progress and prosperity where the farmer and the city dweller meet and live in happy accord of mutual interests and understandings, where the progress of each reacts to the benefits of both.

It was no mistake when everywhere the feeling was that fairs should carry on during the war years. They have always been an inspiration to achievement. The sense of reward and recognition of merit react with the result of greater enterprise on the part of exhibitors and with keenest and yet good natural competition and rivalry.

Fairs in Canada go back to the roots of the national life. With the home, the church, the market place and the town, the fair is an established institution. Without it, well—it would be impossible for the community to be what it is. The fair is a part of the life of such a community just as rural life and farming and village and town and city are. Fairs are the natural development on the solid foundation of agriculture and industry and they have grown up in every part of this land as well as in many other parts of the world.

Belleville Agricultural Society's exhibition represents the active co-operation of the society, the City Council and Parks Board. This year's outlook in the light of the victory and peace which have come upon the earth is cheering as it promises a successful fair with finest entries, close competitions and with full attractions, those happy things which crowds like at fairs and which make fairs different from any other institution.

The mood of the people is such as to assure the fair board of an exhibition which no one will miss. Besides the many attractions and proud exhibits there will be the victory crowds.

Hidden British Treasures

The historic documents and other national treasures removed from Westminster Abbey in 1939 are soon to be restored. The Coronation Stone is buried in the precincts of the Abbey, and its exact location is known to few, other than the Dean and the Canadian Prime Minister, who had custody of the plans. Even now the secret is to be kept although the Stone will be uncovered as soon as the labor can be obtained. Other treasures were hidden in various parts of England and Wales.

His Reward

General Wainwright, recently released from a Japanese prison camp, had a place of honor when the enemy formally surrendered by signing the conditions on the U.S.S. Missouri. He is the modest leader who after his release thanked the American people "for their kind understanding of the misfortune that befell me on Bataan and Corregidor." How well the United States and world understand this hero of Bataan and Corregidor is shown by the place he was given at the surrender of the enemy whom he and his men fought tenaciously. They know that he decided to suffer the hardships of war for, when asked to leave, he said "I have been with my men from the start and if captured I will share their lot." He went into the fox-holes with them. He fought a delaying action with rare skill and what he thinks his defeat is to everyone else his victory even though he had to surrender. The New York Times says "After Corregidor there were black days and black months but no longer any doubt as to the end. If American soldiers and their Filipino allies could do and endure what was done and endured in that campaign they could beat Japan. They did beat her. Corregidor was the beginning of victory and General Wainwright deserves a victor's welcome and the place at the surrender to which General MacArthur has invited him."

Science and Mathematics

It will be strange if there is not a greatly increased interest in mathematics and the sciences as a result of the progress made in so many branches in the war. How many people would like to have been able to have a part in the development of the splitting of the atom and to be able to do their bit for civilization by helping to create the atomic bomb which Mr. Winston Churchill said saved at least a million and a quarter Allied lives and with the prospect that it may make war impossible forever (for that is now the hope). The young men coming back have had their part to play in a war in which mechanization has had a large share. They will be alert to the call of mechanics and the sciences.

The world has read much of things to come when the war is over and priorities are off production, all sorts of appliances and inventions. There is the appeal of the airplane, familiar to airmen and other servicemen and to civilians. That time for which many have been hoping draws nearer with peace.

The modern sciences, like physics and chemistry and the seemingly endless line of inventions cannot fail to interest boys and girls and young people planning their future under the inspiration of a sense of relief over the war's end and the promises of a world of great enterprise. These studies as well as mathematics are closely allied to the needs of human living in this age and at the opportune time they open the way for new jobs, which will call forth the enterprise of youth and satisfy the yearning for expression in studies that may bring better conditions of living and added happiness.

Such studies become the agencies of continued progress because they help to mould our life and civilization in the path of progress.

The more sympathies we gain or awaken for what is beautiful by so much deeper will be our sympathy for that which is beautiful, the human soul.—Lowell.

JUST FOLKS

FELLOWSHIPS

I saw them as I passed along,
Entranced by just a bit of song,
Rich man and toiler! Round about
The peonies and the flags were out,
And there they stood, a silent pair,
Held by a burst of music rare!

Now one was poor and one was rich,
Forgotten, though, was which was which.
Forgotten, too, were time and place,
Fortune and lack, and creed and race.
Just two men, done with right and wrong,
Enraptured by a cardinal's song.

Beauty and mirth do this to men,
Bring them to fellowship again;
Take them from all the shams of pride
And stand them, brothers, side by side;
Lift them from self; give high and low
A common source of joy to know.

London Letter

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— It was midnight, and a little boy standing on a chair was tired.

"Daddy," he asked for the 20th time in as many minutes, "when are the King and Queen coming?

The father's reply was lost in a crescendo of cheers, for as he spoke the door on the balcony over the main entrance to Buckingham Palace opened and through it walked Their Majesties.

So, one child was rewarded for an hour's waiting. And so, through that never-to-be-forgotten first day of peace were a half million Londoners rewarded.

Six times Their Majesties appeared on the balcony on VJ-day and for each appearance there were 50,000 persons to greet them. Before that they drove from the Palace to Westminster to open parliament and another 200,000 persons lined the route to cheer.

Britain, in victory, turned to its King and Queen as it turned to them in the early years of the war when there was no certainty there would be victory. Rarely in the past, said the veterans, was there a comparable demonstration of affection for royalty.

Somehow or other, here in London on VJ-day, you just had to see the King and Queen.

"We pay tribute to something more than the institution of kingship," Prime Minister Clement Attlee said in the House of Commons in moving the address to the King on the opening of Parliament.

The bond uniting the King and Queen to their people, he said, "is no mere constitutional formality but the basis of the deep affection and understanding which I believe has been strengthened by the experiences through which we have passed."

Here, on the balcony, were two persons who symbolized for those Londoners the victory for which they had waited so long. Here were two persons who had shared with them six years of war, who had endured bombing, whose own home, the palace, even now has boards for windows.

"The King and Queen are so much and so intimately a part of our national existence that we are apt to take them for granted," said a writer in a London newspaper.

"In storm or sunshine it helps us all to know that they are there and that is why we turn towards them as the needle turns to the north."

FORMAL SURRENDER SOON

By DONALD HUTH

Nanking, Sept. 5 —(AP)—Gen. Leng Hsin, commander of Chinese troops now in Nanking, said today the formal surrender of all Japanese troops in China would probably occur "within a week," and other competent sources expected the ceremony to take place Sunday.

The general said in a press conference that plans had been made for dispersal of Japanese troops in China after the official surrender, but the details were not announced.

After the formal surrender ceremony Japanese troops will give up their arms, ammunition and other war materials.

Disabled Veteran Filling His Place In the Community

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 5 —(CP)— The Canadian community which once would have relegated him to an elevator or to a night watchman's trick is beginning to accept the disabled war veteran for what he's worth and is finding him a better man in a job that suits him than many of those who have no disabilities.

That is the salient fact that emerges from a study of the casualty rehabilitation section of the department of veterans affairs.

The story of the rehabilitation of the serviceman who has lost a limb or one of his senses is one of the great stories of the war. Its full potentialities, its surprising facts have only become known during the war. And built on its lessons is the organization that anticipates helping, advising, training, educating, placing and watching over some 25,000 disabled Canadian Veterans, more or less, in these new years of peace.

Veteran Productive.

The solid core of the casualty section's argument, both to the disabled veteran and the employer who wishes to hire him, lies in the now-established facts that, given the right job, the right training for the job, the right aptitude and determination to make a success of the job, the veteran:-

1. Is equally or more productive than a fit man.
2. Is absent for all reasons less than the fit man.
3. Is less prone to become involved in accidents because he prizes his remaining limbs the higher.
4. Is more conscientious, more determined to succeed because he knows he has a couple of strikes on him.

Only now swinging into the fullness of a program integrated with the work of other departments, the casualty section hopes eventually to have some 66 casualty rehabilitation officers in various districts throughout Canada. More than 70 per cent of them will be disabled veterans themselves.

Theirs is a complex role.

Watch Man Carefully.

Primarily, they must see that no disabled veteran suffers an economic disadvantage because of his disability. They watch the man through the various stages of medical treatment, the adjustment period, vocational guidance and placement. Together, they decide what the man wants to do, what job he can do without being at a disadvantage, where he wants to work, whether he needs training.

From there the C. R. O. approaches a likely employer. Here begins the job of reversing the employer's human habit of thinking of the man's disabilities, rather than his abilities. But the C. R. O.'s have found that most employers listen with interest and understanding.

There is no mass departmental-industry arrangement about placing disabled men. Each case is treated individually.

ARRANGEMENTS

Visit Prince Robert.

Canadians in small groups are visiting the Prince Robert, tied up at the same dock in Kowloon that she docked at in 1941 when she was here with the Canadian expeditionary force. The wardroom is open to all and some prisoners are enjoying their first civilized meal since they were imprisoned.

Anxiety on the part of the prisoners to get home is their most intense emotion and word of Brig. Kay's arrival spread quickly from hut to hut in the camp where the Canadians are most likely to remain concentrated until their departure for home.

Twenty-six Canadians who were in hospital at the time for the liberation were taken aboard the hospital ship Oxfordshire which is to sail shortly for Melbourne. Last Sunday morning a second hospital ship, the former New Zealand passenger vessel Mauganui, arrived.

Occupation Forces.

The Empress of Australia, a transatlantic liner in peacetime, arrived at Hong Kong Tuesday with some 3,000 R.A.F. personnel. The men will temporarily join naval forces in the occupation of Hong Kong and the Kowloon area.

Rumors were prevalent that since the Empress is fitted out as a troopship she might possibly be used for the evacuation of prisoners of war or internees.

As armed personnel prepared to debark from the Empress, quiet reigned through Hong Kong and Kowloon, though Chinese in Hong Kong were still tossing garlands of firecrackers from windows when British servicemen or automobiles containing British seamen passed by. Chinese flags and Union Jacks are flying from many buildings.

Japanese Wear Chinese Uniforms

A Japanese report says only four of their servicemen are unaccounted for in the evacuation of Hong Kong Sunday, but I saw a number of Japanese discovered wearing Chinese garb during the last few days.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page or 100 Words Long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed.

THIRTY TEETH MORE OR LESS

I don't know whether the physicians or the dentists are the more to blame for it, perhaps it is fifty-fifty, but in view of the pretensions of both groups in regard to the "scientific" and "progressive" character of medicine and dentistry these days it is nothing less than a scandal the crude, irresponsible and arbitrary way many practitioners of medicine and dentistry sacrifice the teeth of their unwary patients.

Now, now, stupid, don't show your ignorance I can qualify in almost any field outside of my own little racket—health and hygiene. Therefore when I call people ignorant here I mean, of course, that they don't know anything about health and hygiene. Most college and university graduates, most teachers, most lawyers, most ministers, most authors, not to mention most businessmen and capitalists and parasites and bigshot gamblers and politicians, are ignorant of health and hygiene. How do I know? Why, they're letters, their queries, their childish notions about preservation of health and prevention of disease amount to overwhelming documentary evidence of it. This query turns up in the mail today:

"I have been troubled for five years with arthritis in my hands. The dentist suggested removing thirty teeth, which I had him do. The family doctor told me to take (a kind of disguised aspirin) when my hands pain me. I do so want to get at the root of the trouble, so I am asking for your pamphlet "Calcium and Rheumatiz."

(Signed, Mrs.————)

Just like that. The dentist apparently gave the patient's mouth a cursory survey, maybe made a few X-ray films to lend a "scientific" air to the examination, and shook his head over the problem, said St-t! St-t!; in that sympathetic way, and firmly but gently informed the lady that her best bet would be to get rid of all those treacherous teeth now. You know, he probably followed up with the old one-two, a tooth with infection around the root or a "dead" tooth is a menace until it is removed . . . and the poor ignorant patient succumbed without a thought of having medical advice about it. Maybe it would have been useless to consult her doctor about it. Too many medical practitioners are willing to sacrifice teeth on the flimsiest of suspicions or just on the off chance.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Imperial Gallon

From an item in your column I infer there is about a gallon of blood in the body of an adult. I had always thought there is two gallons of blood in the body.

(G. L.)

Answer—Physiologist estimate there is a little more than a gallon of blood in a healthy adult's body.

Tired Husband

My husband, 35 years old, is tired all the time, can't get enough sleep, goes to bed early and can hardly get up mornings, has pains in shoulders, thinks it is old age coming on. I wonder if he lacks something in his diet.

(Mrs. K. W. Oklahoma)

Answer—from this distance I can't even guess. But I can tell you it can do no harm if your husband will begin taking a daily ration of iodine. Send stamped self addressed envelope for the pamphlet "Iodine Ration."

Vitamin D

Henry Borsook, M.D., professor of biochemistry, California Institute of Technology, says in his book on Vitamins (Viking Press, N.Y. City) that vitamin D is the only vitamin with which at present there is danger of harmful overdosage. The effects of overdosage for a long period are deposits of calcium where normally no such deposits occur—for example, in the kidneys and blood vessels. (J. W. T.)

Answer—Dr. Borsook's book is one of the best for lay readers. To the best of my knowledge and belief, there is no substantial ground for the notion that "overdosage" of vitamin D for a long period may cause "deposits of calcium" in the kidneys, the blood vessels or anywhere else. There I go again—but this is my opinion and I'm stuck with it. In later editions, I venture to predict, Dr. Borsook will delete the imaginary "deposits of calcium" and say simply that there is no danger of "overdosage" of any known vitamin in any circumstance. Vitamins are food, not medicine.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

"You have stones in your mouth," is said of a person who stutters or speaks indistinctly.

In "Hudibras" (1663) Samuel Butler wrote:

The orator who once
Did fill his mouth with pebble stones
When he harangued.

When the ancient Athenian orator Demosthenes (384-322 B.C.) was a young man he had a frail body, weak lungs and a shrill voice. Plutarch tells us that Demosthenes "had a weakness and a stammering in his discourse, that it was difficult for the audience to understand him."

It seems that, among other handicaps, the young orator was unable to pronounce the sound expressed by the letter "r."

The first time he spoke in public his audience laughed at him.

The methods adopted to overcome these handicaps are related by Plutarch. "As for his personal defects," says that writer, "Demetrius the Phalerean gives us an account of the remedies he applied to them; and he says he had it from Demosthenes in his old age. The hesitation and stammering of his tongue he corrected by practising to speak with pebbles in his mouth; and he strengthened his voice by running or walking up hill, and pronouncing some passage in an oration or a poem, during the difficulty of breath which that caused."

The unusual version of this is that Demosthenes overcame his impediment of speech by standing on the shore with pebbles in his mouth and declaimed in competition with the roaring of the sea.

It has become a classic example of persistent and industrious application to improve oneself and to excel in a calling in spite of great handicaps.

In the naval dockyard, where many Chinese were employed before the Japanese invasion, many Chinese are turning up brandishing old British dockyard passes and getting re-employment.

Though the formal surrender of Hong Kong possible may not be signed for two or three days, some peacetime customs have already been brought back by the navy. The names of ships, concealed during the war for security reasons, now are being put back on prominently and some ships are scraping and burnishing their gun muzzles in pre-war fashion.

A nine o'clock curfew is in force in Hong Kong but there have been no untoward incidents.

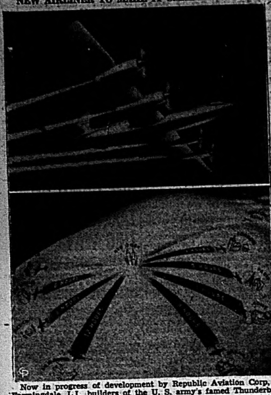
NEW AIRLINER TO MAKE IT SMALLER WORLD



Now in progress of development by Republic Aviation Corp. at Farmingdale, L.I., builders of the U. S. army's famed Thunderbolt fighter plane, the luxury liner Rainbow, shown in drawing at top, will add another grain of truth to the old bromide that it's a small world. The chart, below, illustrates just how much shrinkage the old sphere will undergo when you can fly from New York to London in nine hours, Moscow in 12, Mexico City in five, etc. The Rainbow will accommodate 40 passengers, 1,600 pounds of baggage and 1,700 pounds of cargo. It will have pressure and noise-proof cabin with complete dining facilities, a lounge, a bar, plane-to-shore telephone, motion pictures and other luxuries hitherto undreamed of in an airplane. Its tremendous power, it is said, will make it possible for the rainbow to fly over or around storms.

CUT PRIORITY POINTS TO 130 FOR DISCHARGE

This Score is Required for Those Soldiers Serving in Canada

Ottawa, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Defence Minister Abbott announced Tuesday a reduction of 10 points to 130 in the priority point score required by soldiers in Canada for immediate discharge from the army.

The point score of 130 required will be as computed as of last March 31.

The original minimum point score requirement for immediate discharge was set at 180 following the end of the war in Europe and has been progressively reduced as repatriation and demobilization proceeded.

Mr. Abbott said that not all personnel with high priority points can be released at once as key personnel must be retained for various duties, the most important being that of keeping the demobilization machinery functioning smoothly and efficiently.

Earlier, a serviceman spokesman, amplifying previous statements on demobilization of personnel in Canada to their old jobs, farming or educational institutions, said that no distinction was made between general service personnel and N.R.M.A. troops.

However, he noted that men with low discharge point scores—such as N.R.M.A. men — would only get leave of absence while high-point general servicemen would get final discharges.

Must Reach Score.

He explained that nobody could obtain final discharges until they reached the required point score. The discharge score now is at 140 points, having just been reduced from 150. All personnel in Canada who have fewer than 140 points but who have jobs or colleges to go to can get leave of absence which will only become final discharges when the score is dropped to their total.

The relaxation of the discharge regulations means, in effect, that nearly every man who so desires can get out of the army in Canada. Repatriated men could get out as soon as they get back home. The only deterrent apparently is the speed with which the demobilization machinery can handle the discharges. Long-service overseas men naturally will have the highest priority in entering the discharge stream.

Men intending to resume studies will be asked to produce college enrollment documents.

A service spokesman said the men could go back to jobs "provided they can produce the necessary letter from their employer declaring the man to be entitled to employment under the terms of the Reinstatement in Civilian Occupation Act, that the employment exists and that the employer is in a position to reinstate the serviceman."

Comedy of Pens

By ASTLEY HAWKINS

Aboard U.S.S. Missouri, Tokyo Bay, Sept. 4 —(Reuters)— Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, Commander-in-Chief of the British Pacific Fleet, was involved in a comedy of pens Sunday when he signed the Japanese surrender document on behalf of the United Kingdom.

The third Allied representative to sign after Gen. MacArthur had signed for the United Nations, Admiral Fraser found several pens for his use on the signature table. Gen. MacArthur had made a point of signing two copies of the surrender with separate pens which he then gave to Lt.-Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, and Lt.-Gen. Sir Arthur Percival who stood by him at his special request following their recent release from Japanese imprisonment.

Admiral Fraser called on Vice-Admiral Rawlings and Rear-Admiral E. J. P. Brind to attend him and then gave them the pens with which he signed the documents. They swiftly pocketed the historic souvenirs.

Later, it was disclosed that the pens which Sir Bruce used had been earmarked for presentation to President Truman and the American Museum.

The whole thing was cleared up with a hearty laugh later when Admiral Fraser was informed of what had been intended to be done with the pens. They were immediately surrendered by Admirals Rawlings and Brind and eventually will reach the recipients originally intended.

Surrender Terms Signed by Japan

Article by article, here is what Japan agreed to do under the terms of surrender.

1. Accept all provisions of the Potsdam declaration.
2. Surrender unconditionally all armed forces.
3. Cease hostilities forthwith and preserve and save from damage all ships, aircraft and military and civil property.
4. Command Imperial General Headquarters to issue orders to all field commanders everywhere to surrender their forces unconditionally.
5. See that all civil, military and naval officials obey and enforce all orders of the Supreme Allied Commander.
6. Carry out in good faith under Allied direction the Potsdam declaration under which free institutions may be established leading to the restoration of sovereignty.
7. Liberate all Allied war prisoners and civilian internees and see that they arrive safely at debarkation points.
8. Acknowledge that the authority of the Emperor and the Japanese Government is subject to the will of the Supreme Commander.

The Potsdam ultimatum calls for the elimination "for all time" of the authority and influence of those who led Japan into the war, and stern justice for war criminals.

The terms also call for:

Occupation of Japanese territory until the Allies feel the peace of the world is assured.

Seaman Tells Of Kango Cho Who Beat Prisoners

By MORRIE LANDSBERG

Tokyo, Sept. 4 (AP)—Even the prisoners didn't know his name, so they called him Kango Cho—the man who organized the beatings at Ofuna internment camp near Yokohama. And, said LS. Sidney Gibbs of Warrington, Lancashire, England, Kango Cho beat one prisoner until he died.

LS. Gibbs, 24-year-old survivor of the lost British submarine H.M.S. Stratagem got to know all sorts of Japanese captors since he was captured off Malacca Nov. 22, 1944. He is one of eight—of the 56 man crew of the Stratagem — who escaped after enemy depth charges split her open on the bottom of the sea.

"When Japs picked us up they made us row, and hit us with what looked like pick handles," he related. "Aboard their ship, they put us in a three-by-six foot room and forced us to stand with our hands held up. They gave us no food or water."

But for brutality, LS. Gibbs will always remember Kango Cho. "I have a picture of him," he said. "I hope they catch up with him some day and make him pay for what he did to us."

A British gunner, Lawrence Huitson, 28 of Caterham, Surrey, 7England, survived not only the fighting in Singapore and life in a series of prison camps, but lived through the sinking of a ship he identified as the American liner President Harrison, which had been seized by the Japanese at Shanghai.

Huitson said an American submarine torpedoed and sank the Harrison and the Rakyo Maru the night of Sept. 12, 1944, without knowing they were transporting 2,200 Allied prisoners of war from Singapore to Japan. He said only 500 of the prisoners survived as the ships went down so quickly—the Harrison within 20 minutes.

Aussies Contact Japs In Balikpapan Area

San Francisco, Sept. 4(AP)—Australian troops have made contact with Japanese forces in the Balikpapan area of Borneo and surrender negotiations are under way, the Melbourne radio reported today.

The broadcast, recorded by the American Broadcasting Company said Australian fliers had observed Japanese troops with white flags for the last week, although there had been no previous response to surrender leaflets.

WAR PRISONERS PART IN FOOD PRODUCTION

London, Sept. 4 —(CP)— The increasingly important part being played by war prisoners in the production of Britain's food was disclosed by the Ministry of Agriculture today in a report which showed there are 22,500 fewer regular workers on the land than a year ago.

The number of prisoners engaged in agricultural work was 54,500 last June compared with 25,300 in June, 1944, the Ministry said.

Night Watchman Prevents Robbery Despite Beating

Port Dalhousie, Sept. 5 —(CP) — Josiah Peckham, 69, night watchman at Lakeside Park, was slugged across the face and tied up early Tuesday by five men wearing black masks, but he wriggled free 10 minutes later and raised an alarm which prevented the thugs from stealing three safes containing $10,000.

The robbers abandoned a stolen truck and a stolen car, which they had backed up to the doors of the express office in the park. Heavy safes had been pushed to the back of the vehicles, but the gang fled before they could remove any loot.

It was the second time in a week that park employees had foiled robberies. Last Monday, Helen Glennie, 23, cafeteria cashier, sprinted after a 'teen-aged youth who had grabbed a bag of money from her safe, and held him with a wrestling hold until help arrived.

Mr. Peckham said today he had finished his rounds and was walking past the grandstand on the park to go home. A man, about 30 years of age, leaped at him from the darkness, hit him across the face with his fist, and yelled, "shut up."

Four more men, all wearing black masks over their faces and with hats pulled down over their ears, ran from the grandstand, trussed him up with clothes line, and dumped him into the refreshment booth under the stand.

They padlocked the door before they went to the express office about 30 yards away.

After climbing out the front of the booth, he roused Sidney Brookson Parks manager, and Brookson turned on a light in his cottage while he telephoned the police. It is believed the gang had a look-out, who spotted the light, and gave the alarm.

A car, stolen from Toronto Saturday night had been backed up to a door, and a safe weighing about 1,000 pounds was propped against the trunk. A large safe weighing about 3,000 pounds had been pushed to the other door, where another truck was backed in. A third safe about 1,000 pounds, had been attacked with a crow bar, but had not been opened or moved.

Today, Hamilton City Police recovered a car stolen during the night from Port Dalhousie. Wires had been crossed, and a window had been smashed. It is believed the gang used the car for their getaway.

An interesting record book was shown to your correspondent by Mr. Lindsay Mumby. The first entry is dated Dec. 11th, 1874. The record is that of Maple Leaf cheese factory and shows the price of cheese at that date to be ten and one half cents per pound. Other entries show sugar purchased at 12 cts pound and flour $3.50 per cwt. Barrel salt $1.00, peas 60 cts and rye 70 cts. per bushel. Eight per cent interest was paid however on money borrowed. Many names appear on the records, most of whom have long passed into the great beyond. However two are mentioned frequently who are well known and still reside in this district namely John Webb now 101 years of age and Geo. Luery now resident in Stirling. The last entry is Nov. 26th, 1885.

MEN WHO THINK OF TOMORROW ARE PLANNING "COOKING WITH LIGHTS"

Miracles of cookery performed not by the heat of a fire, but by the heat of light, are planned for the kitchens of tomorrow! Ovens 'ined with "electric light bulbs" will cook your foods better in shorter time with the even, easily controlled penetrating heat of infra-red rays!

It's better things for living such as this that your Victory Bonds will buy tomorrow!

Men who think of tomorrow say

"HOLD ON TO YOUR VICTORY BONDS TODAY" . . .

VICTORY BONDS have helped us to fight and win a war.

They've minimized the danger of a war-inflation economy.

They've formed a backlog of safely-invested buying power that will benefit the individual and the nation when the danger of inflation is over.

But remember: inflation strikes hardest after a war.

What our Victory Bonds will do—if we hold on to them—is to keep prices down until supply meets demand...when a dollar will buy a full dollar's worth of goods.

Think of tomorrow before thinking of cashing a Victory Bond!

30th Birthday St. Julien Chapt. Is Celebrated

New Chapter Flag Presented and Laid on Altar of Christ Church

Acceptance and dedication of a handsome new chapter flag marked the 30th birthday celebration of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E. held in Christ Church and the Parish Hall on Tuesday night.

At an impressive ceremony held in the church, Mrs. A. E. McColl, former regent of the Chapter, formally presented the flag to the Regent, Mrs. E. Neate, before a large audience of Chapter members and friends.

Mrs. Neate in turn presented it to the Rev. J. G. Sparling, rector of the church, who laid it on the altar and officiated at the ceremony of dedication. The banner was in turn presented to the Chapter Standard-Bearer, Mrs. S. Cherrie.

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, E.D., in a brief address recalled the famous battle of St. Julien, where Canadians covered themselves with glory in the First Great War, and after which the Chapter was named. He paid sterling tribute to members of the Chapter and the fine example of national and community spirit they have displayed in their war activities.

The chapter was "born" on Sept. 2, 1915, it was pointed out and had done yeoman service in all phases of work since its inception. A feature of the dedication ceremonies was seen in the presence of five of the original members of the Chapter: Mrs. McColl, Regent Mrs. E. Neate, Mrs. A. Bryans, Miss H. Belair, Mrs. W. Gilbert. Mrs. R. A. Backus, another charter member was absent due to vacation.

Adjourning to the Parish Hall, the Chapter and its friends held prayers and Mrs. Neate briefly addressed them. She pointed out that the Chapter had raised $23,100 during the years of the war just ended. She added that it was due to the fine co-operation of all concerned that the raising of this amount was possible. "The Chapter", she said, "has never refused a request for assistance from any source." Refreshments concluded the ceremonies. Flowers which decorated the church were the gift of Mrs. A. Symons, former regent.

It's nice with a blouse wardrobe, says the young crowd, when it comes to the jumper frock. Black and white shepherd check woollen is used for a smart jumper made with deep U-neckline, short sleeves and curved, semi-square pockets all edged with bias fabric.

Local Red Cross Rooms Reopen On September 8th

Activities of Women's War Work Committee Not Yet Completed

The following communication has been received by Mrs. W. C. Mikel, chairman of Women's War Work Committee of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society from the chairman of the Ontario Division,

"The program of the Women's War Work Committee is not yet completed. We still have a job to finish. While we are all experiencing great joy and relief due to the sudden cessation of hostilities in the Far East, we must remember our responsibilities.

"Our Overseas Commissioner, Colonel R. W. Frost, has forwarded to us a detailed report showing beyond question of doubt that a great need still exists for clothing. The requirements of the United Kingdom will continue to be the first care of Overseas Headquarters.

"The Red Cross workrooms in Ontario which were closed for the summer should be opened at once. Quotas are ready and materials available."

The Belleville Red Cross rooms, Campbell Street, will be opened on Saturday morning, Sept. 8, from 10 to 12 for giving out and receiving sewing and knitting and Mrs. Mikel is hoping that the regular workers and many new ones will help in the task ahead. There is a large quota of children's clothing to be made and to finish it will demand many willing workers.

The different groups are asked to meet as usual commencing September 10.

"Y" Boys Hold Sport Meet

An enthusiastically contested sports meet was held at the Fair Grounds on Wednesday, August 29th, as a fitting windup to the Summer Fun Club activities. The boys were divided into groups based on a mathematical schedule combining age, height and weight, a method in general use among the Y. M. C. A.'s of North America for producing more equal competition. For this meet four classifications were used, Group 1—boys whose quotients were below 600; Group 2—boys whose quotients were between 600 and 649; Group 3—boys whose quotients were between 650 and 699; Group 4—boys whose quotients were over 700.

In Group 1, Bobby Alexander and Jackie Doig battled neck and neck for the all round championship, ending up with Alexander 13 points, Doig 12 points, and Bill Whittaker in third place with 6 points. There were 12 entries in the group.

In Group 2, Bill Johnstone surprised by taking the championship over the favorite, Don Ashline. Johnstone gathered 15 points, Ashline 9, and Doug Parsons came third with 7. (12 entrants in group).

Group 3 saw Doug Soule romp away with first in each event, and a third in the open bicycle race to amass 19 points, George Bongard was second with 9, and Bill Clarke third with 5. (7 entrants in group).

In Group 4 Bill and Harry Davis tied with 12 points each, and it took the points Harry gained by winning the Open Bicycle Race to give him the edge, winning the championship with 15 points. Brother Bill was second with 12, and Jim MacPherson copped third with 7. (7 entrants).

Results of the individual events were as follows, some of the times being very good considering that the oldest boy participating was 14 years of age only this month.

Despite 10-0 Walloping Tigers Gave Yanks Behind Dizzy Trout O'Neil Fears New York Team

Trout Thinks He Will Win Five in Swing Around the Circuit

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Steve O'Neill expects the Yankees to give his Detroit Tigers the toughest wrestle for the American League flag despite the humiliating 10-0 walloping the New Yorkers took in the opener of their seven-game series.

With a 2 1-2 game lead and 27 to play, Steve hasn't time to keep looking back over his shoulder at the pursuing mob but he does highly respect the Yank threat, at least until the Bengals are safely past the stadium.

"Washington, St. Louis and New York are right on our heels," observed the Tiger manager before yesterday's game "but I think the toughest club is this Yankee team. Washington's knucklers bother us. However, we should be about ready to even up some old scores there. And St. Louis, like us, has to play most of its games on the road.

"Cleveland would make a run for it too if Boudreau was in there at shortstop. They still could do it with Bobby Feller but those two games they lost Labor Day really hurt."

Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who shut out the Yanks with seven hits yesterday has mapped out an interesting schedule calling for five personal victories during the swing around the east.

The National League popped up with another headache. St. Louis and Pittsburgh went 12 innings to an 8-8 tie, called to allow the Pirates to catch a train for home. It appeared unlikely the game would be finished unless the National League orders it replayed on an open date in the final week of the season.

With Cardinals trailing Chicago by four games, this contest could prove vital in the pennant race

All other teams are unscheduled.

SKAFF "BEANED" BY PITCHED BALL AT SYRACUSE

Taken Unconscious to Hospital and in Dangerous Condition

By the Associated Press

Mike Skaff, outfielder for Baltimore Orioles, was hit on the head by a pitched ball at Syracuse in an International League game last night and suffered a fractured skull.

The accident happened in the second game of a doubleheader. Skaff fell unconscious after being hit by the ball thrown by Francisco Davila. His condition was described as "dangerous" by hospital attaches.

Syracuse won the game, 7-6, after the Orioles took the opener 4-0, as Johnny Podgany chalked up his 20th victory with a four-hit performance.

Newark swept a twin bill from Jersey City, 4-2 and 9-3, stretching their string to 17 victories in 18 starts. The first place Montreal Royals beat Buffalo, 3-2, behind Ray Hathaway's three-hit twirling. Toronto defeated Rochester, 6-4, to stay four games back of the second-place Newark Bears.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 5—(AP)—Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, the new Women's Tennis champion, is reported to have her eye on a theatrical contract. That's one reason for her "won or else" attitude during the late title tourney . . . When Paul Schreiber, Yankee batting practice pitcher who hadn't hurled a Major League game in his 21 years with the club was mowing down the Tigers in the late innings yesterday, a scribe wisecracked: "He'd better not look too good. They're liable to sell him to Chicago."

Service Dept.

Lieut. Chuck Gelatka, former Giants' end who flew about 90 missions over the Pacific, is on the way out of the marines but likely won't return to football . . . If you think the current big league races are peculiar, the 14th Naval District League in Hawaii had eight out of 10 teams in the running on Aug. 24—with only 13 games separating them—and the fourth-place club was only one game away from the top.

Out of the Red

Red Smith, who just left the Chicago Cubs to help coach the football Giants, really is on the spot . . . Steve Owen says he has a $50 bet that the Cardinals won't win the pennant and if Red's Cubs don't come through he'll fine him the fifty . . . "It's a long season, so it shouldn't be hard to find an excuse—if I need one," says Steve.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

The Right Thing.

Ed. Shortt, "Y" supervisor of the programs of the city playgrounds, and various boys and girls organizations has just concluded a very successful season with the youngsters.

Ed's idea is rather an unique one in sports annals for the kids. He not only teaches them the ethics of sportsmanship; how to play the various games but instructs them in organization. For instance the other day at one of the West End Playground meets, Ed's youthful proteges handled the entire show themselves. They organized their own sub-committees; prize lists and scheduled the events. The "president" of the affair had to take time out from his admin duties to indulge in a few races.

"The kids are doing a swell job," related Ed, "the other day the sense of responsibility that comes from these jobs has worked wonders for the kids. Now they can go out on their own and arrange any sports meet they may have in mind. Of course the programs are supervised, and only a few minor changes have been necessary so far."

The genial Ed. is doing a fine job with the young boys and girls in his charge. Clean wholesome sport properly conducted is a distinct threat to the growth of juvenile delinquency that is on the upsurge at present in various parts of the country. The spirit of fair play and sportsmanship which athletics develop in children pays big dividends in the future. It is an investment in the youth of the country; a bond from which can be clipped the coupons of clean living, healthy bodies and good citizenship.

Lieut. "Friday" Dainard, former star hurler for the Picton baseball squad, just home from the wars says the Dutch Peters and Hansels have a decided natural ability for hockey. Fooling around with some of the boys last winter on an ice-covered outdoor pond. "Friday" noticed a few Dutchmen watching the ice antics with more than passing interest. So he skated over to them. "Like to play" he smiled. The Peters nodded their heads and the eventual outcome was a game arranged between the village team and the soldiers.

But what to do for equipment Only a few pairs of skates were available, definitely not enough to outfit two teams.

So "Friday" got the noggin working and remembered an American outfit billeted a few miles away. He and a companion secured a jar of "fighter fluid" and contacted the "Yanks." They came back with plenty of equipment-enough for four teams. The game was played and the Canucks just managed to edge the Dutchmen by a goal or two.

"Those dyke-builders really know their hockey" was Friday's opinion. "Their stickhandling and shooting was good and a couple of those chunky mynheers could really skate."

Outside of the disastrous 7th innings when the Kingston Victorias softball team cut loose the mushball balloon and allowed seven Point Anners to cross the plate with what proved the death-knell to Vic hopes, the game in Napanee last night had all the earmarks of being as nifty a sample of softball as has been seen in these parts for some time. Holochuk and Maracle respective hurlers battled closely for six innings neither giving nor asking quarter. Both teams played smart ball behind them for the majority of the game and it was a nip and tuck struggle, one of those pastimes when anything could happen, until the Limestone lads blimp soared in the seventh. After that, it was just going through the motions. Point Anne were quick to seize opportunities and came through with hits when the opposition cracked. Incidentally Umpire Frawley who hails from Kingston ranks with the best of the arbiters hereabouts.

LESSON NO 773
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An eager beaver with a hep rep is always on the watchout for an endplay. He keeps his eyes peeled for one whenever there is any kind of a finesse hanging around.

As declarer at a six heart contract, south falls heir to a neat strip-and-endplay problem in this deal:

NORTH
♠A 6 4
♥Q 7 5 3
♦A 10 6
♣K Q 9

WEST
♠K J 10 8 7
♥8
♦K Q J 8
♣10 4 2

EAST
♠9
♥10 4
♦9 7 5 4 3 2
♣J 8 5 3

SOUTH
♠Q 5 3 2
♥A K J 9 6 2
♦None
♣A 7 6

In early bidding, west had stuck in a call of one spade and is suspected of having that king. When his opening lead is the diamond king, assume he has the tiffany queen with the jack as a kicker.

A look at dummy tells south there are no losers outside of the spades. And it looks bad for the ditch diggers if declarer has to lead that suit. The prospects are discouraging.

Customary handling of such a combination is to win the ace and lead a small spatula toward the queen. If east has the king, only one trick will be lost in that suit by such a method.

But if west has that king, any way that declarer manoeuvres the cards must lose two tricks. On the other hand, a strip-and-endplay can hold this deal to a loss of only one trick.

Taking the first trick with the diamond ace, south drops a spade on it. Two trump rounds, trumping the diamond six in south, and three clubs land the lead in dummy for a lead of the diamond ten.

If south trumps it, he must later give away two spade tricks. Instead, when east is unable to cover, south chucks a small spade on it and lets west gather it in.

By this time stripped to diamonds and spades, west is endplayed. His return of a diamond lets dummy trump and south get rid of a spade. A spade return simply lets declarer make both ace and queen.

The purpose of stripping an opponent is to see that he comes to no good end.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma woke me up this morning to get me out of the habit of sleeping too late no matter if it's vacation or not, saying, And there's another thing, young man. Your father and I have increased your allowance during vacation at your own suggestion, and if I remember rightly you were suppose to make up for it by doing exter work around the house, and vacation is drawing to a close but the exter work I dont mean anything like the silly suggestions you made the other day.

Meaning my 2 ideas to sharpen pop's new razor blades to make them even sharper and to reduce ma's expenses by taking out the spots in her clothes with her bottle of stain remover, and I said, Well then okay, ma, I tell you what. I'll keep out of your way while you're doing your own work around the house, and if I ask you more than one question an hour you can dock me a half a cent for every exter question, I said.

And suppose I'm out all day, that will be pretty easy for you, wont it? ma said, and I said, It will be pretty easy for you too, ma, because you wont even have to listen to one question an hour.

Suppose I like to be asked an occasional question, suppose I enjoy your company to a certain extent? ma said, and I said, Well then okay, ma, I'll garantee to interrupt you with a question every half hour no matter what you're doing, and I'll garantee to make the questions so unusual I'll keep you surprised and interested, so how's that for a swell idea, ma?

The general result being we comprised on 2 other ideas, one being for me to get up earlier without so many special invitations, and the other being to make my own bed when Nora is too busy.

TWO INJURED

Clarksburg, W.Va., Sept. 5 — (AP)—One soldier and a locomotive engineer were injured early today when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's National Limited sideswiped a troop train a mile west of here.

Three cars of the westbound limited and all five cars of the eastbound troops train were derailed.

Point Anne Wins Deciding Game From Kingston Vics by 8-3, Enters Next Playdown Round

Score Seven Runs in Seventh to Break Up Swell Pitching Duel

It had been a beautiful ball game up to the seventh innings. In fact the Kingston Victorias two-run lead was beginning to loom up as big as the proverbial house, and Point Anne's hopes of victory fading faster than those shades of night. Then it happened. The Kingston team blew higher than a stratosphere plane; the Point Anners shot over seven runs and that was that.

In short, the Pointers won the third and deciding game of the first round "A" Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns in Napanee Tuesday night defeating the Vics 8-3 and now will meet either Oshawa Mayfairs or Peterborough Plazas in the second joust.

Holachuk for Vics and Pat Maracle, Ox Point moundsmen had duelled beautifully for six innings. Each hurler had restricted his opposition to three hits and one run during this period and it looked as though the game would go on indefinitely. Fowler, Vics second baseman strode to the plate and cocked a saucy double somewhere in right field. Maracle retired MacGregor and Atanis lofted a high fly, that went over Bradshaw's head in left field for a home run. It looked like the big break of the game.

Came the bottom half of the seventh and the deluge. Maracle went out and Bradshaw shot a sharp single to centre. Loft got a life on Jordan's error; Whalen drew a walk and the sacks were loaded. Murney Green drove a hot grounder through second tying the score. Art Genereaux followed suit and the parade was on. Stone, the Vics kid catcher muffed a lob infield fly and the whole infield went wacky. Huck struck out and Whitehead shot a double to right field. Bradshaw went out to end the agony—but seven runs had crossed the plate and with them went the Vic's hope of victory.

Maracle in Good Form.

Maracle allowed them another hit for the balance of the pastime. The slim Indian was in good form. He allowed six blows, over the nine-inning route two of them coming in the sixth. He walked three and struck out the same number. The Point Anners, however, played good ball behind him erring only on two occasions.

Holachuk, with the exception of the seventh had the Phil Loft squad well under control. He struck out six and walked five. Vics played good ball behind him except when they temporarily blew their top in the lucky innings. The Pointers scored their first run in the initial inning, when Whalen who had singled and gone to third on outs came home on a daring slide after MacGregor had muffed one. Point Anne loaded the sacks in the 3rd innings on Whalen's double, an error and a walk, but with two down Holachuk bore down and struck out Whitehead.

Vics got two men aboard in the fourth on MacGregor's single and Smart's double, but Maracle retired the third man before any damage was done.

Atanis with his homer led the Vics hit parade. The remaining five clouts came from the bludgeons of Fowler, MacGregor, Kinnear, Smart and Jordan.

Whalen Had Perfect Day.

Whalen for the Pointers had a perfect day at bat getting a double and a single and drawing three walks. Genereaux again played a bang-up game afield besides getting a couple of baseknocks. Whitehead also donated a pair of blows to the cause with Horwood connecting for a double and Murney Green and Huck singles.

The teams:

Kingston Vics: Thomson ss; Fowler 3b; MacGregor 2b; Atanis cf; Kinnear rf; Smart lf; Jordan 1b; Stone c; Holachuk p.

Point Anne: Bradshaw lf; Loft rf; Whalen 2b; Green c; Genereaux cf; Whitehead 3b; Huck 1b; Horwood ss; Maracle p.

The score by innings:

Kingston V. 001 002 000—3 6 5
Pt. Anne .. 100 000 70x—8 10 2

Umpires: Frawley, Kingston at plate; Bawden, Belleville, bases.

Belleville Rinks Prominent In Bowling Tourney

One of the most successful mixed double tournaments ever to be held in this city was staged at the Belleville Bowling Club lawn on Labor Day under ideal weather conditions and excellent greens. There were 57 rinks in play necessitating a double draw and the tournament was not finished until after the midnight hour. The rinks represented came from Toronto, Kingston, Deseronto, Peterborough, Stirling, Havelock, Campbellford, and Warkworth. The whole tournament was under the direction of Past President Harvey Stewart and his committee of Elgin Ford and Doug Rowe and everything was done for the comfort and convenience of the visiting bowlers.

Belleville rinks figured prominently in the prize list with Mrs. George Watkin and L. E. McLean winning the three-game high and the New Queens Hotel trophy with a score of 45 plus 18. Mrs. Irene Ward and Harry Bryant won the Tip Top Tailor trophy with a score of 45 plus eight. Mr. Gault and his partner from Kingston were third high with a score of 43 plus seven. Mrs. Edith Robson and Mark Vanner were next with a score of 42 plus three, while Mr. Gage and partner of Kingston were next in line with a score of 41 plus ten. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson of Belleville were next with a score of 41 plus 2 and Mrs. Gerow and C. R. Clapp with a score of 36.

The two game high winner was Mrs. W. Gilbert and Gordon Watkin with a score of 42 plus 11, while the one-game high winner was Dwight Bennett and partner of Campbellford with a score of 37 plus 1.

Four Are Killed When Passenger Train Derailed

Arcadia, Calif., Sept. 5 —(AP) —The two locomotives and seven cars of a 16-car Santa Fe passenger train were derailed in a spectacular smashup Tuesday night, and a spokesman for the railroad said four persons were killed and 35 to 40 injured.

The second section of the eastbound California Limited hit a siding switch about a mile from the Santa Anita racetrack and the locomotives crashed over on their left sides. Two baggage cars and two passenger coaches jammed together and three other passenger cars left the rails.

A Santa Fe spokesman said the cause of the wreck was not known.

Track was torn out for approximately 200 feet.

An army surgeon amputated the crushed right leg of an unidentified male passenger. Workmen used acetylene torches to cut through twisted debris to free trapped passengers.

AT THE CAPITOL — It's ship ahoy in "Here Come the Waves," with Betty Hutton perched atop the strong shoulders of Bing Crosby and Sonny Tufts, coming next to the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Sheriff of Sundown," starring Allan Lane.

Canadian Sport Snapshot

By ALAN HARVEY

Toronto, Sept. 5 —(CP)— One of the principal factors in the surprising surge of Toronto Maple Leafs from basement to first division in the International Baseball League has been the strong right arm of Woody Crowson, 27-year-old pitcher from Hartnett County, N. C.

As of Sept. 1, Crowson headed Leaf hurlers with a base-hit average of .195 and his record of nine runs batted in was tops among the moundsmen. In addition, the 180-pound hurler who started with Meyorden of the North Carolina State League in 1938 enjoyed the respectable record of 11 victories against eight defeats.

Crowson is the only pitcher in the International League to achieve the iron-man stunt of winning both ends of a doubleheader —and he did it because his wife was sick.

It happened June 30. Woody won the first game 8-2, scattering five hits and three walks. In the afterpiece he really bore down, yielding two hits and no passes. Leafs won, 7-0.

Afterward it was learned Crowson had made a special bargain with Manager Harry Davis to pitch both ends of the doubleheader. Crowson's wife was ill, so Woody contracted to work overtime June 30 on the condition he could stay in Toronto when the Leafs left for Buffalo, N. Y., the following night.

There have been two other attempted iron-man stunts this season, but both failed. Robert Katz of Syracuse Chiefs and Jean Pierre Roy of Montreal Royals each lost the second assignment after coming through in the first game.

Around the Circuit:

Maj. Joe Lamb, veteran of seven National Hockey League clubs, is back at his Ottawa home after 5 1-2 years in the army . . . Alex Shibicky, right wing with Neil and Mac Colville on the famed front line of New York Rangers, expects his discharge from the Royal Canadian Engineers this week . . . Manager Art Ross says Frankie Brimsek probably will be the last of Boston's ex-stars to leave the service. Mr. Zero now is in Tokyo Bay vicinity with the United States Coast Guard . . . Pittsfield in the Canadian-American loop expects to receive money and players as farm property of Cleveland Indians . . . More than $50,000 has been raised in Fort William's $200,000 drive for a community centre to house an artificial ice rink and other facilities.

STILL IN CONFERENCE

Chungking, Sept. 5 — (AP) — The semi-official central news agency said today that representatives of the Chungking government and the Yenan communists have completed a preliminary exchange of views and are now discussing specific issues in an effort to resolve differences which have threatened civil war.

Information Minister K. C. Wu emphasized, however, that reports that a preliminary agreement already had been reached by the conferees was premature. He declines to comment on progress, but estimated the talks might continue for another two weeks.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 6

"Another time then," he said rising. "It's been a beautiful day, Folly! Thanks to you and your sisters."

"That goes for both of us," the other boy added awkwardly.

A moment later they had donned their overcoats and were running lightly down the steep flight of steps leading to the street.

Folly waited, hoping Hilton had seen them go so that he would realize she was alone. Nothing happened and she began to wonder if he were still in his room. He might have left it. Stealing to the darkened dining room she could hear Chan was still early. Not yet nine o'clock. Marta and Hazel were gone. Chan would soon be disappearing into his quarters on the first floor.

A Lonely Girl

Folly meditated a moment then went to the mahogany desk which had belonged to her mother as a girl. Taking out a sheet of pale blue monogrammed stationery Folly scrawled in a large, childlike hand.

"I am all alone and it's Xmas night. I don't want to bother you but if you're not busy please come out and talk to me."

She signed and walking lightly approached Hilton's door. Slipped it underneath and fled down the hall almost running into Chan with a tray load of the best china.

"Why not look where going?" he said crossly.

"I'm sorry," Folly giggled. "Can I help you, Chan?" Want me to put those in the china closet?"

"Needing no help," he assured her but his glance at her flushed and flustered in the simple white dress her sisters had given her, was one of admiration.

"You going out, Missee Folly?"

"I don't think so. I shall read for awhile then I'll go to bed."

He grunted his approval and retired to the kitchen. Then she heard him turning out the lights and moving carefully down the basement stairs. Folly glanced at the clock. After nine and there had been no sound from Grandpa's room.

Hilton Comes Down

Feeling rather let down she had almost decided to go upstairs when the door opened and she heard Hilton coming down the hall.

"Still up?" he asked as if surprised.

"I've been watching the fire," she said lanquidly. A little stiffly because he should have made it sooner.

"I went for a walk after dinner," the man explained. "Just came in and found your message." To her chagrin he held it out and then dropped it into the flames. "I supposed of course you'd go someplace with your soldier."

"Don't call him MY soldier," she said sharply. "Marta's the one who invited him to dinner."

"I see," Hilton said amused. "How pretty you look in that white dress! Like a Christmas angel."

That was better. Folly's glance forgave him.

"How would you like to go to a movie? I don't think it's too late," Hilton suggested.

She had hoped he would take her dancing but at least this was a start. Hadn't she read many times that men were creatures of habit? If she could get him accustomed to going out with her, could make him think of her as really grown up, not as old as he was of course but a mature woman. . . .

Folly's voice was like a ripple of music as she replied, "All right, grandpa! Oh," she stopped blushing. "I forgot!"

Hilton Wood's laugh boomed through the old house.

"So you call me grandpa behind my back. And whose idea was that?"

"I think it was Marta's," Folly evaded.

She did not suspect that this untruthful remark roused the first touch of personal interest Hilton had felt in her sister. What a sense of humor the girl must have, he thought. He had certainly not seen any signs of it but it must be there beneath whatever she was worrying about. And if there was anything Hilton Wood liked in a girl it was being able to see a joke.

The truth was he had just broken off a near romance with one who couldn't. The inability of Evelyn Newman to take anything lightly, particularly a man's rather casual interest, had prevented him from falling in love with her.

Amused at Flirtation

She was too possessive, always making some excuse to telephone him, calling on his solitary evenings at home just to see if he were there. Her deadly intensity about it all made him uncomfortable. A man could never be off his guard with her, he had decided, and being as intelligent as he was attractive Hilton had stopped seeing her.

It was in this mood of not being particularly interested in any woman that Chan had selected him to be the head of a whole houseful of them. But at least they were careful not to intrude on his privacy. Hilton had his breakfast tray brought to his room by Chan. His own phone had a blind number a new number which only his men friends knew. He had his own private entrance and the big bath where he could splash and sing to his heart's content.

He did not object to the companionship of the three pretty girls for dinner. Even Folly's girlish attempt to flirt with him amused rather than annoyed him. So they called him Grandpa when they were alone? And this according to Folly, had been instigated by the oldest sister who had seemed less interested in him than any of them.

Man of Her Dreams

Hilton was thinking of this on the way to the movie while Folly walked beside him intensely conscious of the roughness of his heavy coat. She scarcely saw the picture on the screen so busy was she building up their romance in her own mind.

Hilton Wood was the embodiment of her dreams. A man handsome intelligent and older. Not as wealthy as she might have liked but with a good position which was all one could expect now days.

If she could only make him realize how really mature she was. If she could eliminate the competition offered by her sisters. Hazel of course would be away much of the time. And Marta, if he but knew it, was absorbed in her grief over Jim. Folly's imagination was working overtime so that it was a shock when Hilton said, "This is where we came in." "So it is," she sighed.

"Did you like the picture?" he asked on their way home.

"Yes, what I saw of it," she confessed. "The truth is I was thinking of other things."

"Is that nice? Here I take you out on Christmas night and you sit there thinking about some one else."

Talks of Marta's Love

"I was thinking about my sister Marta. She is very unhappy you know. She has been disappointed in love."

When Hilton said nothing she continued, "The man she was engaged to for seven years has just married some one else."

He would have changed the subject having no desire to pry into the love affairs of his landladies but Folly said, "Jim tried to make her think it was her fault. He asked her to marry him right away and when she wouldn't he married this other woman."

"If they had been engaged for seven years it wasn't exactly rushing things," he admitted.

"Oh, Jim's been urging her to marry him for years. But my hunch is he didn't really mean it this last time. The girl he married has been crazy about him for a long time. Jim probably wanted Marta to turn him down so he would have an excuse."

Folly Tries New Tactics.

Forgetting his determination not to become personal Hilton argued, "It sounds to me as if he might have married the other one on the rebound. Because he hoped to prove to himself and maybe your sister too that some one else really cared for him."

The conversation was not taking the turn Folly had anticipated when she brought up the subject of Marta's broken heart. But although they spoke now of other things she could see that Hilton was still treating her like a child. She must do something to make him see her differently.

"I guess all of us have our troubles," she said, trying new tactics. "I may seem young to you but I've been disappointed too."

"Is it possible?" he murmured politely.

A Compliment.

"Yes! I met a man in a black out several weeks ago. We couldn't see each other at all in this entry way of an apartment house where we had both taken shelter. I was so upset. The siren always frightens me," Folly admitted in a dramatic, melancholy voice.

"He talked to me and held my hand. And in my mind was the picture of a man tall and dark with strong features," she gave a little laugh, "You probably won't believe me but it was a man who looked like you."

"You flatter me," he said gravely.

"But this man wasn't like that at all. When the lights came on I discovered he was just a sandy-haired, freckled face boy."

"Like your soldier friend?" he inquired innocently.

"Exactly. That's who it was. How did you guess?"

Hilton Never in Love?

"Bruce seems like a pretty nice hap to me. He's what I'd call a regular guy. I don't know how the feminine department judges such things but almost any man would like him."

"He has no finesse," Folly objected. "You're different. No girl could ever tell what you were thinking about her. I mean whether or not you were interested. You might be terribly attracted to some one and not give a sign of it."

"I'm afraid I'm not that clever," he laughed. "If I were ever in love I'd be just as obvious and easy to read as your soldier."

"No, Hilton. Do you mind if I call you that. Mr. Wood sounds so formal."

"Why not Grandpa? I like that better."

Folly ignored this. "Perhaps you've never been in love," she said.

"Perhaps not," he granted. "I'm quite sure I've never had the kind of emotion you've been describing."

They had reached the steps now and she wished rather wildly that he would take her in his arms. The fact that he didn't did not discourage her. This little talk- this evening was the beginning of something. He was definitely more personal than he had been earlier in the evening.

"Goodnight!" she cooed as they went inside. "And thank you!"

"Thank you," he replied gallantly.

Folly Can't Sleep.

"Grandpa's still up," Marta said, coming in to say goodnight an hour later. "I could see him sitting before the fire."

"I am not surprised," Folly said. "He took me to a movie tonight and although we've been home for some time I've not been able to sleep."

Marta yawned, "How come?"

"Can a person sleep?" Folly inquired dreamily, "when for the first time in their lives they are falling in love?"

Sleep was driven from Marta's mind by her sister's statement.

"Just what do you mean by that," she demanded. "Who is falling in love with whom?"

Air Vice Marshal A. E. Middleton Kiwanis Speaker

Air Vice Marshal A. E. Middleton, C.B.E., Commanding Officer of No. 1 Training Command at Trenton Air Station, gave unstinted praise to those members of the R.C.A.F., who did not bask in the limelight but who carried out their office duties in an efficient and thorough manner and were an important link in the winning of the war, at the Kiwanis luncheon held at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. "These people are the ones that will have to be looked after in the rehabilitation scheme for they have suffered much especially in London, where bombing was a constant menace", said the speaker.

The Air Vice Marshal has been in the Air Force for twenty years and in the Second Great War served in London as personnel director and had under his command 2,000 members of the force, who were office workers. This force arranged all the problems of the entire force and they were kept busy with routine matters. He stated that fifty per cent of the personnel were airwomen and it was a problem to find accommodation for them because the billet had to be a moral one with good food and not too far from their work. He stated that many had to be shown about London on arrival because most of the time they were going to work in the dark and returning in the dark. "Casualties were extremely low despite the bombings", said the speaker, "but they were still under a severe mental strain". He showed that living conditions in 1943 were not bad because all the theatres were closed by ten and nothing could be heard in the big city but the rumbling of convoys through the city.

Rarely Absent.

He stated that the girls were very rarely absent from work although on many nights they got but little sleep. Jerry pounded the city practically every night from February, 1944, to April of the same year but took an awful beating because he lost 10 to 15 per cent of his fighters every night besides those he lost that never got across the channel. "Preparations for D-Day had to go on despite the bombings and the whole office force worked under difficulties and then on June 12th, 1945, the buzz bombs came and they were an awful bore. He stated that the children were wonderful under these bombings and the R. C. A. F. got very expert in destroying them. Air Vice Marshal Middleton stated that a great deal of glass was damaged but the total damage done by the bombs was not equal to a 20 minute raid over Berlin. The address was most interesting. The speaker was introduced by Dr. Sam Cronk and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Ormonde Butler.

President Lorne McDougall presided with "Spike" Pryke as sergeant at arms and Dorland Houston as song leader. Bill Navin presided at the piano. Flt. Lt. Hugh Keon a liberated prisoner of war addressed the club thanking all for the cigarettes sent. He described in detail his being shot down and incarceration in the prison camps being in Prussia, Poland and then back in Germany. He stated that anything could be obtained providing one had fags to barter.

Jap Army, Navy Casualties in War Totalled 5,085,000

684 War Vessels Sunk Or Damaged Diet Told

San Francisco, Sept. 6 (CP).—Tokyo radio said last night Japan's army and navy casualties in the war totalled about 5,085,000, but that the nation's armed strength at the end was nearly three times that with which it started the conflict. The radio said Japan began the war with an army of 1,900,000 and ended it with 5,500,000.

Allied air raids on Japan killed 241,309 and wounded 31,041, the Domei agency said today. Domei reported that the 554,350 casualty total was announced at Wednesday's Diet session.

Domei quoted a statement to the Japanese Diet that out of 10 battleships in the Japanese navy at the outbreak of the war, only four remained floating when hostilities ended "and none was commissionable."

Out of 25 aircraft carriers, 19 were lost and only two were capable of navigation at the end of hostilities, the agency said.

Of 47 cruisers, only three were capable of going into action.

Of 174 Japanese destroyers built before or during the war only 30 were navigable when the war ended, the agency stated.

"Sixty-four submarines were in commission when the war started and during the war 126 were newly commissioned," it added.

"A total of 131 were lost and 59 remained of which 50 were navigable."

Only 30 of 172 coast defence warships were found navigable.

"The imperial navy lost a total of 684 war vessels either sunk or damaged in the course of the war, and retained 523," Domei said.

Period of Extreme Labor Shortage Reported Passed

Ottawa, Sept. 6. (CP).—Evidence that the period of extreme labor shortage has passed was reported yesterday by the Labor Department in a review of the Canadian manpower situation at Aug. 24.

The number of jobs to be filled was 124,000 at Aug. 24, a reduction of 7,000 from the figures of two weeks previous. To fill these vacancies, 53,000 workers were available, 5,000 more than the fortnight before.

"The decrease in requirements for war production has been offset to some extent by an upward trend in the demand for workers for civilian industries", the Department said. "The downward trend in jobs and the upward swing in applicants indicate clearly that the post-war readjustment of the labor market is already under way".

By regions, the Department reported the number of available jobs, with unplaced workers in brackets, as: Maritimes 8,285 (4,208), Quebec 39,972 (19,509), Ontario 45,912 (16,126), Prairies 18,980 (9,178) and Pacific 1,0682 (4,849).

7 Million Japs To be Disarmed By Mid-October

San Francisco, Sept. 6. (AP)—About 7,000,000 Japanese soldiers and sailors will be disarmed and demobilized by mid-October, and 18 American divisions will police Japan — leaving approximately 120,000 other Americans free to go home, NBC Correspondent Merrill Mueller reported today from Yokohama.

Mueller said that 18 army divisions, plus Air Forces units, service troops and supporting naval forces needed to occupy Japan will total about 400,000 Army and 100,000 Navy men.

Japan's army had more than 370,000 fighting men stationed in the Yokohama-Tokyo, Yokosuka-Sugiyama area less than two weeks before Allied troops landed there, he reported. They withdrew as ordered.

EXPEL 180 NAZIS

New York, Sept. 6 — (CP) — The Bern radio said last night in a broadcast monitored by NBC that the expulsion from Switzerland of 180 members of the Nazi party to Zurich has brought to light a German plot to disseminate Nazi propaganda from Switzerland after the cessation of German hostilities.

Life Insurance Funds Freed For Housing Projects

Ottawa, Sept. 6. (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley said in a statement last night that the way has been cleared for life insurance companies to make agreements with the government for erection of rental housing projects under the National Housing Act with preference for ex-servicemen's families.

"I have reason to believe that the life insurance companies will have some definite plans to announce in the near future", said Mr. Ilsley.

It was necessary to make certain technical amendments in the housing legislation in order to facilitate large scale emergency operations by the life insurance companies. Because of the udgency of the situation these amendments had been made using the powers vested in the government by the War Measures Act.

The effect was to enable financial institutions to form subsidiary corporations, for the purpose of constructing, holding and managing low-cost and moderate-cost rental housin gprojects and in particular where such subsidiary corporations were confined to the minimum cost field with limited profits, to qualify them as limited dividend housing corporations which are eligible to secure from the crown long term loans at three per cent interest.

The Limited Dividend Housing Corporation method of financing low-rental projects, which was provided for in amendments made to the act last year, has the effect of reducing the rent for a housing unit by an amount of the order of $8.00 per month as compared with ordinary methods of financing rental housing of similar cost and quality.

Since the financial participation by the life insurance companies comes from funds which are virtually of a trustee character, the guaranteed return of 2 1-2 per cent interest, which has already been provided for under Section 11 of the National Housing Act, is made applicable to the type of emergenc yoperation contemplated by the amendments to the Act.

Allied Soldiers Protect Escorts From Ruffians

Rome, Sept. 6 (AP)—Allied soldiers, swinging fists and firing pistols, fought off jealous Italian youths last night when they attempted to strip the clothing from two Italian girls the soldiers were escorting. It was the second such incident in two nights.

Military police intervened and restored order after one bystander was struck in the foot by a pistol shot. Sporadic outbreaks continued between soldiers and youths posing as protectors of Italian girls, and police closed bars and cafes before midnight.

The night before a mob had gathered when Italian youths disrobed two girls who had been escorted by Allied soldiers.

LIMITED TAX CUTS FOR 1946 URGED BY PRES. TRUMAN

Asks for Continued Inductions of Men 18 to 25 Years For Two-Year Periods

Washington, Sept. 6 — (AP) — President Truman recommended to Congress today speedy enactment of a transitional tax bill to provide "limited tax reductions" for the calendar year 1946.

The recommendation was included in a 16,000-word message sent to Congress on the second day of its post-war emergency session.

"Like the tax adjustment act of 1945," the President said, "the new bill should aim principally at removing barriers to speedy reconversion and to the expansion of our peacetime economy."

At the same time Mr. Truman stressed that the United States must reconcile itself to the fact that tax-reduction opportunities are limited. He said "a total war effort cannot be liquidated overnight."

Estimating war expenditures for the current fiscal year will total about $50,000,000,000 of total expenditures of $66,000,000,000, the President said that with current receipts estimated at only $36,000,000,000, "we face an estimated deficit of $30,000,000,000 in the current fiscal year."

Recommendations.

In his message the President also recommended:

1. Enactment of "full employment" legislation.

2. Federal emergency benefit payments to provide weekly unemployment compensation up to a maximum of $25 throughout the country.

3. Amend the fair labor standards act substantially to increase the minimum wage level of 40 cents an hour which he described as "obsolete."

4. Extend the provisions of the second War Powers Act to preserve "the powers necessary" to keep the economy stabilized and "permit us to enter into the difficult period of readjustment without the threat of a disastrous price collapse." Mr. Truman added it would be necessary for the government also to resist "pressures for increases in wage rate which would imperil price ceilings."

5. Legislation making permanent the president's authority to reorganize administrative agencies.

He said "executive initiative," which he suggested be subject to congressional veto, "is an effective approach to governmental reorganization."

6. Legislation previously asked creating a permanent fair employment practice committee to prevent employment discriminations involving race, religion and color.

7. Enactment of additional measures to strengthen the machinery for carrying out price-support commitments to farmers and "for laying the basis for broader peacetime markets for agricultural products."

Inductions of Men 18 to 25.

8. Continued inductions of men 18 through 25 for periods of two years.

9. Enactment at an early date of a "broad and comprehensive housing" bill involving the cardinal principle that house construction and financing for the overwhelming majority of Americans "should be done by private enterprise."

10. For carrying on scientific research and development, the president asked congress to set up a single federal research agency.

Espionage System Was Established Between Jap Prison and Chungking

By FRED HAMPSON

Manila, Sept. 6 (AP) — Six British officers and 35 men, captured by the Japanese at Hong Kong, established an espionage system which actually succeeded in communicating with Chungking and New Delhi from prison, but three of them paid with their lives for the feat, one of the plotters disclosed today.

He was Sub-Lt. Joseph Haddock, British naval officer from Ipswich, England, who was among 320 liberated Hong Kong prisoners, who arrived here yesterday aboard the British hospital ship Oxfordshire.

Haddock said that he himself was sentenced to 15 years in prison and subject to water-torture which almost drowned him.

(A dispatch from Hong Kong by William Stewart, Canadian Press war correspondent, said 26 Canadians who were in hospital at the time of the liberation were taken aboard the Oxfordshire before it sailed from that port.)

Lieut. J. S. R. Thompson of Edinburgh, said that about 1,600 Canadian soldiers who were captured at Hong Kong had been imprisoned in the stables at North Point prison. He said many Canadians had died of disease and starvation.

Many of the prisoners told of torture and brutality by the Japanese but some said their poor physical condition was due entirely to lack of food. They lost an average of 40 pounds.

The ship was full of men who had lost arms or legs in the Hong Kong fighting in December, 1941.

Haddock and several others reported that almost all of the Red Cross packages reaching camps in the Hong Kong area were confiscated by the Japanese.

Internationalization Of Trieste as Free Port Wanted by Great Britain

London, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Competent sources said today that Britain, confident of American backing, hoped to present to the forthcoming meeting of foreign ministers here a plan for internationalization of Trieste which would enable land-locked central Europe to use the city as a free port.

Trieste apparently will be one of the main problems in the drafting of an Italian peace treaty, which is high on the agenda of the first meeting of the big five's foreign ministers next week.

In diplomatic circles it was said Britain seems determined to follow the priority listing for the foreign ministers as laid down at Potsdam, and to take up the drafting of the Italian peace treaty first.

These sources believed Britain would be firm in a refusal to give to Yugoslavia any Italian territory west of the "Morgan Line"—a name given to the temporary frontier drawn by the agreement between the Yugoslavs, British and Americans this spring after Marshal Tito was asked to withdraw his troops from Trieste. The "Morgan Line" would leave Trieste on the Italian side of the border.

Propose Trusteeship.

The Italian peace treaty also may encounter difficulties over the future of former Italian colonies in Africa. Qualified observers here say Britain has no desire to add any of this territory to the Empire, and there was a likelihood that a trusteeship would be proposed, possibly with the exception of a portion of eastern Cyrenaica, which might be turned over to Egypt.

If the big five foreign ministers —Ernest Bevin of Britain, James F. Byrnes, the United States; Georges Bidault, France; V. M. Molotov, Soviet Union, and Wang Shih-Chieh, China — succeed in drafting an agreement on the terms of a peace treaty with Italy it would be submitted to the United Nations for scrutiny and possibly might be signed within 60 days by the Allies, Foreign Office sources predicted.

The conference, scheduled to open Sept. 1, also faces the possibility of difficult debate over the future of the Balkan States which were satellites of the Nazis. Information available here is that thus far the Russians have not sent a reply to State Secretary Byrnes' request for three-power discussions on the status of the Romanian government, and this, it was said, would come up at the meeting along with the questions of Bulgaria and Hungary.

SAYS FARMERS WONDERWHYMEAT TO BE RATIONED

Hon. T. L. Kennedy Says in North Many Cannot Find Markets for Stock

Toronto, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said in a statement today that there is no objection to the rationing of meat if it is necessary to feed the people of Britain but when a farmer cannot sell his cattle it is hard to convince him that rationing is necessary or that slaughterers other than inspected packers need to be put on a quota."

The Minister's statement on meat rationing, soon to be imposed in the Dominion, came on his return from a Northern Ontario tour. He said that on his trip he met farmers at many points who were unable to find markets for their livestock and wondered why rationing was necessary. He reported that they felt keenly the financial loss they suffered because of delays in clearing livestock through the Ontario stockyards in Toronto and the inability of the packing plants to absorb all the stock offered.

Suggests Three Alternatives.

Col. Kennedy suggested three alternatives to meet this situation. "First, the stockyards of Toronto must be cleared of cattle promptly. Failing that, as a second alternative, the farmer must be compensated for his losses on the stockyards, due either to the inability of the packers to handle their cattle or to the lack of proper organization for the sale of their cattle.

"If these two alternatives cannot be carried out, then the third is that the United States market be opened up to Ontario cattle so as to provide an outlet for the surplus stock which cannot be handled here.

"So long as there is a quota imposed on the slaughter of cattle in other than inspected plants, it cannot be said that our full slaughtering facilities are being used in an effort to slaughter the large volume of cattle now coming to the market and that will come to the market in even greater numbers during the next three months.

The 26-year-old soldier, of the Essex Scottish Regiment, has been on trial since last Thursday.

20TH PARLIAMENT OPENS TO FACE POST-WAR ISSUES

About an Even Hundred Men in House Not There Last Session

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Sept. 6 (CP)—A new parliament, with a fresh mandate from the people of Canada, today faces the adventure and perplexity of the post-war world.

The opening of the first session of the 20th parliament today finds just about an even hundred men in the House of Commons who were not there last year. A few of these are veterans who sat in previous parliaments and were elected again on June 11 but for the most part they are men new to politics and entering parliament for the first time.

Today they participate in the centuries-old ceremonies by which a new parliament is organized. The members meet in the green-carpeted Commons Chamber with the clerk in the chair, are led by the clerk to the Senate where they hear the King's representative, Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, Deputy to the Governor-General, tell them to elect one of their number as speaker, walk back to the Commons and elect the speaker.

In the afternoon they meet again to get another call to the Senate and this time they hear the Governor General, himself, the Earl of Athlone, read the Speech from the Throne and declare parliament opened.

Speaker to be Installed.

In the meantime, the Senate also has been going through preliminaries, installing a speaker, Hon. J. H. King, who has been appointed by the government, but elected as is the case with the speaker of Commons. Gaspard Fauteux (L-Montreal-St. Mary) will be nominated by the government as speaker of the Commons and has been making preparations for the opening but the other 244 members of the Commons have the right to elect someone else.

In the House of Commons there is a new leader of the opposition, John Bracken, who as Progressive Conservative chieftain, replaced Gordon Graydon who was House leader last session. The Social Credit party has a new leader, Solon Low, in place of John Blackmore, leader for several years and still member for Lethbridge.

Six New Ministers.

On the ministerial benches are six ministers who were not there when parliament was last in session—State Secretary Martin, Transport Minister Chevrier, Revenue Minister McCann, Resources Minister Glen, Defence and Navy Minister Abbott, Solicitor-General Jean, and Fisheries Minister Bridges.

Mr. Bridges is the only minister without previous experience in the House. When parliament was meeting last he was in the army.

Urgent problems of reconstruction and rehabilitation together with the orientation Canadian policy in world affairs, political and economic, will occupy the attention of the new parliament.

BUTTER STOCKS UP BUT NO PROSPECT INCREASED RATION

Prospects Fairly Good For Adequate Supplies Of Cheese and Eggs For Export Market

Ottawa, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Canadians looked today on Dominion butter stocks piled up almost 2,000,000 pounds more than last year, but the official word was they can't expect an increased ration, and in fact, they will do well to get through the winter on their present seven-ounce-per-week allowance.

As for the rest of the dairy picture, prospects are fairly good for adequate supplies of cheese and eggs but it was pointed out that Canada has overseas contracts to fill on these and will supply as much as she can to the export market.

Canadians eat a lot of butter. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported stocks in nine principal cities at Sept. 1 was 44,623,263 pounds, compared with 35,302,177 pounds at Aug. 1 and 42,674,743 pounds at Sept. 1 last year. And that is all for Canada since none will be exported this year.

Prices Board officials explained it this way:

"Increased stocks of butter are being put in storage now in anticipation of a fall-off in production this fall when cattle come off pastures. Eastern butter production has held up well but Western production is down due to partial failing of the feed crops there and the butter situation may be tight again this winter. There is no prospect of an increased ration, but we hope to hold the line on the present ration."

Cut Restored Last April.

These officials did not expect a repetition of last winter when Canada, short of cheese, shipped 7,000,000 pounds of butter to Britain to make up on her lagging cheese committments, a fact which resulted in a winter cut in the Canadian butter ration from seven to six ounces a week. The cut was restored last April.

Bureau of Statistics figures as of Sept. 1 show cheese holdings amounting to 43,035,959 pounds compared with 42,816,684 pounds at Aug. 1 and 40,764,370 pounds at Sept. 1, 1944. But it was pointed out that Canada has an agreement to ship 125,000,000 pounds of cheese to Britain, the same as she shipped last year, an export figure which will take up any surplus she might pile up:

Eggs May Become Tight.

The egg picture is about the same as that of cheese, though it is possible it may become tight. The Dominion, which shipped the equivalent of 80,000,000 dozen eggs to Britain last year, now has a contract to supply the equivalent of 86,000,000 dozen. And Britain has said she will take all the additional eggs Canada can supply.

No Winter Hardships.

With meat rationing due to be re-introduced in the Dominion within a few days, Prices Board officials expect people may turn more to eggs as a meat substitute, creating an additional drain on supplies.

But on the overall picture they see no winter hardship for Canadians accustomed to getting their dairy products in plentiful supply.

CPL. PHALEN WINS HONORS

Camp Borden, Sept. 6 (CP)—Lance Corporal Don Phalen of Louisburg, N.S., carried off top individual honors at the annual track and field meet at this vast military camp yesterday before 5,000 spectators. Phalen won the 100-yard dash, the 220 and the broad jump. A-10 Canadian Infantry Training Centre won team honors and A-11 Canadian Machine Gun Training Centre was a close second with Phalen's help.

Four 'Ghost' Battleships Bluffed Huns Royal Navy Stronger Than it Was

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, Sept. 6 (AP) — Four "ghost" battleships which Britain never got around to building bluffed Germany and Japan into thinking the Royal Navy was stronger than it really was.

The story, which could not be told before, was confirmed today by an admiralty spokesman.

The deception was at first unintentional.

Four new £15,000,000 ($67,500,000) battleships were authorized by parliament a year before the outbreak of war, but they were never completed. In fact two of them were never even started. They existed on paper only.

Work on the Lion and Temeraire, both listed as of 40,000 tons displacement and in the 16-inch gun class by Janes' directory of the world's fighting ships, was halted three years ago. However, they were repeatedly reported completed by foreign accounts which were never denied here.

Gen. MacArthur Will Enter Tokyo With First Troops

Cavalry Will Move In From Various Positions

Yokohama, Sept. 6 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur will enter Tokyo Saturday (Japanese time) with the initial occupation forces, the United States 1st. Cavalry Division.

The cavalrymen will enter Tokyo from various positions around their perimeter, rather than move in as one large unit, headquarters said today. The 1st. Cavalry is estimated at 15,000 men — full strength. Service units and general headquarters also are moving Saturday—at 6 a.m. (5 p.m. E.D.T. Friday), Domei said.

Eighth Army headquarters will remain temporarily at Yokohama.

Tokyo newspapers meanwhile disclosed that virtual revolt against Japanese rule had occurred in Keijo, Korea, in mid-August, and reported the release of 20,000 political prisoners in Korea—controlled by Japan for 34 years. It was the first acknowledgment to Japanese at home that any Koreans had been held as political prisoners.

Augment Police.

Augmenting of both Tokyo and Yokohama police by addition of carefully selected members of the former Kimpei-Tai, Japan's secret police, was announced by U.S. army headquarters.

Only a few of these new recruits will be armed, headquarters said, although all are empowered to arrest Japanese civilians.

The Korean demonstrators August 15 and 16 took over part of Keijo Government, the Tokyo Mainichi and Nippon Times reported today. The demonstrators, the two newspapers said, displayed signs urging independence and welcoming the approaching Russian forces, and waved long-hidden pre-annexation Korean flags.

U.S. army headquarters announced that its forces now had released 27 per cent of all Allied prisoners known to have been held in its occupation zone, Northern Honshu. The total freed in all areas of Honshu reached 3,996.

3,500 Prisoners Died on Death March in Thailand

By MILTON G. KELLY

Calcutta, Sept. 6—(AP)—Survivors of the sunken United States cruiser Houston and members of the 131st (Texas National Guard) Field artillery Regiment liberated from Japanese prison camps in Burma told horrifying stories Tuesday of the death of 20,000 of 56,000 Allied prisoners of starvation, disease and fantastic cruelties.

More than 3,500 were declared to have died on a "death march" of nearly 140 miles in Thailand.

The survivors said the total number of prisoners included 133 Americans who were members of their groups.

Lieut. Roy E. Stensland of Salinas, Calif., said his outfit was captured March 8, 1942, on Java after the Dutch commander capitulated. He estimated 400 men were captured and said 64 died in the prison camp he was in.

The prisoners said it had been fully authenticated that 7,000 convalescent Allied prisoners in Thailand were taken by the Japanese on a purported trip to a rest camp, but in the "death march" of almost 140 miles more than 3,500 died.

CONTRACT CANCELLED

Vancouver, Sept. 6 — (CP) — Officials of boeing aircraft of Canada Co. Ltd. announced last night that its contract for R29 Superfortress bomb bays has been cancelled and about 2,300 employees were discharged yesterday.

Says Mother Starving In Europe, He Can't Send Ounce of Meat

Toronto, Sept. 6 (CP), —O. W. Rodomar, deputy administrator in charge of rationing meat and other foods in Canada, told a meeting of retail butchers last night that his 81-year-old mother is "starving" in Europe and that he cannot "personally" send her an ounce of meat.

Mr. Rodomar, Russian-born Montreal merchant, said his mother wrote to him that she was starving.

"I starved with them after the last war and I know what I'm talking about," he added.

Mr. Rodomar was one of five ration board executives present at a meeting to explain to East Toronto retail butchers the reasons for meat rationing, the methods to be used, and to urge them to support the rationing program.

Bill Probert, butcher, presented, but later withdrew, a resolution asking that the government "defer meat rationing until the necessity for it is more obvious to consumers and merchants alike."

Meat Rationing Announcement Expected Shortly

Ottawa, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Arrangements for reintroduction of meat rationing in Canada are nearing completion and it is expected that an announcement setting the date will be made about Sept. 15, it was learned Wednesday.

The exact date hinges on delivery of batches of forms and documents to retailers and wholesalers to place control of Canadian meat in the hands of the Prices Board. These forms now are en route to their various destinations.

Administration of meat rationing will be handled by Howard Ross of Montreal, head of the General Ration Administration, and slaughter control will be supervised from Ottawa by F. S. Grisdale, deputy co-ordinator of the Primary Products Division of the Prices Board.

It was understood that, because of minor delays in obtaining paper, completion of essential printing and distribution, announcement of actual enforcement of meat rationing might not be made for another 10 days.

FOX RUN DOWN BY MOTOR CAR

Foxes, coons and skunks are reported to be plentiful in the Rednersville district.

This week while driving home from the village across the bay Keitha VanCleaf saw a fine sample of a fox in the road and managed to run it down with her car. Looking up she saw another but the second one was too fast for her and made its getaway.

The night previous, the VanCleaf family states, they saw two raccoons playing in the roadway. Brer Skunk is also enlivening the neighborhood with his high-powered sense of advertising.

STEPHENS-ADAMSON EMPLOYEES, FAMILIES ENJOY PICNIC

Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. picnic was held at Oak Lake the past weekend when the employees and families gathered for games and sports events.

NEW STREET LIGHTS ARE INSTALLED AS AN EXPERIMENT

The Public Utilities have installed two or three new street lamps on Front Street, which are believed will give more light at the same power cost.

Installations are purely along experimental lines and utilities are watching with interest the results and effect of the new lamps.

The fixture is identically the same as the lights now in use, but the new lamps are equipped with strong reflectors, which it is believed will assist in the distribution of brighter light at no additional cost.

CANTELOUPE MELONS PLENTIFUL ON MARKET

Canteloupe in various sizes were plentiful on the city market today selling from 15 to 25 cents each according to size.

Tomatoes were present in large quantities which sold at 25-30 cents the basket with commensurate prices for larger and smaller quantities.

A truckload of No. 1 peaches arrived during the early hours and sold briskly at $1.15 the basket.

Other seasonal vegetables sold at prevailing prices.

HOPE PROPOSALS ACCEPTABLE

TRENTON

1,500 Register At School Opening

Trenton, Sept. 6 — When Trenton schools swung open their doors on Tuesday morning over 1,500 pupils entered.

At the high school, the largest registration for several years was recorded and Principal W. G. Spencer said that it might reach 290. One new teacher, Miss Winnifred Bruce, formerly of the high school at Fergus, Ont., joined the staff, replacing Miss Alta McIntyre who went to Ottawa.

At Dufferin public school Principal Frank Sherbert welcomed back his vice-principal, Lieut. H. S. Campbell, who has been in the armed services for several years. The principal reported an increased registration of 41.

At College street school there were no staff changes but a large registration was reported by Principal V. P. Carswell.

The registration at St. Peter's school was also large for the first day.

No Job Scarcity.

Although large layoffs in industry in the larger centres is reported, there is no job scarcity as yet in Trenton, according to local office of the National Selective Service and Unemployment Insurance. Only two factories in this area were given over entirely to the production of purely war materials. The demand right now for the most part is for unskilled labor, and district industries are advertising for many men and women, including stenographers and typists.

The canning industry is absorbing some labor and on the whole the labor picture here is very promising with prospects that it may remain so, for a time, at least.

Special Services.

Upon his return to his pulpit at St. George's Anglican Church after five years in the service of the army as chaplain, Rev. F. A. Smith announces two important events—the Harvest Thanksgiving to be observed on Sunday next, and the centenary of the congregation in October. For the latter, elaborate preparations are being made and the special services may cover an entire week.

Jewish New Year Begins Friday

Belleville Jewry is making arrangements for the celebration of Rosh Hashanah, or the Jewish New Year, which will be observed with appropriate rites and ceremony from Friday night, Sept. 7, till after sundown on Sept. 9. According to the Jewish calendar the year 1945 is recorded as A.M. 5705.

Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, will begin on Sunday night, Sept. 16th to Monday night Sept. 17th. This holiday falls on the tenth day of Tishri, the first month of the Jewish civil year, and the seventh month of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, nine days after the Jewish New Year, or Rosh Hashanah.

It is believed by some historians to have developed relatively late in Jewish theology from a festival characterized by the purification of the altar. Since then Yom Kippur has come to be observed as a day in which the people receive a complete pardon for sins committed unintentionally.

Police Blotter

There appears to be an epidemic of car thefts throughout the district according to reports of vehicles stolen received by the city police desk. Four motors were purloined over the holiday weekend and yesterday Peterborough police reported the theft of two more.

One is a black Ford car licence number, Michigan AM 1138 and the other a black Plymouth, licence number 4 M 582.

Four Madoc residents came to town yesterday and celebrated well but not wisely. City police apprehended the quartet while they were beginning to give the city a slight touch of scarlet and they remained as guests of Chief Probert and his stalwarts for the night.

This morning one paid $26 fine and costs and his three buddies $10 and costs.

JAP BALLOON RECOVERED ON CANADIAN PRAIRIES

Japanese balloons carrying high explosive and incendiary bombs which landed in great numbers in British Columbia and the Prairie Provinces before the enemy capitulated have been recovered intact, it is now disclosed. Formal Reception for Hasty Pees Will be Held in Belleville to Save Time for Travel-Weary Veterans

The First Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, battle-scarred heroes of Sicily, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Germany, will be given its formal reception in Belleville, it was learned here today. It is felt that there is no point in "travelling" the travel-weary veterans to the various parts of the district where companies were mobilized and this city has been selected as the point of general homecoming reception ceremonies.

The decision to have the unit parade here arises from the fact that this city is a central point, making it convenient for the battalion to detrain and after the parade and ceremonies, leave for their homes in many parts of Canada on the same day.

It is estimated that approximately fifty per cent of the present strength of the regiment resides in points west of Military District No. 3.

Latest reports state that the unit is expected to arrive in Canada sometime during October.

P. E. Organizing Welcome.

Prince Edward County has lost no time in organizing to prepare a welcome for one of the finest infantry units in the Canadian army.

Major William Davern, Wellington, acting officer commanding the 2nd (R) Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, has been appointed chairman of a reception committee which includes Ira Burd, Welling; R.S.M. Angus Duffy, of the original "Hasty Pees," and Douglas Wark, of Picton.

Mayor Frank Follwell of this city stated a few days ago that he would call a meeting of prominent citizens to form a reception committee here.

The arrival of the famous regiment with its members from all parts of the county and district will mark a red-letter day in the history of this city. It is estimated 20,000 people will be here to extend a welcome to the heroes of farm and school, of town, village and hamlet of this district who have emblazoned a brilliant page by their courage, devotion to duty and heroism, in the annals of Canadian history.

A large number of discharged members of the unit, and those invalided home by wounds, are making extensive inquiries as to the arrival of their former buddies of the firing line, and there is no doubt that many of the young "old boys" of the regiment who marched away in December, 1939, will fall in with their comrades as they swing down Belleville streets to receive a reception befitting heroes.

C.N.R. Fireman Injured on Head In Yard Accident

Fred Armstrong, 323 Foster Avenue, Canadian National Railways fireman was rushed to Belleville General Hospital yesterday suffering with severe head and facial injuries as a result of an accident in the east railway yards.

Armstrong was injured when an unattached engine was sideswiped by cars being hauled by another engine, as it was backing out from a shop lead.

Apparently those in charge of the yard engine drawing twelve cars did not see the other locomotive which had been detached from a freight train, and which was backing out from the shops. As the engines neared a switch the freight locomotive was sideswiped by the cars. No major damage was reported to equipment.

Armstrong suffered severe cuts about the head and one eye and was taken to hospital by ambulance where he was treated by Dr. Van Blaksiee.

American Tourists Retrace Steps to See Ivy Lea Bridge

Lifting of gasoline restrictions with its subsequent influx of American tourists, is bringing brain-teasing problems to local police officers. Many of the tourists apparently have never journeyed to this part of Canada and their queries range from the sublime to the humorous.

For instance a large American car pulled to a stop near a Front Street restaurant this morning and a genial Yankee asked a policeman on duty where the bridge was that the late President Roosevelt dedicated along with the "president of your country."

Told it was the International Bridge at Ivy Lea, a lady in the rear seat exclaimed, "why that's the way we came and we didn't know it. "William," she exclaimed to her husband, "you turn right around and drive back. I want to see that bridge again. It's history."

And "William" with a covert wink at the limb of the law, and being a dutiful husband turned the car around and retraced the 80 miles between here and Ivy Lea.

New Constable Joins Force

Trenton, Sept. 6. —The third man from Canada's armed services to join the Trenton Police Force, Leading Coder Donald John Sutherland was sworn in on Tuesday by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, of Northbrook. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sutherland, 26 Dufferin Avenue. This brings the strength of the police up to eight as authorized by the town council.

A native of Trenton, the new constable is 23 years of age, and is five feet, eleven and three quarters inches in height. He was educated at Dufferin Public and Trenton High Schools, and in the latter took his junior matriculation. He enlisted in the Royal Canadian Navy on July 4th, 1941, and saw service in the North Atlantic, Gibraltar and several other places. He was recommended for a commission and it is noted on his discharge papers that "he could be in charge of a coding office in which as many as 12 coders are employed, handling up to 300 messages in code per day". His duties were to see that messages were broken down into plain language and delivered to the department concerned, properly recorded, and filed so as to be readily accessible at all times.

Before enlisting Donald was Squadron Leader of the Trenton High School Cadets, and he takes a keen interest in the training of youth and will be a valuable asset to the police force.

The navy, army and airforce are all now represented on the force.

Say Increases Will Upset Differentials

Ottawa, Sept. 6. (CP)—In an appeal against a ruling of the Ontario Regional War Labor Board yesterday that wage increases granted dairy engineers and firemen would upset all salary differentials in the Ottawa milk trade and would open the way for further increases "in a vicious circle". The National Board reserved judgment in the case.

G. M. Clarke, representing Ottawa Dairies, Producers Dairy, Clarke's Dairy and Central Dairies, told the National Board that the increases granted by the Regional Board would work an injustice on dairy operators and in at least two cases might very seriously affect continuance of the dairies.

STIRLING

Flower Show And Supper Held At Stirling

Stirling, Sept. 5 — The annual flower show and supper was held in the Community Hall on Thursday, Aug. 30.

Entries were considerably increased over previous few years and a really fine show resulted.

Just before supper, Mr. F. Houchin, president, told the gathering that this would probably be the last year that the Horticultural Society and the Red Cross would be working together on the annual event and he thanked the members of the Red Cross for their help and friendly co-operation during the war years. Over $400 har been added to the Red Cross funds as a result. Mr. Houshin also mentioned that the Horticultural Society hoped to have the prize list back to normal next year with the many and varied prizes of prewar days again offered to the exhibition.

During the war these had been cut to a minimum, every available dollar being turned over to the Red Cross funds.

The presentation of a Meritorious Service Diploma to Mrs. J. E. O'Donnell followed. Mr. Houchin called on J. B. Belshaw, secretary, to explain the giving of the Provincial Hortcultural Society diploma and to make the presentation.

Given for Meritorious Work.

Mr. Belshaw stated that these highly-prized diplomas are given through the society for meritorious work in horticulture and told of the faithful work of Mrs. O'Donnell through 22 years of membership in the local society.

On receiving the diploma Mrs. O'Donnell graciously thanked the society and said that the happiness she enjoyed from her flowers and in working with other members was reward enough. Nevertheless she wished to express deep appreciation of the diploma.

Mrs. O'Donnell also thanked the society and mentioned the worthiness of the work of the horticultural societies.

A happy gathering then enjoyed a fine supper and later another highly successful show and supper ended with people in groups talking flowers and horticulture.

Only Four Dailies Were Prosecuted During War Period

Ottawa, Sept. 5. (CP)—Censorship officials said yesterday that only four of close to 100 daily newspapers published in Canada were prosecuted during the war for breaches of censorship or Defence of Canada regulations.

They were the Vancouver Sun and Ottawa Le Droit, fined $300 each when found guilty of charges against them, Quebec Le Soleil, fined $50 for premature publication of a ship sinking and the Ottawa Citizen, acquitted on a charge that arose from an editorial.

The charge against the Citizen was laid early in the war when it published an editorial which said that soldiers who had learned how to use machine-guns would know how to use the guns on politicians when they returned home if proper treatment was not accorded those coming back from overseas.

The banning of the weeklies and monthlies began after the Communist Party was declared illegal in Canada. The publications were banned on the grounds that they were publishing Communistic propaganda that was contrary to the war effort. The action was taken before Russia entered the war at the side of the Allies.

Colored Footwear, Cut Leather Shoes Now Coming Back

Ottawa, Sept. 6 —(CP)—Those cut-leather shoes for men and women's footwear in various colors which haven't been seen since 1942 are coming back.

The Prices Board announced Tuesday the simplification controls affecting production of men's and women's footwear, imposed early in 1942, have been removed.

The order was imposed as a means of reducing manufacturing costs and conserving materials and limited the colors in which shoes might be produced and detailed the construction of heels, stitching, linings and other particulars of manufacture.

Limits were placed on the number of new patterns of women's shoes which might be introduced each year and standard sizes were established for packaging. Manufacturers also were forbidden to make fewer than 15 pairs of any class of footwear on any one order.

G. G. Hodges, administrator of footwear, emphasized that price controls are not effected by removal of the simplifications order.

Canadians Will Respond

Canada is to have the Ninth Victory Loan, opening on October 22nd., for one and a half billion dollars minimum objective. It will be Canada's only loan for the next twelve months and will be her service to the new call of rehabilitation and reconstruction, which are now necessary and made possible through the joint victory won by the United Nations over the Axis Powers.

Peace has been bought at a high rate of service, of life and of suffering by the defenders of freedom. Only the devotion of the warriors of democracy and freedom and the united support of the home fronts in all lands saved liberty, the most precious possession of the free world.

Germany has been disarmed and in Japan the process of disarmament is going forward, the guns are silent and peace reigns. But there are new tasks for all nations to face, there are new needs. Money must be invested in the future of peace and of the nations. So Canadians will not be slow to respond to the call to play a manly role in world co-operation, for the war has been won through the gallant younger generations of the Allied world.

One of the needs is financing required to transport home Canada's large forces, her citizen warriors who fought so nobly on many a field and in many a theatre of war, in which fighting many have given their lives and more have suffered wounds. Her job is to bring home the men in which she put her trust in the war years and in whom she reposes her faith for the expanding future of Canada, because these veterans, though many are very young in years, are needed here for the tasks for which they are so well fitted as they have shown in war. It takes time to bring them home, and time means money. Abroad they have to be provided with food and shelter, then they have to be transported by ship, some by air transport, and then by railroad. Then there is demobilization. There are and will be calls for money for hospitals to care for the wounded and the re-training of many of the wounded. At home the homecoming thousands of youths and young men must receive the fair deal to which they are entitled so that they may be helped to resume or start afresh their career in peacetime. This task of starting the veteran in civil life will take money. But Canadians will answer all these calls with the fullest measure of appreciation of the great services these men have rendered their country and humanity. Then outside Canada is a world which has known the terrible strain and injury of war to a degree that Canadians have not known because Canada has been free of molestation from enemy inroads, raids and invasion. Fortunately she has not known these things. But many countries of Europe do know them, they need food and materials. These lands formed territory that Hitler wanted or they stood in the way of the moloch of Germany's military might and they had to pay the price in the West as did China, French Indo-China, and other territories in the East because Japan aimed at them for her own. Millions in the world have suffered and died through the evil of Germany and Japan, millions have suffered irreparable losses, millions are underfed and need food, treatment and medicine to give them a chance to get on their own feet again. This will be the best reward Canada can receive for any help she gives for a world made better and healthier will be a happier and more prosperous world and it will present fewer needs in future and will find itself solvent and able to manage for itself, in due time. The outlook is imposing but in the spirit in which the United Nations fought the war it is not too great a task. The very needs of the world today can make easier the path of peace preservation if the needy are given the required lift and encouragement.

This loan is timely in Canada because it offers the opportunity to carry on the principle of investment in Victory Bonds which so many Canadians have become accustomed to in the past six years. This investment preserves savings. There is ever a temptation to spend. Before the full flow of production from civilian plants, reconverted to civilian production, is achieved there is this special temptation that might lead to inflation. Therefore the Minister of Finance, the Hon. Mr. Ilsley, asks Canadians to carry on their savings plans and invest in government securities to prevent savings being expended in unwarranted outlay on articles of which there might develop a scarcity with attendant higher prices.

Money invested in Victory Loan is in the safest place.

Plans are to make the purchase of Ninth Victory Loan easy. The issue will cover the needs for the next twelvemonth. It is expected that there will be an oversubscription. In fact the loan is two loans in one and there will be no new loan in the spring of 1946. The new loan will reflect the diminishing costs of war since peace has come through the Japanese surrender sooner than many expected but the borrowing commitments continue to reflect the cost of war and its aftermath.

Wheat King

Canadians were shocked to read of the tragic death in California of Herman Trelle, known as the world "wheat king" in the years 1926 to 1936. He was only fifty years of age and at the age of thirty-one had won the world's crown at Chicago as an industrious farmer at Wembley, Alberta, in the great Peace River country. Five times in all he captured the championship in wheat growing, twice taking awards in oats and also in field peas. He was the only grower who ever won a double—that was in 1926 and again in 1936.

These awards lifted him into fame, made Canada famous and Alberta a name for grain and it brought into the Peace River country many settlers.

Ten years before his double award in 1926 he did not know wheat from oats, he later said, but in his high school days in Edmonton he had watched settler's oxcarts forming themselves into long caravans into the Peace River area, yet the thought of following this vanguard never entered his mind. He became at seventeen champion boy orator of his province, Alberta, and went into university at Edmonton and became a student in civil engineering. Before he could complete his course he went to Peace River whither his parents had gone and filed a claim for him. He broke and planted this as well as another quarter section, his first crop being an enormous one. Later he completed his engineering course and obtained a commission in the Royal Air Force. The war ended in 1918 before he had a chance to go overseas.

It was then he formed his great resolution to return to the farm. He set about gathering agricultural knowledge through bulletins and farming literature. No small amount of his tuition was received at the Dominion Experimental station near his farm. His original 160 acres were trebled and he developed an interest in quality grain. With his successes at Chicago in 1926 he became an outstanding figure in world agriculture.

His grain was sought far and wide for seed championship purposes. The original strain of Reward wheat, a hard red spring variety which had been developed at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, was tested, crossed and improved by Trelle, whose wheat was once referred to as "mystery strain" but the actual crossing was known and recorded at the Ottawa farm.

Colonization enterprises then sought him but he refused to leave Wembly and he continued his interest in wheat, peas, oats and other grains. He gave advice freely to farmers in the district, some of whom captured major awards at Chicago and other shows.

His spirit of enterprise marked a step in the progress of agriculture and drew the attention of the world to the Peace River land.

News is News

Men who have been prisoners of war in the hands of the Japanese have recent history to catch up with for the past three years and to learn recent events there are going forth special broadcasts to Allied P.O.W. in Southeast Asia to inform them of events in the world from which they have been cut off for so long. So major news of the past three years is being revived for the information of these men.

JOY-STEALERS

I guard my purse, lest it may be
In one swift moment snatched from me.

My watch and ring and treasures few
I closely keep, as wise folks do.

But, any fellow so inclined
Can steal from me my peace of mind,

And rob me of my senses, good,
Though I could stop him if I would.

A bitter word or fancied slight
Will keep me tossing through the night,

And for the balance of the day
Keep happiness from me away.

That's too much power to bestow
On anybody, friend or foe.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Suggests 99-Year Lease to Legion

Ed. Note: Following is the copy of a letter sent by Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone to the Mayor and Council in which he protests against the sale of park property to anyone.

Sept. 5, 1945

The Mayor and the Aldermen,
City of Belleville, Ont.
Re. Canadian Legion Building.

Dear Sirs,

As I said before, I have nothing whatever against the Legion or their proposed building, but I am taking out an injunction against you transferring any Park Property to anybody for any purpose.

I understand that the deed is being rushed through and I am making a last appeal to you, in the interest of your great grandchildren, if you have any, that this property should not be used otherwise than as a park. If you are all determined to give it away, please give them a lease for 99 years, and not a deed. Few people interested will be here when lease expires, but the property will then revert to the city.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.

Former POW Called by Martin's Defence Counsel

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Farnborough, Hampshire, England, Sept. 6 (CP Cable)—Former prisoners of war, called by the defence, testified today that Pte. Edwin Bernard Martin, of Riverside, Ont., who is on trial on charges of voluntarily aiding the enemy while in German hands, told them he had been trying to break up the German-controlled, anti-Russian organization known as the British Free Corps.

Martin, a member of the Essex Scottish Regiment of Windsor, Ont., has pleaded not guilty to the charges before a Canadian general court martial hearing his case.

Questioned by the court martial President, Lt.-Col. Gordon, Martin said it did not occur to him that in giving the Germans information about a concealed radio set that he might have placed English prisoners of war in danger.

"What acts of sabotage did you do?" Col. Gordon asked.

"None," Martin replied.

"Did you not know it was your duty to try and escape?"

"Yes, or to sabotage the enemy."

"How was it possible for you to move about Germany without a guard?"

"I was given a travel warrant and a railway pass."

Shared Room With Accused.

Pte. Peter Hunter, a member of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, Imperial Army, was the first of five former prisoners of war called by the defence.

Hunter testified that he had shared a room with Martin for six weeks at a camp in Genhagen. He said Martin had sounded him out on his politics and then confessed that he was in the British Free Corps. When Hunter rebuked him for being unBritish, Martin replied that he had joined with the intention of smashing the corps and gave him a list of the Britons in the organization.

Hunter testified that Martin had asked him to memorize the names and pass them on to military authorities if he could.

"Didn't you think it strange that Martin should ask about your politics?" Hunter was asked by the prosecution.

"Yes, and I told him I was anti-Nazi," Hunter said.

Martin did not ask him to join the corps, Hunter told the court.

Pte. H. A. Symonds of London, Eng., said that when he met Martin in Berlin, Martin had told him of his plans in the British Free Corps and that he had good connections and was working for the British intelligence. He said they came to an agreement and shook hands on it. Martin had great ideas about forming a unit within the corps to do sabotage behind the German lines.

Refused to Return.

"Martin asked me to go back to Luckenwalde, but I refused and told him: 'I've made a deal on it, Ted, and I'll stick by it.' The deal was to smash the British Free Corps and to do sabotage."

"Were you in the British Free Corps?" Symonds was asked by the prosecution.

"Yes."

"Did you know that Martin was one of the big six?"

"Yes. He had attended a meeting with German officers and five other prisoners of war."

Symonds said he had been tricked into joining the British Free Corps by a Sgt. Schappe, "a big German who went under the name of Williams."

"Schappe told me it was called the British Club or Legion and that cabinet ministers' sons were in it as well as British officers. This impressed me and I thought there must be something to it," he said.

Pte. A. J. Cryderman of Oakville, Man., a member of the Saskatoon Light Infantry, who was warned that he need not give evidence that would incriminate himself, said Martin had told him "what I had been roped in for" and advised him to quit the corps.

"He told me it was no place to be and the sooner I got away the better I'd be," Cryderman continued. "He told me to get back to a stalag."

New Camp for British.

Lt.-Col. F. E. W. Wallace, defence counsel, asked Cryderman what he had been roped in for.

The witness replied it was supposed to be a new camp the Germans were building, run by British officers and men.

"Martin told me it was not that at all, that it was to be called the British free corps and was intended to fight the Russians.

"He told me he was trying to break the thing up if possible. He hoped to succeed and if he didn't he would give it up and get out later."

Col. Wallace asked what Cryderman did them.

"I intended to return to a stalag and asked Martin if he could arange it," said Cryderman, who was taken prisoner near Campobasso in Italy in October, 1943.

"He said he would do what he could and a short time later I was sent back."

The witness said he believed this was arranged through Martin.

Cryderman told of other prisoners who also were sent back to a camp after Martin had said he was going to have them returned.

Cryderman said he saw Martin again at Boisson in March, 1944, where both went after leaving the British Free Corps, and was with him at Drönnewitz where they remained until they were liberated last May. During that time there were no Free Corps activities.

Says Martin Offered Help.

Pte. Robert Lane of London testified that he met Martin at Pankow, the place in Berlin where the corps was formed, and Martin told him and others what fools they were to come there. He told them not to join the corps and said that if they wanted to escape he would help them.

Lt.-Col. J. D. Watt of Ottawa, the prosecuting officer, asked: "Were you told that the corps was formed to make a peace pact between Germany and the Allies so as to fight the Russians?"

Lane: "Yes."

"What made you join the crowd at Pankow?"

Lane: "I had been in darkness in a cell for eight days and that was the only way of getting out."

Lane added he wore civilian clothes in Berlin but did not sign papers joining the corps. He said the two corps factions—those who wanted to smash it, included himself and Martin, and those who wanted to carry on—quarrelled frequently and there were several fights. Some wanted the corps run on English and others on German lines.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page or 100 Words Long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed.

PREVENTION OF NEARSIGHTEDNESS

In the talk about myopia (nearsightedness, shortsightedness a few weeks ago we said that the child who inherits a dolichocephalic head (skull long from front to back and comparatively narrow from ear to ear) will not necessarily develop sufficient myopia or nearsightedness to require glasses at the age of ten or later, no matter how near-sighted one or both parents may be. Whether the individual with this Teutonic shape of skull, as compared with the brachycephalic shape of skull, short and broad, the American Indian type, shall become seriously near-sighted in youth and early adult life depends upon the amount of strain to which the eyes are subjected in childhood, upon neglect of or prevention of nutritional deficiency in the developing period, upon prescribing or proscribing of glasses by any one other than a physician and upon the amount of open air activity, play, exercise, sport or work the individual gets during childhood and youth.

The young person predisposed to nearsightedness by heredity or shape of skull must be carefully protected from excessive study or close work of any kind indoors, from use of the eyes for any kind of close work during and for a few weeks after such illnesses as measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, mumps. Indistinct or very fine print strains the eyes seriously. Neither evident redness nor other eye symptoms show whether or not there is eyestrain. Poor illumination in school and at home is a common contributing factor of near-sightedness.

Poor illumination or lighting will be considered in detail in a talk to follow. It concerns or should concern everybody, regardless of the present state of his or her eyes and eyesight.

According to Dr. A. A. Knapp (American Journal of Ophthalmology, Dec. '39) better nutrition, especially in relation to the vitamin supply, explains why there are fewer cases of progressive myopia today than there were thirty years ago. Dr. Knapp believes the rarity of myopia in the American Indian, the fact that rural people are freer from myopia than people residing in cities, and the fact that fewer people residing in high altitudes, are explained by the greater supply of sunshine vitamin D they get. The great prevalence of myopia in China is due to the vitamin deficiencies and the general poor nutrition in that country. Dr. Knapp advises supplementing the patient's diet with vitamin D and calcium.

Dr. H. H. Husted (The Optometric Weekly, Feb. 24, '44) gives his observation of many years that if myopic children get plenty of sunshine or vitamin D internally and drink plenty of milk (best food source of calcium) or if they will not drink milk then an adequate daily ration of calcium to supplement the poor diet, their myopia is fairly well controlled, does not progress and become more severe as they get on into the 'teens.

In the booklet "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" (for copy send 10 cents and stamped self addressed envelope) a well-known horse-and-buggy doctor advises that nearly all growing children and youths who are not as strong and vigorous as they should be, ought to eat half a dozen tablets of vitamin D, thiamine and riboflavin every day to supplement the ordinary deficient American diet. This is the most agreeable form of vitamin D for young people to take. Whether to check the progress of myopia (gradual increase of near-sightedness in the 'teens and early adult life) or to prevent development of such weaknesses as spinal curative, sway-back, weak ankles, pronated feet, this daily ration of vitamin D, vitamin B1 (thiamine) and G (riboflavin) is essential food, not medicine, and must be continued daily for years, like bread and cheese.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Does a snake's tail wiggle until sunset?

Everybody probably has heard of the old belief that the tail of a recently killed snake continues to live until sunset.

In reptiles the spinal cord is more important than it is in higher animals; it influences the motions of the body more than the brain does.

Even in higher animals all vital functions do not cease immediately when the heart stops or the brain is suddenly removed.

The muscular system does not instantly lose its power of reacting to stimuli.

Experiments have shown that the hind legs of a frog will "show signs of life" after they have been separated from the body.

The heart of a snake has been known to continue to beat 24 hours after the head was severed from the body and the snake was dead according to the ordinary definition of the term.

Owing to the reflex action of the snake's nervous system its tail often continues to wiggle long after the snake is otherwise apparently dead.

But there is nothing to the notion that the tail continues to wiggle until sunset and then stops.

The belief probably arose from the fact that the movements of the tail of a recently killed snake could no longer be observed after the fall of darkness.

Contrary to a popular notion, snakes are not particularly hard to kill. A single sharp blow behind the head with a stick will generally dispatch even large snakes.

There was special music by the choir under the direction of the church pianists, Mrs. Lee Grills and Mrs. Harley Hamilton with Master Ronald Elmy of Belleville and Miss Margaret Hillis of the Sidney parsonage as guest soloists. These solos "The Holy City" and "God Bless This House" were greatly appreciated by the congregations.

The freshly decorated church with the hand-painted picture of "The Good Shepherd" still in a good state of preservation at the font, and the profusion of autumn flowers and ferns, made an appropriate setting for Rev. Shorten's message "What Is Your Attitude to the Church?" In your home and in your church, he said, make known the principles of Christian living in every day life. Enter your church with prayer and a song of praise in your hearts, and serve the Lord with gladness, he continued, and receive the blessings of those who forsake not the Lord in the beauty of Holiness.

"Facing the New Way" was the subject chosen by Rev. McKee at the evening service and he warned there never can be any real advance without God. The pastor of the church, Rev. H. H. Hillis, was present at the close of the service and extended a welcome to all present especially to the returned men who would be making this their church home.

Mr. G. Bernstein was groomsman.

During the ceremony, Mr. B. C. Sills played Liszt's Liebestraum and Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Mr. J. Thorn sang "I Love You Truly".

The reception was held in the auditorium of the synagogue which was attractively decorated with pink and white streamers. At one end of the hall there was a long table centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. On either side of this were bowls of pink roses and tall white tapers.

The bride's mother was in American Beauty crepe with black accessories and corsage of white camelias and American Beauty roses. The groom's mother wore mauve crepe with black accessories and corsage of cream gladioli and Talisman roses.

Guests were present from Toronto, Montreal, Windsor, Erie, Penn., and Cleveland, Ohio.

For travelling, the bride donned a blue wool suit with matching hat and black accessories. After a trip to Montreal and a boat trip down the St. Lawrence and the Saguenay, they will reside in Toronto.

Among those who entertained in honor of the bride previous to her marriage were, Mrs. Tommy Weisz of Cornwall, Mrs. J. N. Yanover, Belleville; Mrs. A. K. Black, of Trenton; Mrs. C. L. Yanover, Picton; Mrs. I. Cooper, Belleville; Miss B. Tobe, Rossmore; Mrs. A. Lipson, Picton; Mrs. B. Safe, Belleville; Mrs. R. Church and Mrs. Ola Crymes, Picton.

BOYLE—WRIGHT

A lovely formal wedding was performed by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson on Saturday morning, August 25, at nine a.m., in Saint Michael's Church, when Miss Pamela Margaret Wright, of Montreal, become the bride of Henry Richard Boyle, RCNVR, of this city.

Baskets of gladioli formed a fitting background for the ceremony and the wedding music played by Miss Grant blended fittingly. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Wright, of Montreal, while the groom is the son of Mrs. Harry Boyle, and the late Mr. Boyle, of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a bridal gown of white satin fashioned with a full-length skirt, sweeping into a slight train. The yoke of the dress was of metalec lace and her floor-length veil fell in soft, dainty folds from a headdress of orange blossoms and was caught to her hair with mother of pearl combs. She carried a lovely cascade bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Doris Bonneau, Montreal, made an attractive matron of honor, choosing a gown of Marina blue lace over pale blue taffeta. She wore a pale blue taffeta Juliette cap with veil of matching lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Gertrude Jolicoeur, Montreal, acted as bridesmaid for the delightful occasion and she too looked pretty in a floor-length frock of lime green sheer over lilac taffeta. She wore a lilac taffeta Juliette cap with veil of matching lime green sheer and carried a cascade bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Patricia Wright, sister of the bride, Montreal, was darling as junior bridesmaid, looking pretty in a gown of pink net over rose taffeta. Her rose taffeta Juliette cap fitted snugly upon her head and her veil of matching pink net fell daintily about her shoulders. She carried a nosegay.

Mr. Joseph Boyle, RCNVR, brother of the groom, ably supported his brother as groomsman. Mr. Frank Boyle, brother of the groom, and Melbourne Barriage, both of the RCNVR, acted as ushers.

Following the pretty uniformed wedding, a reception was held at Quinte Hotel with the bride's mother, attired in a street-length frock of gold crepe with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses, receiving the guests assisted by the bridal party and the groom's mother, who looked attractive in a dress of cornflower blue sheer with navy blue accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

Later the bridal couple left on a honeymoon to be spent in Toronto and Kitchener, the bride donning a black and white polka dot bengaline suit with feathered hat and black accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Montreal, Que., Toronto and Plainfield, Ont.

W.M.S. School For Leaders Meets at Whitby

By CORA NILL

The School for Leaders of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch of the W.M.S. of the United Church was held at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, August 27-31.

Deep regret was felt over the unavoidable absence of the Dean, Mrs. W. L. Smythe. The Branch President, Mrs. W. C. Haggerty, was appointed Dean pro tem. She was assisted by Miss Netta Brownlee, assistant dean, and the established routine of the school of previous sessions was uninterrupted.

Guest Speaker from India.

The highlight of the School was a series of three addresses on Christian Family Life, by Dr. Winifred Bryce, of India, as the fulfilment of the desires and ideals of non-Christian cultures. In her opening address she stressed the significant fact that all over the world there is a new and intense interest in the improvement of family life. In her second lecture those characteristics of family life which are common to all cultures though each may have its own interpretation, were stressed by Dr. Bryce, and the third and concluding lecture in the series dealt with the Christian belief in personality, and its base in the belief in a personal God.

Group Study on Africa.

The various methods of Group Study employed by the departments as the members sought to learn of Africa through the study of "Currie of Chissamba", the debt we owe to the early Christian Church there revealed to a great extent our dependence on that country, our misconception of it, and the great necessity of knowing more about its problems and potentialities and to gain some knowledge of a great people, with a great contribution to make to the rest of the world.

Group Study Leaders.

Leaders in Group Study included, Mrs. C. R. Carscallen, Miss Helen Day, Miss Olive Sparling, Miss May Brown, Mrs. N. H. Butcher, Mrs. R. M. Hanscom, Mrs. H. D. Gilmour, and Mrs. J. R. Bick.

Miss Margaret Seymour led a class for the very young in "Lessons in Handicraft", and from three to four each afternoon, "Organized Recreation", was conducted by Mrs. R. M. Seymour.

Special Features.

Special features of the evening sessions included on Monday night, the Worship Service, "The Transforming Friendship" was dramatized. Tuesday night was "Fun Night". On Wednesday night an illustrated lecture, "The Healing of M'Vouda", was presented by Rev. Anson Moorhouse, and on Thursday night, a dramatization, "A Crown for Canada", written by Mabel Senior Burridge and based on the book, "Canadians All", was presented by the Jean Wagar Mission Circle, Peterborough, and directed by Miss Constance Wagar.

Mrs. B. H. Soper, literature secretary, announced sales of approximately $300 in this department.

One hundred and sixty-six delegates were registered.

Courageous Girl Victim Foils Kidnap Attempt

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 6. (CP)—A masked man's attempt to kidnap and hold for $50,000 ransom 16-year-old Gillian Goolden, daughter of Capt. Massey Goolden, Royal Navy staff, at Washington, D.C., Tuesday night, was frustrated by the plucky fight put up by the girl.

Police are scouring Vancouver Island for the tall, heavy-set would-be kidnapper who held up Mrs. Goolden and her two daughters, Gillian and Ann, 21, bound and gagged the two girls and stole $12, all the money in the house.

Police said that Gillian's struggle and her mother's screams unnerved the man and frightened him away.

The three women were alone in their country home on Elk Lake, ten miles north of Victoria, when the armed man gained entry shortly after ten p.m., Tuesday, just as they were preparing to retire for the night.

At gunpoint he forced the women into a bedroom, where he gagged Ann and tied her to the bed with picture wire.

Mrs. Goolden said he then informed her that he was going to kidnap Ann Goolden and hold her for $50,000 ransom. He warned that he was a desperate man as he had been in the army four years and had "received a rotten deal".

The bandit ordered Mrs. Goolden and Gillian into the family car. Pressing his gun against Mrs. Goolden's head, he forced her to drive to Sayward Rd., where his own car was parked.

There he ushered Gillian toward his car. Mrs. Goolden tried to start her own car and go for aid, the man dashed back and took the key.

Girl Fought, Screamed.

When he attempted to get Gillian into his car, she started to scuffle with him. Working the gag from her mouth, she screamed at the top of her voice. Mrs. Goolden also screamed, and the man jumped into his car and drove away after shouting: "I've been double-crossed".

The Goolden's described the man as about 50 years of age, six feet tall, with grey eyebrows and blue eyes. He wore a white mask over the lower part of his face, and talked with a broad Scottish burr. D. Colin Graham, Mrs. Goolden's brother-in-law, said none of the women was hurt, and they are now resting at his home.

Capt. Massey Goolden was formerly naval officer in charge of Esquimalt Base and is now a member of the Canadian Naval Mission at Washington, D.C.

District Y.P.U. Holds Final Picnic

What will probably be the last picnic of the year for the South Hastings' District Young People's Union was held at Searles' Beach, Wednesday afternoon with a goodly number of its members present. Mr. Raymond M. Gunsolus, district president, delivered the opening message to the members welcoming them to the joyous event and in closing urged them to thoroughly enjoy themselves while it was possible because soon the fall activities of the various unions would commence and concentration must be put upon it.

During the afternoon the picnickers enjoyed a game of softball while other enjoyed a lengthy swim in the cool welcoming waters of the lake. A basket lunch was served after which the joyous bunch made their way to Sunset Hill, where a sunset worship service was conducted by the Fellowship Convener, Miss Anita Calvert, ably assisted by Misses Evelyn and Dorothy Ray. Miss Calvert delivered an awe inspiring message to the group. When the picnickers were ready to return home they felt the day had been well spent and looked forward to the fall term, when they would again take up their individual group meetings.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

One -Hundred- Three- Year- Old Lady Tells of Quaint Way Husband Proposed.

The other day a handsome old lady had a birthday cake which rated 103 candles.

She told how the voluminous skirts, fashionable in her girlhood, were the direct cause of her husband asking her to marry him. There were no slacks and shorts for girls in those days. On the occasion of the proposal, Margaret and James were walking from church one evening. A terrific gale sprung up, and the first thing that happened was that Margaret's skirts were blown and wrapped around James' legs, making further progress impossible.

James who had been rather a shy suitor managed to say: "Doesn't that mean we're intended for each other?" and Margaret agreed.

Usually very old people are not beautiful, but the years have dealt kindly with this old lady who is willing to share her recipe for keeping young and mentally alert.

Mrs. Chinn says, "Take it easy; don't listen to any secrets and don't ever promise to keep one". The wisdom of this precept which unfortunately has escaped so many of us is only too apparent. The teller of the secret very likely has told the same thing to several persons, swearing each to secrecy, and when the news leaks out, the shut-mouth is blamed as much as the tattle-tale.

If you're not known as a repository of other people's secrets you escape plenty of trouble.

While Mrs. Chinn does not encourage people to tell her their intimate confidences, she is a storehouse of interesting historical reminiscences. She tells of witnessing the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox Court House, when Grant handed back Lee's sword and told him to keep it. "Everyone was pleased with this generous gesture on Grant's part. Lee was such a splendid man and so proud".

Laughingly Mrs. Chinn told that she had attended so many inaugurations they had worn her out, and she decided to stay at home for the rest of them. She began going to inaugurations when Millard Fillmore was made President in 1850, and she saw those of the seventeen presidents following.

Three sons blessed the happy marriage of Margaret and James Chinn who had to thank her billowing skirts for bringing the boy friends to the point. Attention! Young ladies who wear slacks and shorts and have evasive boy friends.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Pluck cheek roses out of the air.

Be a walker. Get out and hoof it. What's that you say? Since gas rationing started you've walked your feet off? Tut-tut. Of course you've toddled to the corner letter box or gone a few blocks to pick up groceries, but your good-looks reporter means real walking. Two, three, four miles. (Quick, doctor, she's fainted!)

The women of Great Britain, who are famous for their colorful complexions, think nothing of tramping ten miles. They may not be doing it just now, having many duties to attend to, but that used to be the custom. Our girls had the habit of jumping into the family car if they wanted to go around the block. Some of them developed what is known as the limousine shape, which means hip spread and haunches. Few women get proper exercise. Most of them hate the thought of it. It isn't that they're lazy, they just don't want to bother with it, and what's the use, anyway? Many a heavyweight would never have developed adipose panniers if she had taken proper care of her musculature, kept it strong through daily activity.

Swimming, golf, tennis, rowing—all the sweet summer pleasures—soon will be finished. And when autumn comes, walking is pure delight. Leaves turning to yellow and gold, air fresh and cheering. Think it over. Get yourself a pair of amply-large, heavy-soled, low-heeled shoes; make up your mind that you're going to see your near by world.

Don't saunter. Get going. Walk, and walk briskly. Cultivate rhythmic movements of the legs, arms and torso. Hum a tune as you walk, accenting the body movements to the time. Mark the beat with the step. Make every endeavor to be light of foot, to keep the body gracefully posed.

Perfect walking form is almost as rare an accomplishment as beautiful dancing. Look around you on the boulevards. Watch how the women get where they are going. Some with heads thrust forward, shoulders too. Others planting down their heels first, giving the body an ugly, awkward appearance. Still others just skittering along, any old way.

Girls who lope with long steps are no treat to the eye. Fat ones who toddle or waddle wouldn't do either one if they'd mind their groceries, deplete adipose luggage.

Walking is a benefit to the health and to the complexion. It costs nothing but time, a cheap investment. Laboratory experiments have proved that brisk walking means that the processes of body wastes and repairs are doubled. The lungs are air-washed, speeding up the circulatory system, bringing color to the cheeks, brightness to the eyes.

Wear a short coat; it give more freedom to the legs. Lift the chest, keep the head balanced, take kinks out of the backbone. Tuck the hips back and under. Let the arms swing easily and naturally. The flesh will soon be warm and glowing. Go ahead, now and march.

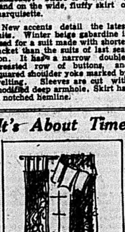
Fashion Flashes

Seen frequently in the new coat line-up is the full length coat, softly belted and made with bloused bodice fullness. This silhouette is used for a coat of medium gray wollen with tailored, yet soft, self belt and slimming waistline darts. Easy sleeves are cuffed.

Very pretty and youthful dance frocks are appearing in the shops. White is the color of a lovely evening frock made with halter bodice and deep, snug midriff of white jersey studded with gold nailheads. There is a matching band on the wide, fluffy skirt of marquisette.

New accents detail the latest suits. Winter beige gabardine is used for a suit made with shorter jacket than the suits of last season. It has a narrow double-breasted row of buttons, and squared shoulder yoke marked by welting. Sleeves are cut with modified deep armhole. Skirt has a notched hemline.

It's About Time



By DOLORES BOLAND

IT'S ABOUT TIME to try this lengthening technique on curtains that are a bit too short. Place a loop of tape at each pinch-pleat. This is shown at left of sketch. The loops go over the rod and they are hidden by the valance.

The Marry-Go-Round

What Makes a Man Attractive

What counts most in a man's make-up? asks a young woman correspondent. I mean, what makes him most attractive to women? Is it his manner, his character or his appearance—and do good looks matter as much to a man as to a girl?

To the last question, my answer is no—emphatically, no! Good looks are an asset to anybody, but even on the screen, they don't count as much to an actor as to an actress. It is true women fall for a well-set-up man who carries himself smartly and can wear clothes with an air. But there have been many screen stars over whom women raved and swooned who were not Apollos or Adonises.

Even Rudolph Valentino, whose death caused so many feminine tears and so much heartbreak, was noted more for his acting than for his pulchritude. He was just a nice looking young man with expressive eyes and great talent. My own favorite screen lover, Leslie Howard, was more of an artist than an Adonis; and you never think of Clarke Gable's "looks", once he turns on the charm. As for Frank Sinatra, who caused so much swooning, I am sure that it was his gift for personalizing a love-song that made him the bobby-soxers' idol since he is a modest young man with none of the dashing, wolf-strain in him.

No, I do not think that a man's looks count one-two-three beside his manner and his personality when it comes to charming the women. On the contrary, some of the world's greatest lovers have been the plainest and even homeliest of men. I don't remember that even Casanova was noted for his beauty—but for his "way with women".

As a matter of fact, while a girl's beauty counts fifty per cent more red points than a man's, it is only secondary to her personality; and she, too, can turn on the charm and make you forget that her nose is too long and her figure is boney. Some say that Ninon de L'Enclos herself was anything but beautiful—but nobody could remember that once he felt the spell of her personal magnetism. She has always passed as a great beauty.

Of course, women will always be swayed by good looks and personal magnetism in a man; most modern "wolves" have plenty of the latter, and are expert at using it. But plenty of sincere, worth-while men have personal magnetism nor money will avail to keep her in love with him.

Off-hand I should say that, in a man, good looks count about ten per cent, magnetism or charm about fifteen per cent, and character seventy-five per cent.

ROYALS CAPTURE INT. LOOP FLAG BY BEATING WINGS

Have 6½ Game Lead Over Newark With Only Six Games Left to Play

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal's Royals reigned supreme today as the International League 1945 champions.

Bruno Betzel's Brooklyn farmhands clinched their third title in loop history and their first in a decade by winning from Rochester Red Wings 8-3 last night while runner-up Newark was beaten by Jersey City's Little Giants 3-2.

The Royals now enjoy a 6½-game lead with six to play, the same amount as the Bears have remaining. Red Durrett's two-run homer climaxed a seven-run attack in the eighth inning to clinch the victory. Jean Pierre Roy racked up his 25th victory of the season, limiting the Birds to seven hits.

Brilliant four-hit pitching by Ray Harrell halted the Bears, who averted a shutout in the ninth when Phil Weintraub clouted a two-run homer. Frank Hiller was touched for five hits and two runs and his successor, Frank Makosky, yielded what proved to be the winning tally in the eighth.

Al Barillari pitched and won both ends of a doubleheader for Baltimore over Syracuse by identical 2-1 scores. The Oriole right-hander pitched six-hit ball in the opener and came back with a five-hitter in the seven-inning second game.

A homer by playing manager Harry Davis, first batter to face Bob Gillespie in the ninth, gave Toronto Maple Leafs an 8-7 nightcap win and an even split in their doubleheader with Buffalo. The Bisons won the opener 8-3.

Softball Teams Battle to 1-1 Tie In Ten Innings

(By The Canadian Press)

Two of Canada's outstanding softball pitchers — Cam Ecclestone of Toronto Tip-Tops and Russ Johnson of Hamilton Beavers — showed last night there is little to choose between them as their teams battled 10 innings to a 1-1 tie before darkness halted their game at Hamilton. Each pitcher allowed six hits, Ecclestone struck out 10 and Johnson nine. Both stood out also in the hitting department. Ecclestone doubled in the eighth and scored Tip-Tops' run when Cranham singled.

Johnson's single scored Homer with the tying run in the ninth.

The teams were playing the first game of an elimination series, the winner to go to the world's softball tournament in Cleveland.

George formerly played with Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League.

Westclox Girls Take Bomberettes By 12 to 2 Count

"Tommy" Bullock Allows Only One Hit in Seven and Two-Third Frames

Mountain View Bomberettes' bludgeons which pounded their way to the championship of the Ladies Softball League were impotent against the sweeping upshoots of Isabel "Tommy" Bullock, Peterborough Westclox ace hurler Wednesday night at the air station, and the airgals came out on the short end of a 12-2 score to drop the first game of the two-of-three series in the O.A.S.A. ladies provincial playdowns.

The teams hook up in the second game in Peterborough on Saturday afternoon.

Bullock had the service gals hogtied, wrapped up and floundering around in ineffectual attempts to solve her slants. Working on the mound for seven and two-thirds innings the Westclox hurler fanned seventeen Bomberettes, ten of them in a row and blanked them with one hit, a lone double which bounced off the bat of Dot Strachan in the seventh when the cause was lost.

J. Withers started the mound chore for the visitors but was yanked in the second with one out after she had yielded two walks which coupled with her mates' errors accounted for one run. Bomberettes scored the other in the first innings when Yvonne Mills' hit drove in Hunt, who had strolled.

Touched for 15 Hits.

Vicky Hillier, Bomberettes' hurler was touched for fifteen hits over the nine-inning route, three of them four-baggers from the cudgels of B. Morrow, "Tommy" Bullock and N. Whetung. She struck out eight and walked one. Her mates at times were unsteady behind her committing bobbles when they meant runs.

Singles by Patterson, Whetung and McLean aided and abbetted by Morrows' circuit tripper accounted for four Westclox markers in the first three innings. Bullock's four-bagger scored another in the second and three Bomberette errors pushed over another in the 4th. They got a brace in the sixth and put the game on ice with a five-run splurge in the seventh through Whetung's homer with one on and singles by Patterson, McLean, O'Herron and Hanwell.

B. Patterson lead the Westcloxers with the bludgeon with four hits, McLean got three and Morrow and Whetung two each.

The teams:

BOB BUNTON ALLOWS 3 HITS, BEATS PICTON 11-3

Belleville Juniors Win Third Game in First Round of O.B.A. Playdowns

Behind the three-hit pitching of Bunton and some timely clouting in the clutches by his teammates. Speedy St. Louis' Belleville Juniors eliminated the Picton youngsters at Mountain View on Wednesday afternoon by an 11-3 score in the third game of the first round O. B. A. junior playdowns.

The slim Belleville hurler, one knee swathed in bandages was never in any difficulties throughout the pastime. He blanked the Prince Edward kids for five innings allowing them one hit when K. McDonald singled in the first. His second hit of the game came in the sixth, when Foster singled and two consecutive errors resulted in two runs for the opposition. Dyer banged out another single in the 7th and that ended the Picton hit parade. Bunton struck out eight and walked one. He climaxed a good day's work by smashing out a triple in the first with the bases loaded.

Nicked For Eleven Blows.

Dyer, Picton hurler was nicked for 11 hits and got off to a wobbly start, when his mates started to throw the ball around in the first innings. Bush and Fitzpatrick the first two men up singled and some costly errors by the Picton catcher and infield plus Bunton's triple sent six Belleville runners across the plate. Dyer struck out nine but Hutchings his catcher was credited with only four putouts due to errors on the third strike.

Belleville was blanked for the next three innings and scored in the fifth, when Soules drove in Reeves who had tripled. Doubles by Bush, Fitzpatrick and Reeves and Strahan's walk in the sixth sent over four more runners and that ended the scoring.

A Real Catch.

The outstanding fielding feature of the game was Foster's sparkling running catch of Goyer's bid for a homer in the second. The young Picton outfielder leaped high in the air to snag the ball that was going away from him over his head.

Reeves sparked the Belleville batting with a triple, double and single. Bush and Fitzpatrick got doubles and singles with Bunton tripling and Semark adding a single.

HOCKEY WRITERS GUESTS OF N.H.L.

Montreal, Sept. 6 (CP) — The National Hockey League played host last night at a dinner to Canadian and American hockey writers, and to representatives of the American Hockey League, the United States Hockey League and almost every other hockey organization of any stature in the Dominion.

Very little progress was made toward the organization of the International Hockeys Writers' Association, which was understood to be the object of the dinner. However, allusions to such an organization made by most of the speakers and at the informal discussion later may lead to the establishment of such a federation, it is believed.

Mervyn (Red) Dutton, President of the National Hockey League, presided at the dinner and most of the N.H.L. clubs were represented.

Speakers included Capt. Jim Sutherland of Kingston, Ont., who said he was celebrating his 75th birthday and his Diamond Jubilee in hockey. Dr. George Hardy, President of the International Ice Hockey Association, said he represented 26,000 hockey players.

REINSTATED AS AMATEUR

London, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Mrs. Douglas C. Little, the former Dorothy Round, who won the Wimbledon singles title in 1934 and 1937 and then turned professional, was reinstated as an amateur yesterday by the English Lawn Tennis Association.

Mrs. Little went to Canada in 1940 with her infant son and there became a professional, she said, because "one had to earn money to support herself."

MAX SCHMELING HELD IN CUSTODY BY BRITISH GOVT.

Former World's Heavyweight hampion Held for Breach of Military Orders

Herford, Germany, Sept. 6—(AP)— Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight champion, was arrested by British military government authorities last night on a charge of "breach of military government orders," and it was expected he would be tried some time next week.

One British officer here said the charge, first of its kind to come before the military courts in the British zone, might be merely "a formality to hold Schmeling in custody until a more definite charge is lodged."

Military government authorities previously had investigated Schmeling's activity during the war and since the German surrender. Recently Schmeling was denied a licence to enter the publishing business for what he said was the purpose of "reeducating the youth of Germany." A British officer said the control commission denied the licence because "Schmeling was a symbol of Nazism during the war for the youth of Germany."

British army officers hid the former champion from correspondents and photographers and said they would "absolutely forbid the taking of any pictures."

The owner of a Hamburg bar which Schmeling frequented said "The British secret service took him away two days ago."

Maple Leafs Want to Donate Hockey Team

Toronto, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League are prepared to make a "gift" of a hockey team comprising high-salaried junior players to "some enterprising municipality" on a first come, first served basis, the Globe and Mail said today in a Montreal dispatch by staff writer Claude Kewley.

Kewley said the team, embracing players not yet ripe for N.H.L. competition, would be entered in a group such as the Quebec junior league and would play home games "in whatever municipality has the necessary rink."

"The Leafs would shoulder all the financial burdens," said the story. "If no Ontario municipality is interested in the proposition, then this second club or farm team of the Leafs will play under a Toronto banner."

Detroit Tigers Split a Pair With New York Yankees And Are Now 2½ Games in Front

Time is Running Out on Contenders and Tigers Appear to Have Edge

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Time is running out on the American League Tigers chasers with Detroit's 2 1-2-game lead looming more formidable with each passing day as the opposition begins to get short on games to play.

Washington, the closest rival, has only 22 left and all of them must be shoved into the records before Sept. 23 when the Nats wind up their schedule a full week ahead of the rest of the league.

St. Louis Browns, in third place but only four games back, match Detroit with 25 contests in the future book. Among the contenders only New York Yankees with 26 and Cleveland with 23 have more left than the Tigers but their positions are deteriorating.

Adding to the worries of the haggard pursuers is the newly-awakened home run power of the Detroit lineup which has accounted for seven four-ply swats in the last five tilts.

It was the old gopher ball that ruined the Yankees yesterday in the first game after they had rallied for three runs in the eighth inning at the stadium. First Eddie Mayo unloaded a three-run homer off Floyd Bevens, the Yank ace who had been called on to relieved milkman Jim Turner. Then Hank Greenberg followed with a long clout into the New York bullpen and Roy Cullenbine and Rudy York rang tremendous extra basers off the walls.

Found Weakness.

However, the Yanks found the Bengals' weakness in the second game. Lefty Joe Page hurled his first complete game of the year, a gaudy three-hit effort that completely bamboozled the leaders, 5-1.

St. Louis and Washington split a pair at Griffith Stadium, the Senators taking the opener, 2-1, in 11 innings on Mickey Haefner's five-hitter. Washington had the other half all wrapped up to take home when Lou Finney tied it up with a homer in the ninth and the Browns finally won out, 4-3, in the 10th on Vern Stephens' triple and Mark Christman's single.

Boston all but eliminated Cleveland from serious contention by beating Bobby Feller, 2-1, in the first of two although the Tribe bounced back behind Allie Reynolds, 5-2, for an even break.

Chicago Wins Two.

Chicago took both ends of a twi-night double from Philadelphia, rounding out a complete twin bill program in the American, swamping the A's, 15-6, and skinning through, 6-5, in 15 innings.

Lefty Ray Prim and Claude Passeau boosted Chicago Cubs' National League advantage to 4 1-2 lengths by whipping New York Giants, 5-2 and 10-2, in opening a long final stand against the invading eastern teams.

Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, St. Louis Cardinals' lefthander and top hurler in the National loop, earned his 11th victory to three setbacks, by dumping Boston, 4-2.

Brooklyn widened its third place margin over New York to three games by nosing out Pittsburgh, 5-3, on Goody Rosen's 10th homer with Vic Lombardi on base in the 10th frame.

Cincinnati gave Mike Modak his first big league decision, 1-0, at the Phillies' expense but the Reds couldn't stand prosperity and bowed, 8-4, to Charley Schanz in the afterdark half.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Playoff time with its various headaches is here and the aspirin box is getting a lot of attention insofar as this corner is concerned.

The master-minds of the City and District Baseball Loop drew up an official schedule last week which proved popular all round, with the exception of the Roblin's squad which felt it had a justifiable squawk in not being permitted to play a couple of tied games. Which was only right.

The other night SWACOS defeated them 3-2 in a game called in the top half of the seventh on account of darkness, but as the rules state "It shall be a regulation game if at any time after five innings have been completed, the umpire shall call it on account of darkness, rain, or other cause which in his judgment interferes with play, and the score shall be that of the last equal innings played." SWACOS won by virtue of their one-run lead at the end of the completed sixth innings. And that is that, also Roblin's swan song.

The Latta squad threw a monkey wrench into the playoff machinery when it defeated the hitherto undefeated - in - the - league Batawa squad 6-4 in the first of their two-of-three series. It would to say the least be ironic if Doc Empson's squad who appear to be putting on the heat, eased the Shoemakers out of the loop picture, but stranger things have happened, McGee. The two hook up in the second game at the Alemite field tonight at 6 p.m. sharp and with the Bata backs to the wall it should be a dilly of a game.

On Saturday Juniors and SWACOS hook up in their tilt and the schedule calls for 6 p.m. at the Alemite field. However, both squads might be well advised to stage the tussle say at 4 p.m. and get it over with. Saturday night is the fans' night downtown and a better box office might be had if the pastime was played in the afternoon. More about that later.

More About Playoffs.

Interest has been high in the C and D baseball loop this season and right now with the playoffs here, John Public is showing even more concern in the games. There has been some trouble in the past with regards to teams and umpires appearing on the scene anywhere from 30 minutes to an hour late, all of which is not conducive to the financial future of the game.

Days are getting shorter and if the teams are to get nine innings off their respective chests it is imperative that the games start sharply at six o'clock. This will not only assure the paying public of seeing a full game but it will also assure the elimination of silly squawks should the game be called on account of darkness.

A team one or two runs behind naturally feels that it has a chance with two or more innings left to play. In fact many a game has been won with two out in the last half of the ninth inning. Therefore it rests with the teams and the umpires to be on hand well before game time and to be ready to play on the stroke of six, or whatever time the game is scheduled.

The loop executive has put its foot down on this matter of the playoff schedule. It was learned today that the games will go on as originally planned and nothing but the best excuse will permit a postponement. Team managers should remember that they elected an executive to administer the league, and should not take matters in their own hands and arrange for postponements without letting even the batboy know. Baseball is coming into its own here and next season should see some snappy squads in action. But it should be remembered that sport to be successful must be properly organized and operated under an executive who must have the opportunity of exercising its powers.

Juniors Click.

That sparkling one-hand stab of Vern Goyer's bid for a home-run in the Belleville-Picton Juniors third game joust at Mountain View by young Foster, Picton outfielder stole the fielding limelight of the tussle. The youngster covered plenty of ground to get under the tow ring drive, leaped in the air and pulled it down with his gloved hand while it was going away. The catch took away the spotlight temporarily from big Goyer whose patter and showmanship are strangely reminiscent of one Ron Church. The big fella keeps the team pepped up with his lively witticisms, not to mention the spectators. Reeves, Belleville third baseman was the handyman with the club getting three. Thhe Belleville kids can do with some more instruction in base-running although they have improved a lot lately. No word yet as to what team they meet in the second round.

A Smart Hurler.

Mountain View Bomberettes had the strange experience of facing a hurler who brings 'em up from the shoelaces in their joust with Peterborough Westclox ladies yesterday. Isabel "Tommy" Bullock, had an Indian sign on the airgals large enough to stand outside a cigar store, and the service ladies went down swinging like an old-fashioned bar room door. "Tommy" and her battery mate Hawthorne did practically ninety-nine percent of the work for 7 and two thirds innings and the only ball that went out of the infield during that time was a clean hit (the only one) behind second base by Dot Strachan who stretched it to a two-bagger.

Vic Bagnato's gang should subscribe to a pension for Vicky Hillier. The tall,dark hurler has already chucked the team to two championships and is bidding for another. And she pitches two or more games today, so we're told. The gal's arm must be stronger than her heart.

A 17-year-old apprentice jockey who wears a brace on his right leg because of an infantile paralysis attack is a western Canada sensation in his first season in the saddle. The freshman is James Edward (Eddie) Johnson of Calgary and his partnership with Mrs. J. R. Kipling of Calgary, is one of the sentimental stories of the turf.

Virtually untried, Johnson (then 16) appeared in his native Calgary this spring and signed a three-year contract with Mrs. Kipling. From the beginning he went after the big money, riding the successful Broad Camp in three-year-old stake events. Now, with western racing in the home-stretch, Johnson has ridden more winners than any other first-year man—48 before the opening of Winnipeg's two-week meeting.

Horsemen say he's heading for the fame won by graduates of the western circuit like Johnny Longden, Georgie Woolf, Eddie Litzenberger and Red Pollard.

There is a possibility Johnson may accompany the Kipling stable which includes Broad Camp and reliable router Pepper Pot, to Toronto for fall racing. The Ontario fall campaign opens at Woodbine, Sept. 8.

Meanwhile, Bob (Calgary Herald) Mamini says Mrs. Kipling has become a kind of "foster mother" to Johnson. "It's a common sight to see her washing his hair or massaging his leg . . ."

Titan Hanover Trots Mile in 1.58 To Break Record

Duquoin, Ill., Sept. 6. (AP)—Statisticians for harness racing revised the record books today, marking up a world's trotting mile mark for three-year-old trotters.

Titan Hanover, the Hambletonian winner from the Arden Homestead stables, racing against the clockers at the Duquoin State Fair track yesterday stepped the mile in 1:58. Driven by Harry Pownall, the new champion wiped out the old mark of 1:58 1-2, which was held by Dean Hanover.

The first two-minute mile record in a pacing race also was on the books as a result of Red Go's spectacular performance in the first heat of the 2:17 pace. He went on to win the second and third heats in 2:01 1-2 and 2:04 1-2, respectively.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 774
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Good bridge players seldom underbid. It hurts their pride to be found in a contract that should have been higher. But when they have a small slam, they are cautious about gambling for a grand.

Let's bid this pair of hands:

SOUTH
♠K
♥J 9 7 6543
♦A Q 6
♣A 5
NORTH
♠A 7 3
♥A K
♦K 7 5 3
♣K 8 6 4

The bidding should go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	2 NT
3 H	4 NT
6 D	6 H

You are hep to the fact that an opening one heart bid shows a biddable heart suit, five suit tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. That is the least it promises.

Bids follow the order of preference in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump: With no takeout biddable suit and inadequate support for an assist, the only responding bid left to north is in no-trump.

With enough high cards to help guarantee a game in no-trump, a jump is the signal for telling partner so. And a jump in anything is a demand that the partnership should continue to game.

When north forces with the two no-trump jump, south can see slam. The south three heart bid is merely to show that suit is rebiddable. North now sees support for hearts as their desired trump.

His four no-trump is the slam desire ace and king asking signal. Six diamonds is its response for showing two aces and a king. Thus, north learns that south has a queen as his fourth high card.

This was enough to tempt north to go to seven hearts. But for some instinctive reason, he stopped at a small slam. When I show you the other hands, you will see how lucky he was.

Instinct often tells you what partner sometimes hasn't got.

Clean, Scientific Wrestling Features McCready-Watson Go Which Ends in 90-Minute Draw

Watson, British Empire Champion, Takes Plenty of Punishment in Bout

The British Empire Wrestling crown dangled precariously on the Adonis-like brow of Whipper Billy Watson Wednesday night in the main bout at the Hume Arena, and but for the clanging of the time gong which signified the end of the ninety-minute time limit, it might have been snuggling over the ears of Earl "Moose" McCready.

The Moose had already won the second fall through the medium of a punishing arm-lock and the mid-session of the three fall go lasted exactly forty-five minutes. The Whippah won the first fall after taking some punishment from the lad from Aurora but whipped himself into a win.

There were but scant minutes remaining, when the Whipper and the Moose came out for the third fall and McCready promptly started after the Whipper's left arm, that had absorbed terrific punishment in the second stanza. Despite the agility of the pride of North York, the Moose applied the same old hold to the Whipper's member and had him on the mat with Referee Bert Maxwell bent over the pair waiting for the Whipper to say "uncle."

1,500 on Hand.

Over fifteen hundred of the faithful beseeched the champion to get himself loose from the arm-lock that the Moose had applied very effectively. On several occasions Watson worked himself loose from the hold but a determined McCready played all his wrestling stakes on the same hold. It looked curtains for the Whipper—then the gong rang to and hostilities and that was that. Referee Maxwell held the right arms of both wrestlers aloft in token of a draw although the Moose argued for a referee's decision. Maxwell shook his head and the bout was over.

The bout was devoid of the rough and tumble style of wrestling that characterizes many bouts here and both Watson and McCready gave the fans some clean scientific stuff, that caught the fancy of the assembly. A return bout would not be amiss.

Olaf Olsen, the Swedis Swivel expert gave Whitey Hewitt a real manhandling in the semi-final. The "Big Swede" whose ring tactics are like a red flag to a bull insofar as the crowd is concerned used all his unorthodox bag of tricks to subdue the lad from Syracuse. Hair-pulling, tonsil gouging, chewing finger tips are nothing to the Svenska and he is about as popular with the fans hereabouts as Yamashita with the remnants of the March of Death.

The old perennial "Bunny" Dunlop and Pat Flanagan indulged in thirty minutes of snappy action that was a good appetizer for the entrees. The pair did not spare the wrestling horses and the result was as sparkling a preliminary as has been seen here for some time. The bout ended in a draw. Referee Cliff Fox masterminded the first two bouts.

Columbia Squires Lose to Oshawa Aces by 13 to 8

Junior Softball Team Wend Way Westward With Only Half a Squad

With approximately half their regulars making the second long trek to Oshawa, the Columbia Squires junior softball squad went down to defeat at the hands of the Oshawa Aces, 13-8 on Wednesday to even up the first round junior O. A. S. A. playdowns series. Squires defeated the Oshawans here and the second game ended in a five-all tie.

The fourth game will be played in Peterborough on Saturday.

The third game of the "darkness" series ended like the others with the pastime being called on account of poor visibility. A number of the Squires regulars were unable to make the trip due to the junior baseball playoff game being played at Mountain View.

Adams started on the mound for the Squires but only lasted one inning after the Aces bludgeons nicked him for five runs. Boyle was rushed into the breech and stayed the remainder of the eight inning pastime.

Squires steadily whittled the lead down and went into the lead by the time the sixth innings rolled around. Then the Aces bats went to work and by the time the umps claimed nothing could be seen the homesters had a five-run lead and the game.

Crawford went the route for the Motor City kids and was hit freely by the Squires' clubs. Donovan poked out a round-tripper with Adams and Boyle getting triples.

Tokyo Rose Under Arrest

Tokyo, Sept. 6 — (Reuters) — Pretty, 29-year-old American-born Iva Toguri, known as "Tokyo Rose" for her broadcasts to American troops in the Pacific, was taken into custody Wedesday by military intelligence officers.

"Tokyo Rose"—known also as "Your little playmate Annie"—insisted she carried no propaganda in her broadcasts. Her soft, cooling voice often reminded the soldiers that they were far away from home and girls.

Iva, a pretty olive-skinned Japanese, with long black pigtails, was born in Los Angeles and was graduated from the University of California. She came to Tokyo on a visit in 1941.

He also gave the Mayor a list of seven others which he said should be investigated because venereal disease contacts congregate in them.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Sept. 6—While speedboats waited for heavy seas to settle before dashing to rescue an R.C.A.F. officer battling huge waves in the Bay of Bengal, the flier calmly reefed the sails of his hand-made dinghy and just as calmly swam more than two miles to shore.

He was FO. G. C. Tozer of London, Ont., member of the Burma-based R.C.A.F. Elephant Transport Squadron and was sailing in a boat made out of salvaged aircraft fuel tanks.

"It was nothing," he said. "Swimming in salt water isn't anything compared to soft water." Tozer credits his swimming prowess to summer-holiday practice in the Thames River near his home town.

When his aircraft was rocked by the violent impact of a monsoon cloud, somewhere over Burma, Flt. Lt. G. E. Manser, a navigator, was thrown to the roof—and from there watched his pilot and co-pilot right the plane.

The aircraft, a heavy transport of the R.C.A.F. Elephant Squadron was piloted by Flt. Lt. Russell W. Cornell of Montreal, with FO. T. W. Smith of Windsor, Ont., as co-pilot.

"We were at 8,000 feet over the Arakan when we hit the cloud," said Manser, who comes from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. "The pilot tried to turn the aircraft but found that the cloud had control of it, and we were thrown about at all angles.

"A terrific down draught then yanked us earthwards at an enormous speed. Then suddenly we were thrown upwards, and I had the impression of floating through space. I was lifted horizontally to the ceiling and thrown on my back.

"From there I watched the pilot finally manage to roll the kite and it fell over on an angle and we found ourselves righted."

Homeward bound from India are nine R.C.A.F. ground-crew men whose combined service totals nearly 60 years. For all but one, Christmas 1945 will be their first in Canada since before the war began.

The nine happy men are Canadians who joined the R.A.F. and who only recently have transferred to the R.C.A.F.

Happiest man in the group is Sgt. L. Gallagher of Montreal. He married a French girl in Pondicherry in 1939, was posted to North Africa five days after the wedding, went from there to England, and didn't see his bride again until last fall.

Luckiest man has been Sgt. E. R. Hammond of Sidney, B.C. He spent a year on the R.A.F. station at Patricia Bay, Vancouver Island. "I could go home from there on a bicycle," he said. "And the R.A.F. called it overseas service!"

Alleged Slayer Tells of Fight For Shotgun

San Bernardino, Calif., Sept. 6—(AP)— John Gilberti, charged with the murder of Herman William Trelle, 50, former Canadian champion wheat grower, was surrendered Wednesday by his lawyer at the home of a friend in near-by Fontana.

Sheriff Emmett L. Shay said Gilberti declared Trelle was killed in a struggle for the possession of the later's shotgun when Gilberti called at the Overholtz ranchhouse after he had been discharged as a ranch worker last Saturday. Three months ago Trelle supplanted Gilberti as manager of the ranch.

The sheriff said Gilberti declared Trelle came out of the house with a shotgun, pointed the weapon at him and pulled the trigger. It did not discharge, he quoted Gilberti as saying, and as the two men struggled for its possession, Trelle was fatally wounded.

An inquest has been set for tomorrow, and Trelle's funeral services have been tentatively arranged for Saturday morning at Inglewood, near Los Angeles, where he will be buried.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop hadn't come down to breakfast yet, and ma said, Oh dear, Nora is off this afternoon and the weatherman was all wrong about the heat letting up, I dont know where he gets his information.

I bet you're thinking about asking pop to go out and eat in a resterant tonight, I said, and ma said, He probably wouldn't even consider the idea in anything but a negative way, so there's no use even trying.

The result being she tried anyways when pop started his second cup of coffee, saying, It seems quite an age since we've gone out for a meal, William.

Not quite mentioning a resterant, and pop quick said, Yes by gollies, and it seems like an even greater age since I've had the old fashion pleasure of helping you with the dishes after one of your own inimitable hand-cooked meals. Tonight's the night, I can hardly wait. We'll have a good old clubby kitchin convention. I'll wash and you dry, or would you rather wash and have me dry? he said.

Why William that's quite an idea, ma said. It brings back many a forgotten picture of me reminding you with a rude shock that you promised to help me with the dishes, and of you begging pitifully to be allowed to smoke just one cigar before we start, and of me gently but fermly saying ablutely no, because I know if you once sit down you'll never get up again, and of you finally dragging your unwilling form to the kitchin and sulking because I scold you for putting the dishes away with wet spots on them like sloppiness personified. My my, it'll seem funny to you when it's all over, she said.

It seems funny to me now, because it really is all over, pop said. I dont seen any reason why you should spend a hot day like this in the kitchin just to give me a few minutes pleasure helping you to clear up, he said.

The result being we ate dinner at the Saniterry Home Resterant and Lunch Room and pop tried not to get mad at the paper napkins.

Private Potter's Folly

CHAPTER 7

No "Silly Romance."

Having roused Marta's interest Folly proceeded to become mysterious.

"I didn't say. But Hilton did tell me that he had never been in love before."

"Are you speaking of Grandpa?" Marta demanded. "Now look, Folly, there can be no silly romance going on between him and any of us or he will have to give up his room. And we need the money."

Folly's green eyes were scornful.

"Is it my fault if he asked me to go out with him tonight? You sound as if I had been pursuing the man."

"I hope you haven't. Chán told me you went to his room for a book that first night but I didn't think you would do it again."

"I've never been in his room since," Folly said, ignoring the note she had slipped beneath his door, grateful now that Hilton had burned it in the fireplace.

Marta's heart softened. Maybe she had misjudged the child. Her mind had been too much on her own troubles lately.

Hilton "Too Old."

"I'm not accusing you of anything, honey," she insisted. "Only I know how romantic you are. Grandpa is much too old for you. And our business with him is strictly impersonal. Let's keep it that way."

Folly consented to be kissed. Marta was a darling, she conceded even if she was completely blind. Since Jim had married the other girl Marta was beginning to be old maidish, too.

Folly had not noticed it before but she was sure she would have nothing to fear from Marta. It was Hazel, that man's woman who never lacked a date if she wanted one. Hazel might prove a real rival if she were at home often enough. But given more evenings alone together as they had been tonight and no one could take him away from Folly. He was she decided, closing weary eyes, difinitely "different" to her.

The following evening was one of her appointed times at Hospitality House so Folly hurried off after dinner leaving Marta and Hilton to finish their dessert alone. Their conversation was desultory.

Marta was more depressed than usual. She had seen Jim and his bride stopping for traffic as street car passed. Marta, hanging on a strap was invisible to them, but she couldn't keep from thinking that she might have been the one sitting beside Jim. It seemed so much worse seeing them together than just thinking about it.

She wanted to be alone, so she told Hilton goodnight and went into the drawing room. Although they called this long narrow room by its original name it was really the family gathering place. A fire was always blazing in the fireplace while those upstairs were seldom lighted.

Marta in Tears.

Marta was too nervous to go to bed. She intended to sit by the fire and listen to the radio but as she stood by the window overlooking the bay she began to cry. Life had become rather terrifying to everyone since the war. Like many other girls Marta was working at her own job all day and for her country from 3 to 12 three nights a week. She was spending 10 per cent of her salary on war stamps which made her usual budget impossible to meet.

The extra money from Hilton was really a necessity, she thought, but if Folly began to pursue him he probably would not stay. She wouldn't want him to stay if he were giving the foolish child any encouragement.

Then on top of everything else she would have to see Jim and Myra today. . . . Enjoiyng the rare privilege of feeling sorry for hesrself she permitted the tears to roll unchecked down her cheeks. Maybe it would be better for once to give way.

Hilton Calls.

She was really crying when she heard "Grandpa" Hilton's voice saying, "I beg your pardon, Miss Wainwright, but there is a book on Brazil your sister Hazel suggested I read."

Marta could not face him. Her slender shoulders quivered, as she replied in a muffled voice, "Certainly."

Without stopping to think that he was involving himself in something that did not concern him Hilton cried impulsively, "Don't cry, child! No man in the world is worth it."

Surprise made her gasp, "How do you know it's a man?"

"Folly told me about it," Hilton admitted uncomfortably.

"She had no right to do that," Marta muttered dabbing at her wet eyes. "I don't cry ordinarily but I just happened to see them today."

He knew whom she meant but he did not reply because he was thinking how few girls could cry so becomingly. The big tears rolled like pearls down her white cheeks. She looked more appealing and more feminine because of them but it was obvious she had no idea of the effect on him.

Talk About Folly.

"From what Folly told me it was your fault," he said deciding it might be good for her to discuss it. "Isn't it true that he had been wanting you to mary him for years?"

She nodded.

"But I couldn't desert my responsibilities. It wouldn't be fair to put the entire burden of Folly's support on Hazel."

"I don't see why Folly can't support herself," he said just as Jim had done.

"She hasn't been trained to do anything practical," Marta admitted. "All she knows is costume designing and there doesn't seem to be any demand for that sort of thing."

"There's plenty of demand for typists," he said dryly. "Or if she can't type why not send her to work in a defense plant?"

"Folly couldn't do work like that," Marta cried indignantly.

"The fact that she has had artistic training might make her fitted for it," he insisted. "It isn't any of my business but if you had really wanted to marry this man you would have found a way."

He Blames Her.

Marta's cheeks reddened.

"I didn't ask your opinion."

Hilton said stubbornly, "Just the same it might be good for you to know how another man look at such things. If I had waited for a girl seven years and she still refused to marry me I'd damned well think she didn't love me. So you've no one to blame but yourself."

"Oh," she cried furiously. "What do you know about it? I don't want to talk about it to you now or ever again."

Anger had lighted her face into real beauty. She had the nervous poise of a thorobred, he thought and to his own amazement found himself wanting to take her in his arms and kiss that troubled mouth until it smiled.

She Feels Ashamed.

Then he reminded himself that she was right. He did not wish to become involved in her private affairs. He had come to the drawing room in search of a book. He found it and said, "I'm sorry! I shouldn't have spoken. I'll not mention it again."

When he had returned to the sanctuary of Grandpa's room Marta began to feel ashamed. He had been trying to help her and she had behaved like a child. Folly herself couldn't have done worse, she decided, climbing the stairs to her chilly bedroom.

With an utter disregard of logic which would have astonished any man she recalled every word Hilton had said thinking, "It was sweet of him to want to talk to me about it. Most men would have run from the sight of a girl crying. He really is terribly attractive."

Several weeks went by with no apparent change in the big, old-fashioned house on Washington Street. Very early every morning Hilton could be seen driving from the garage on the first floor. An hour or so later Marta trimly dressed in black hurried down the steps leading to the main entrance. Promptly at eleven Chan emerged from the small wooden gate marked "DELIVERIES" on his way to the market. While at noon or soon after Folly descended in smartly furred or tailored costumes to keep various luncheon dates with their friends.

Folly no longer pretended to work on her drawings. In the back of her mind was a vague impression that she was waiting for a position of some kind. She had registered at an employment agency and was also doing her patriotic bit by dancing two nights a week with the soldiers who came to Hospitality house.

Folly Not Worried.

It did not bother her to know that her wealthier friends, graduates from the same private school, were now working eight hours a day. Folly always thought of herself as different. To an artist like herself routine was deadly. It wasn't that she meant to be selfish. She told herself she adored both her sisters and appreciated what they had done for her. Sometime she would repay them.

She might marry a man with a large income who would help her care for them in their old age. Or even some one like Hilton who would live with them and pay more than half the bills. Or some talent scout might advertise in the paper for a costume designer and Folly would gather up her discarded one-eyed ladies and in twenty-four hours be on her way to Hollywood.

Her dreams made a pleasant background soft as swansdown into which the girl relaxed. Miracles did happen when one was young and beautiful. Meantime there was her small allowance from grandpa which paid for cleaning and beauty shop bills, lunches and movies. It wasn't as if she had to ask her sisters for spending money. At the moment she didn't need any clothes. What she ate didn't cost much and so far as the housework was concerned Chan shooed her away if she even offered to help him.

An Aching Heart.

If any one had told Folly there was an aching loneliness in the bottom of her heart, a longing to be truly necessary, she would have laughed at them. But it was true and Hilton Wood discovered it. Late in January he took the flu. Coming home from work he realized he had a temperature and decided to ask Chan to serve dinner in his room. The chinese obeyed but Hilton could swallow nothing but the soup.

"Not felling well?" Chan inquired when he returned for the tray.

"I'll be all right by morning," Hilton replied but the next day he could not rise. Chan brought his breakfast and reported to Hazel who was sleeping at home. A few moments later she had appeared at grandpa's door dressed in her street clothes.

She Calls Doctor.

"I'd better take your temperature before I leave," she said.

Hilton felt embarrassed but Hazel's manner was strictly professional.

"A hundred and four," she informed him, knowing it was the only way to convince him that he was ill. "Who is your doctor? I'll telephone him."

"I haven't any," he muttered. "I'm not exactly an invalid Never been ill since I came here three years ago."

"Then I'll call mine," Hazel said cheerfully. "You'll like him and be sure you do what he says. I'm on my way to the hospital on a new case or I'd wait here until he comes. But I'll ask Chan to bring you a bell and leave your door open so he can hear it."

WAS WEAKENED AND RUNDOWN FOLLOWING LENGTHY ILLNESS

Had Severe Pains in Limbs, Digestion Bad; Restless, Nervous and Easily Tired. Tells How Syntona Helped Him Regain Strength.

"In February, 1943, I was laid up with a severe illness, which left me weakened and rundown," said Mr. Art Fortner, 62 Cavendish St., London, Ont., in a recent report.

"All my joints and muscles were weak and sore and my left leg was so painful I could not walk. I couldn't seem to get any appetite and what little food I did eat gave me gassy cramps, acid risings and heartburn. I often felt bilious and dizzy and very nervous. Although the least effort made me feel tired and exhausted, I couldn't sleep at night.

"After more than two months had passed I was practically no better, so remembering that a relative of mine had once used Sytnona with good results, I decided to try it. By the time I had finished the first bottle my appetite had begun to pick up and my digestion was considerably improved. As I kept on taking Syntona, I continued to improve and it wasn't long before I was enjoying every meal with no trouble afterward. My nerves calmed down and I was sleeping soundly at night. Gradually the pain left my legs and muscles until I was able to get around as well as ever. I went back to my work and I have been on the job ever since. I cannot praise Syntona too highly for the way it helped me."

MR. ART FORTNER

Syntona is made from the pure liquid extracts of 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels .. aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Rev. J. D. P. Knox Dies at Age of 81

The Rev. John D. P. Knox, residence 40 Catherine Street, this city, died in Kingston on Wednesday. He was in failing health for some time.

Born in Rawdon Township, the late Mr. Knox was in his 82nd. year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Knox. Early in life he was attracted to the ministry of the Methodist Church and with this end in view he became a student at Albert College. When fully qualified he was ordained and served for forty years as a minister of the Methodist Church and later the United Church. The greater part of his ministry was in the Bay of Quinte Conference and he served his church well and faithfully. For a number of years he lived retired in this city and was a member of Holloway Street United Church.

In this city and throughout the district, many friends will regret to learn of his death. As long as age and health permitted the Rev. John D. P. Knox was always willing to assist in the work of the church and he will be missed by many old friends here and elsewhere.

Mr. Knox never married and is survived only by one sister, Miss Sarah Knox of Stirling.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

Imperial Oil President Dies

Toronto, Sept. 6 —(CP)— Richard Vryling LeSueur, chairman of the board and president of Imperial Oil, Limited, and of the International Petroleum Company, Limited, died in hospital today, aged 64.

A native of Sarnia, Ont., and a member of a Sarnia law firm, Mr. LeSueur was one of the world's prominent oil men and was closely identified with extensive oil exploration programs in Venezuela, Columbia, Ecuador and Peru as well as in Canada.

Mr. LeSueur has wide business connections in addition to his oil interests. He was vice-president and director of three mining companies—Kirkland Lake Gold, Northern Canada Gold and Goldale Mines. He was second vice-president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association and a director of the Royal Bank of Canada, the Montreal Trust Company, the Confederation Life Association, General Theatre Corporation and Odeon Theatres, Limited.

He was president of the Ontario branch of the St. John Ambulance Association, trustee of the Board of Governors of Trinity College School and vice-chairman of the National War Finance Committee for Ontario.

Born in Sarnia in 1881, the son of the late R. E. LeSueur and Sarah (Sitlington) LeSueur, he was educated in Sarnia schools and graduated from the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall. On his graduation he became associated with the late Hon. W. J. Hanna and was a member of the Sarnia law firm of Hannah, LeSueur and Dawson.

Through his connection with Imperial Oil he had a direct personal interest in oil development in Western Canada, particularly in the Turner Valley and the Norman Wells fields. He was closely identified with oil exploration in South America through International Petroleum.

In 1918 he was married to the former Rosa Larranaga of Lima, Peru, who survives with three children: Mrs. Freeman Tovell of Lima, Marie at home, and Richard who is in the Canadian army and is stationed at Aldershot camp in Nova Scotia. A brother, Major N. Lisle LeSueur, lives in Sarnia and a sister, Mrs. Minna Polley, in Montreal.

An Anglican, Mr. LeSueur was a member of three Toronto clubs —York, Albany and Lambton Golf—and of the Rideau Club in Ottawa.

Great Tasks Ahead For Administrators Of Singapore Area

By ALAN HUMPHREYS

Singapore, Sept. 6 (Reuters) — British military administrators today were preparing to take over the great tasks ahead of them in Singapore, where an occupation force landed yesterday to liberate the colony after 3 1-2 years of Japanese rule.

They have a nucleus staff, mostly former Malayan civil servants, who constitute the civil affairs service of Malaya.

Laws existent before the Japanese occupation have come back into force. Japanese orders, proclamations and currency ceased to be effective yesterday.

The civil affairs service will have dual responsibility to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme Allied commander in southeast Asia, for matters of responsibility to the colonial secretary.

Asiatic officials of the pre-war government will be allowed to carry on as far as possible in or near their former posts in an effort to instil confidence among the people.

5706 Jewish New Year's Message

By RABBI G. FELDER

And proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof. (Lev. 25.)

The year 5705 has brought the great conflagration of the world to a standstill. The great ordeal which the world has endured for the past six years has come to an end. The organized iniquity which Fascist powers meant to impose upon the world has been frustrated. The arch conspiratory of the scheme against world peace and world civilization lie ground in the dust. They realize that not by strength, not by might can they prevail. The world has again heard the resounding of the divine words, "And proclaim throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof". Mankind can again resume the paths of peace and progress. The elimination of the earth's scourge opens the date to glorious possibilities in the year 5706.

As we approach the New Year with gratitude and with the words of Hallelujah on our lips, we should ask ourselves whether mankind could harness the unbelievable power of titanic coordinated effort unleashed during the war for the task of peace? Can it build as zealously as it can destroy? What should be our plan for reconversion?

At this time when humanity is concerned with "the problem of industrial reconversion. It must remember and not forget the reconversion that is even of vaster importance, a reconversion of our moral and spiritual values. It was not the indiscriminate robot-bomb that mercilessly destroyed all in its paths. It is the one that sets it off for the destructive course. It is not the sword that devours, but the one that handles it.

The people of the future must recognize that our hope for the days to come lies not in the reconversion of the machine, but in the reconversion of man to the moral and spiritual tenets that have always taught us the true way of life. Let us not forget that the machines that will proye may come into the camp". We fort and convenience can be turned overnight once again to the making of implements of war unless man alone goes through a reconversion to the moral and spiritual values that can assure him lasting peace and tranquility. We are to realize that man is his brother's keeper, that a Cain can't exist and will not exist in this world. That iniquity must vanish.

It is our duty today as of Israel of Old that was gathered by Moses after the war and ordered, "Wash your clothes and ye shall be clean and afterward ye may come into the camp". He must purify our moral and spiritual values that we accepted at Sinai. He might have become contaminated by the false doctrines, the pagan ideologies of our adversaries. Let us clean ourselves and return to the camp of civilization. Let us purify ourselves in order to be worthy to be admitted to the Temple of Peace, where brotherhood of man is to reign. Let us not be content with industrial reconversion but let us labor for mankind's reconversion. It shall not suffice for us to beat our swords into plowshares and our spears into pruning hooks. He shall convert the world that it may learn of war no more. That hate and oppression of mankind should not be seen. We shall strive to reconvert a world of hate into one of love, a world of cruelty into one of kindness and mercy, a world divided into a world united in the brotherhood of man and under the Fatherhood of God, so that we might be able to dwell forever in the Camp of God and humanity proclaiming liberty throughout all the land to all inhabitants.

Three-Mile Parade Will Mark Allied Entry Into Tokyo

First Time Conqueror Has Entered Japanese Capital

Yokohama, Sept. 7 —(AP)— A three-mile parade of Allied military might through the heart of Tokyo, beginning within sight of the Emperor's palace, will mark the triumphal entry of Gen. MacArthur Saturday (Japanese time), it was learned today.

Battle-equipped regiments of the 1st U. S. Cavalry Division will march through the bomb-shattered capital city of surrendered Japan—the first such march of a conqueror there in Japan's long history.

Domei said the first troops would enter the city at 6 a.m. tomorrow (5 p.m. E.D.T. Friday). Gen. MacArthur is leading 15,000 troops into Tokyo.

With occupation forces already holding strategic points from the south tip of Kyushu to Tokyo, in central Honshu, negotiations were under way for the American navy to take over a Japanese base on the extreme north tip of Honshu.

It was disclosed today that 10,000 Japanese troops in the area of north Luzon's Cagayan Valley laid down their arms Wednesday.

The merciful task of freeing Allied prisoners of war was highlighted by a rescue team of 24, including five army nurses, which boldly took a Japanese troop train to Kobe—300 miles beyond the nearest occupation troops.

The team took 603 infirm prisoners and put them on a train today bound for Yokohama.

At Guam, the navy disclosed another bold strike—a task force movement Wednesday and Thursday into Formosa, where more than 1,200 Allied prisoners were taken off from that fortified island still in Japanese hands.

Seventh Fleet naval units were anchored at Port Deiren, Manchuria, while contact was sought with a prisoner of war camp at Mukden, believed to hold men of high rank.

From inside Japan came another chapter of the growing story of how Allied war power spread a creeping paralysis through the country in the last days of war. At Yokosuka naval air station, Hagime Onishi, Japanese seaplane pilot, said Nipponese ceased volunteering for the sure-death roles as kamikaze (suicide) pilots to crash their planes into Allied targets, primarily warships. Instead they had to be drafted.

Rescue Force Liberates 603 In Unoccupied Japan

By SPENCER DAVIS

Aboard Prisoner of War Evacuation Train Nearing Yokohama, Sept. 7 (AP)—Liberated by a small American force which ventured far into unoccupied Japan, 603 prisoners of war rejoiced aboard this train today but avoided singing "Roll out the Barrel" because to them it was a death song.

The rescue mission of 24, including five nurses, rode a Japanese troop train 365 miles to reach the prisoners at Kobe. They were unmolested during the 13-hour journey from Yokohama.

Prisoners aboard the returning evacuation train included Britons, Americans, Dutch, Greeks and Chinese. The largest group were Britons captured at Hong Kong.

They said that 25 per cent of the prisoners failed to survive the first winter at Kobe and that, under the direction of a beady-eyed little Japanese colonel named Murata, it was the custom to roll the bodies to the crematorium in barrels.

"There isn't a man here who can hear the song 'Roll Out the Barrel' again and not shudder," said an officer of the British Middlesex Regiment. "We sang it so often as a funeral dirge."

NEW DODGE OF HOUSEBREAKERS

Toronto, Sept. 7—(CP)— Police warned householders here today of a new dodge employed by housebreakers — phoning residences, and if there is no answer carrying out their housebreaking plan. One resident already reported this happening, but he got back in time to foil the attempted robbery.

Press is Entitled To Courtesy, General Declares

Vancouver, Sept. 7. (CP)— Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Pacific Command, gave assurance last night that there will be no "further interference" with newspapermen obtaining stories and pictures of returning army personnel.

His statement came after the first session of an Army Court of Inquiry investigating an incident at a railroad station here Tuesday night, when newspaper reporters and photographers left the station without covering the arrival of a group of overseas veterans. They charged army regimental police had used abusive language and administered rough treatment to a partially-disabled news photographer.

A prepared statement issued by Public Relations officers of Pacific Command said that officers and non-commissioned officers from No. 11 District Depot at Vancouver and newspaper reporters and photographers appeared at the inquiry yesterday, adding "findings will not be known until late Friday".

"Newspapers have done an excellent job through the war at home and abroad", Maj.-Gen. Worthington said. "Members of the Press assigned to meet troops at railway stations are my personal guests and I appreciate what they have done to make the soldiers feel they have a real welcome home".

"I insist that the public of whom the press are a very real part be treated by the utmost courtesy on the part of military personnel".

Prague's Pro-Nazi Mayor Hanged

Prague, Sept. 7 —(AP)— Dr. Joseph Pfitzner, Mayor of Prague under the German occupation, was hanged in Pankrac prison square at 6:30 p.m. Thursday after a brief trial in which he was found guilty of treason and other charges. A large crowd jammed the square.

Pfitzmer, 44, an author and professor of history, was convicted on charges of treason; seeking to destroy the Republic through propaganda methods, being a Nazi leader at a time when that party was forbidden, and removing the body of Czechoslovakia's unknown soldier from the old city hall here and destroying his monument.

He was tried in the same courtroom where German masters of Czechoslovakia once sentenced hundreds to death.

Pfitzner was the first of thousands of accused of war crimes or collaboration to face the Czech people's court.

Lotteries in Ontario Are Under Review

Toronto, Sept. 7. (CP)—Lotteries in Ontario are under review by the Provincial Attorney General's Department, as a result of complaints which have been coming in from municipal bodies, it was learned today.

Complaints are chiefly against the sale of tickets on cars and houses.

Fanatical Jap Officers Try to Stop Surrender-Edict Reaching People

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Sept. 7. (AP)—Well-informed Japanese sources said today that fanatical young Japanese officers on Aug. 14 killed the commanding general of Emperor Hirohito's personal Guards Division and by forging his name sent troops to surround the palace in a vain effort to prevent the Imperial surrender announcement from reaching the people.

The killing climaxed a fantastic attempt to keep Japan geared to war, these sources related. The finale to the battle over surrender, between the Emperor and certain militarist elements, involved a hot chase after the vital radio recording containing the Emperor's historic capitulation rescript, they said.

Numerous Kamikaze (suicide) pilots dived to death in Tokyo Bay as a result of the surrender and some threatened to kill Japan's surrender envoys to Manila—but there were no further major disorders.

Tokyo tensely had anticipated possibly army revolts and insubordination.

DIVIDES INJURIES FROM ATOM BOMB IN 4 CATEGORIES

Japanese Doctor Is Confident Most Of Moderately Injured Can be Cured

New York, Sept. 7 —(AP)— A Tokyo radio broadcast last night said that Dr. Masao Tsuruki, a professor at Tokyo Imperial university and Japan's leading authority on anatomy and pathology, is confident that a majority of moderately injured victims of the atomic bomb can be cured.

As a result of extensive scientific research and experiments carried on by Dr. Tsusuki, the broadcast said, new hope has been found for the citizens of Hiroshima who have been living in dread since the Aug. 8 atomic bomb raid on that city.

The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, cited an analysis by Dr. Tsusuki that divided the effect of the atomic bomb on humans and animals into four categories:

4 Classes of Injuries.

1. Burns caused by light and heat waves. These differ from ordinary burns and resemble those a person received from an electron bomb.

2. Mechanical injury through explosion and concussion. According to Dr. Tsusuki a human body almost 110 yards from the centre of the explosion will receive the full force of gaseous bodies and substances travelling at the rate of 7,635 yards a second. At a distance of 2,187 yards from the centre of the explosion, the force of the explosion will travel with the speed of light (186,000 miles per second) and injuries will be sustained simultaneously with the disintegration of substances.

3. Injury resulting from some strong force, as yet unknown even to scientists, the radio said. Dr. Tsusuki attributed this type to radio activity caused by the effect of neutrons and gamma rays of radium, or else the X-rays. Although the latter two rays decrease in effectiveness in proportion to the distance they travel and are absorbed by structures such as concrete buildings, neutron rays penetrate anything and, therefore, may injure a person in a building or even an air-raid shelter.

4. Harmful effects of the pitch-black smoke following the explosion. Although the exact nature of this smoke has not been determined as yet, Dr. Tsusuki observed, it doubtless had certain harmful effects on living things because many persons were known to have suffocated.

Missing Plane With 22 Aboard Sighted Wrecked

Sumter, S.C., Sept. 7. (AP) — The Shaw Field Army Air base reported today the wreckage of a plane, believed to be a missing Eastern Air Liner with 22 persons aboard, had been sighted ten miles east of Florence, near the Pee Dee River. The report said the plane appeared to be "a complete wreck".

Army planes from Shaw Field and other bases had been searching for the plane since early morning when it was first reported missing.

The plane, carrying ten civilians, nine military personnel and a crew of three, was on a flight from Miami to New York.

The report received here said the wreckage was found in a dense swamp.

Show Field reported the liner was apparently flying about four miles off its radio beam when it crashed.

The Florence base placed the scene of the crash at a point 15 miles northeast of Florence.

1st Brigade Including H. & P.E. Regt. Arrives In Britain on Way Home

London, Sept. 7 —(CP)— The Following Canadian army units arrived in the United Kingdom from continental Europe, en route to Canada, between noon Sept. 3 and noon today:

The 48th Highlanders of Canada, Toronto; the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Picton. Trenton and Belleville, Ont.; the Royal Canadian Regiment, London, Ont., St. Johns, Que., and Halifax;

The 3rd, 4th and 33rd field companies, Royal Canadian Engineers; the 2nd Field Park Company, R. C. E.; the 3rd and 12th batteries, Royal Canadian Artillery; the 5th Light Anti-aircraft Battery, R. C. A.

35,000 Left at End of Year.

By WILLIAM BOSS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Utrecht, Holland, Sept. 7—(CP Cable)—Repatriation of Canadian troops from northwest Europe is expected to reach such a stage by the end of the year that a maximum of 35,000 will be left on the continent then.

This means that the 1st, 2nd and 3rd division will be away, leaving perhaps the 5th armored and definitely the 4th armored still to move. If the 3rd division's move is sufficiently under way from the United Kingdom it is believed possible the 5th division might be in Britain awaiting embarkation around New Year's leaving only 20,700 troops to handle in 1946.

By the New Year it is hoped to have the entire army scaled down to the level of men with 90 points.

(A soldier receives three points for each month of overseas service and two points for each month's service in Canada plus 29 per cent if he is married or 20 per cent if he is either a widower or divorced with dependent children.)

With the veteran 1st division's move, the level drops to 130 points and on departure of the 2nd division it will be lowered to a 110-point level while departure of the third will take the 90 to 110-point men.

Whereas the 1st division's strength is roughly 18,000 and the 2nd's 16,400, strength of the 3rd, 5th and 4th is 13,000, 9,000 and 7,000 respectively. The 5th and 4th divisional units returning as such will be scarcely more than token regiments.

LARGER ROLE SEEN FOR CONSCRIPTION IN POST-WAR ERA

Some Sort of Compulsory Military Training Likely in U. K.; Canada and New Zealand

By HENRY JAMESON

London, Sept. 7 — (AP) — Peacetime conscription—long the basis for continental military power—seems destined for a larger role in the world's post-war military establishments.

A survey today revealed official support for some sort of compulsory military training in Great Britain, Canada and New Zealand —all powers which depended upon voluntary enlistment to maintain their modest strength before the Second Great War.

Canada is keeping informed upon the discussion of peacetime training in the United States, with the possibility that if the United States adopts such a program Canada would follow suit.

(Basis of the "possibility" that Canada would follow suit if the United States adopts peacetime training was not mentioned in the dispatch.)

The historic opposition of the French section of Canada to conscription, which resulted in a national crisis on both great wars, was directed not so much against conscription as against conscription for an overseas war which the French group declared to be "imperialist."

What Proponents Here Say.

Canadian proponents of a peacetime draft favor several weeks or months of training annually on a universal basis. Already certain Canadian universities have announced compulsory officers' training courses.

At present the Canadian draft law is such that men were conscripted only for service on the North American continent with the exception of 16,000 ordered overseas last December and January. Other troops overseas were volunteers.

Australia, which had peacetime conscription for National Defence only, plans to continue on the same basis. Holland contemplates no changes in her present compulsory military service laws before 1946.

France to Continue Policy.

France which puts every physically qualified man of 21 into uniform for two years unless he is a navy or Air Force volunteer, intends to continue that policy.

The British cabinet is known to be discussing peacetime compulsory military training. Several ministers in the Labor government are committed to peacetime conscription, including Foreign Secretary Bevin. Pending a cabinet decision, Britain continues to draft men from 18 to 30 to replace those released through demobilization.

The only Dominion to conscript for overseas duty during the war was New Zealand, which had no conscription in peacetime. While no definite decision yet has been reached on future policy, many officials avowedly favor a larger army with a compulsory military training program for youths during two or three months of the year.

But peacetime conscription will disappear from two of its former strongholds—Germany and Japan.

GOVT. DIRECTS USE OF RED ENSIGN AS CANADIAN FLAG

Japanese Ate 19 Of Indian Prisoners

Brisbane, Sept. 7. (CP)—Japanese troops in New Guinea ate the flesh, livers and brains of their Indian prisoners, rescued Indian Army officers asserted today.

The Indian officers, freed from Wewak and now at a Queensland Rest Camp, include Capt. Du Perzai, Dr. Subadar Jurchuran Singh and Jemadar Casin, all captured by the Japanese at Singapore.

Of 300 Indian prisoners taken to Wewak, New Guinea stronghold of the Japanese, only 50 lived, the officers said. They said 19 were sent outside the compound to search for food, then were killed and eaten by the Japanese.

Canada's Legation At Hong Kong Stands Amid Ruins

By COL. R. S. MALONE
Director of Public Relations, Canadian Army

Tokyo, Sept. 7 —(CP Cable)— Canada's legation in Tokyo stands undamaged, a veritable's "oasis" amidst block after block or ruined desolation in the Japanese capital.

In almost a complete circle around it every house has been levelled or burned while the trees around the legation have been levelled or burned while the trees around the legation have been scorched and part of the garden wall damaged but there is not a scratch on the building, rated one of the finest in Tokyo.

The Swiss legation staff, due to damage to their own building, is occupying the Canadian steructure temporarily and gave a great welcome yesterday to Col. L. V. M. Cosgrave, Canadian military attache at Canberra, Australia, and the writer.

They had taken scrupulous care of the building where everything is spotlessly clean.

Canadian W.C. Who Warned Ceylon Of Jap Fleet Released From Prison

Written for The Canadian Press
By GEORGE HAWKES
Sydney Daily Mirror Correspondent

Tokyo, Sept. 7 —(CP Cable)—A Canadian wing commander who risked his life to give warning of a Japanese naval fleet steaming toward Ceylon in 1942 and was captured in the effort, today drove along the same streets in Yokohama as his Japanese torturers had made him stumble as a laborer.

"By God, what I suffered in these awful streets," he explained as he drove along in a truck. Then he lapsed into moody silence. He was remembering—and trying to forget.

(This dispatch did not give the names of the wing commander or of members of his crew).

(The Canadian flier mentioned, however, was obviously Wing Cmdr. Leonard J. Birchill, 30, R. C. A. F. permanent force, born at St. Catharines, Ont., and educated at the High School there and at the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

(Birchill joined the R. C. A. F. July 5, 1937, and won the D. F. C. May 13, 1943, for warning Ceylon authorities of the approach of the Japanese fleet. The warning enabed the island to fight off the invaders. His warning came while he was flying over the sea and it was the last word heard from him until it was learned he had been taken prisoner. His wife lives at (237 German St., Saint John, N. B.)

The flier, whose home is in the vicinity of St. Catharines, Ont., has lived under a veil of silence since April 4, 1942, yet he has the distinction of having been promoted from the rank of squadron leader to wing commander while in captivity.

Appropriation Bill Of $1,365,000,000 Up for Approval

To Cover War and Associated Expenses Sept. 1 to March 31

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP)—Notice of an appropriation bill for $1,360,000,000 for war and associated expenditures was given in today's Commons votes and proceedings. This is to cover the seven months from Sept. 1 to March 31 and compares with the $2,000,000,000 passed last session to cover the first five months of the present fiscal year.

Last session's vote included mutual aid which ended with the termination of the war and this, to a considerable extent, accounts for the lower total in the new bill.

Legislation to cover export credit, which will take over the place of mutual aid, will be provided, it is expected, in separate bills.

Provision also is made in the orders for an interim vote of $400,000,000 to cover the time Sept. 1 until the appropriations bill has passed parliament.

Today's notice provides:

"1. That a sum not exceeding $1,365,000,000 be granted to His Majesty toward defraying any expenses or making any advances or loans that may be incurred or granted by or under the authority of the Governor in Council during the year ending March 31, 1946, or

"(A) The security, defence, peace, order and welfare of Canada;

"(B) The conduct of naval, military and air operations in or beyond Canada;

"(C) The expeditious demobilization of the Canadian armed forces;

"(D) Promoting the continuance of trade, industry and business communications, whether by means of insurance or indemnity against war risk in any other manner whatsoever; and

"(E) The carrying out of any measure deemed necessary or advisable by the Governor in Council in consequence of the war.

Empowered to Raise.

"2. That the Governor in Council be empowered to raise by way of loan under the provision of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit act, 1931, such sum or sums of money, not exceeding in the whole the sum of $1,365,000,000 as may be required for the purpose of defraying such expenses or making such advances or loans, the principal and interest of any such loans to be a charge upon and payable out of the consolidated revenue fund.

"3. That the Governor in Council be empowered to re-expend, advance or loan money that may be received by way of refund or repayment of advances loans or expenditures under the War Appropriation Act of 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945."

All-Ethopia Concession Is Granted to Oil Co.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has granted an exclusive oil concession covering his entire 350,000-square-mile empire to the Sinclair Oil Corporation, part of it under a 50-year lease, it was announced yesterday by H. F. Sinclair, President.

HAILSTONES LIKE EGGS

Enjoys Hospitality After 44 Months Of Asiatic Food

(By Lieut. R. W. Queen Hughes)

Shamshuipo Camp, Kowloon, Sept. 7 —(CP Cable)— Civilization is marvellous.

After three years and eight months of Asiatic food and accommodation, most of the Winnipeg Grenadiers have tasted hospitality aboard the Prince Robert and vote Canada tops. We all hope those Grenadiers held in Japan have the same good luck.

Since Aug. 11, when we learned via the underground route that Japan would quit, we have been in a state of nerve-racking impatience.

But now there will be no more rice and greens, no more iron beds, no more bed bugs, no more barbed wire. And there will be no more Japs. We now can eat our vitamins by the knife-and-fork method instead of receiving them by hypodermic needle. It's farewell to beriberi and pellagra.

We've had the pleasure of sitting in chesterfield chairs in the Prince Robert wardroom with electric fans to cool our brows. We've had a genuine three-course lunch off white table cloths in decent dishes with civilized knives and forks and all the fixings with someone else to wash them when we're through.

Best of all, we've had recent news of Winnipeg and Winnipeggers. All we now need to make our happiness complete is an individual communication from our loved ones.

Prisoners Enjoy Life Aboard Prince Robert

By LIEUT. ROBT. DUNN, R.C.N.

Aboard H.M.C.S. Prince Robert, Kowloon, China, Sept. 7. (CP Cable)—From England to Victoria the Canadian anti-aircraft cruiser Prince Robert is known as a friendly ship but none has seen a more generous spirit than former prisoners of war taken at Hong Kong who have been visiting her since she secured her lines to the jetty four days ago.

The Prince Robert became an "Open House" to all ex-prisoners and sailors outdid themselves in hospitality. In return, the prisoners presented the navy men with unusual souvenirs of their visits to South China.

The prisoners enjoyed such delicacies as cigarets, chocolates and good food for the first time since Hong Kong's fall Christmas Day 1941. One ship's meal of soup, halibut or steak, bread, butter and cheese and deep cherry pie represented more than a week's food at the camp. The Prince Robert had good supplies of food —fortunately.

PICKEREL WERE REALLY BITING AT MOIRA L.

Jack Lee and son Don held a field day at Moira Lake last Sunday when the pickerel, they said, were so ravenous they almost took bites out of the boat. The day's haul was sixteen fine specimens of pickerel, and had the boys not run out of bait this number could have been doubled, so they say.

As it was, they caught the last six fish with the same minnow, as the fish were biting so hard that they would strike at anything that flashed in the water.

Anyway that's their story.

Boy Finds Large Lamprey Coiled Around Pickerel

The fish story of the week comes from Presqu'Ile Point. It is said to be true and is vouched for by several people.

It seems that a young son of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Fritz, Quebec City, vacationers at the point, was sitting in a small boat on the bay shore of the Point when a large pickerel said to weigh in the vicinity of ten pounds came in on the shore with a large lamprey wrapped around its body.

Not knowing much about fish or fishing, the youngster stepped into the shallow water caught the fish and tossed both its and its companion in the boat.

It is believed the pickerel had come ashore in an effort to rid itself of the fish by rubbing it on the stones.

Strangled, Nude Body of Waitress Found in Woods

Fayette City, Pa., Sept. 7 (AP) —Police sought two young men today for questioning about the death of 17-year-old Anna Elizabeth Dreyer, pretty, red-haired waitress whose strangled, nude body was found in the woods just off a highway yesterday.

Miss Dreyer disappeared after finishing work at a restaurant early last Saturday morning and searching parties have been looking for her since that time.

The young woman was known to friends as the "Sunshine Girl" because she took sunbaths and exercised heartily to build herself up after an attack of rheumatic fever.

Authorities said she had been strangled with a man's belt, which still was twisted tightly about her neck when she was found.

Some of her clothing lay nearby and other pieces were as far as a mile away. Police expressed belief she had died in an automobile, and that her body was taken from it to the underbrush.

One of the young men sought already had been questioned by police, but released. Officers wished to question him again, and a friend, but reported they could not be found.

Little Girl Murdered.

Edensburg, Pa., Sept. 7—(AP) —Nine-year-old Lloyd James Edwards of nearby South Fork, Pa., was being held in Cambria County Jail today awaiting a hearing on a charge of murder in the death of a three-year-old neighbor's girl, Phyllis Jean Epperson, Thursday night.

State Police Sgt. Vincent F. Bunch said he filed an information charging the schoolboy with murder before Justice of the Peace Elizabeth Rowland of Edensburg last night.

The little girl was found dead on an embankment along the rocky bed of the little Connemaugh River. Her head had been crushed.

Firemen searching for Phyllis when she failed to come home after dark, discovered the body near the rocky creek bed.

State Police and Sheriff's officers said the boy, whom they found sleeping peacefully with his brother at his home readily told them he pounded the girl with bricks when she stumbled and fell trying to get away from him.

The lad dressed, accompanied officers to the scene and reenacted the details, Police said.

Authorities took four bloodstained rocks weighing a pound or so each from the creek bed as evidence.

Police said the boy told officers he did not realize he had killed anyone, but that he knew he had done something wrong. No motive was established.

He will receive $50,000 a year. His annual salary as commissioner was $10,000.

Belleville Fair Attracting Large Number of Entries; Fine Stage Show Arranged

Final plans for the 1945 edition of the Belleville Exhibition were discussed last night at a special meeting of the Board of Directors. It was decided to call the fair this year the "Victory Exhibition" to commemorate the signing of peace by the warring nations.

Warden J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A., of Hastings County will officially open the Exhibition at a special ceremony to be held in front of the grandstand on Monday evening, Sept. 17.

According to Secretary Erle Denyes, entries in all classes are coming in consistently and bid fair to equal if not better those of the best year. The horse classes, for instance, are showing entries far in excess of those of a year ago and many prominent breeders from all parts of the province have entered or written requesting prize lists.

Cattle entries are also high as are other livestock classes. The poultry exhibit, one of the first to be held in years is attracting the attention of county and district breeders and will likely be one of the outstanding exhibits in this phase of the fair.

The Baby Show has also proved popular with proud parents and a large number of entries has been received by the secretary in both classes. The show will take place on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 18.

The Conklin Midway will be here in all the brilliance and glory of other years and many added features will be seen. The stage performance in front of the grandstand will be one of the most elaborate ever staged by the directors and under the well-known Billy Garden this attraction should be one of the many highlights of the show.

Rolling Acres of Landed Gentry Broken Up in East, Central Europe

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Quietly, but with that inevitability which characterizes the European politico-social upheaval, the expropriation and redistribution of the rolling acres of the landed gentry is proceeding in the eastern and central part of the continent.

With the comings and going of that section of Europe more or less sub rosa, few details have been available. We know there has been extensive expropriation of the properties of the feudal barons of Poland. There are indications that similar changes are going forward in Hungary, the Balkans and East Prussia.

Now comes news that the tide has reached Western Europe. This is in Saxony, Russian-occupied Germany, where large landed estates are being broken up and turned over to the small tillers of the soil.

There seems no reason to believe that the program won't spread to other parts of Germany.

Sweeping Decree in Saxony.

The development in Saxony is disclosed in a decree published in Berlin newspapers, breaking up the landed estates — one of the first great west European experiments in Communist land reform. This decree is sweeping. It expropriates all agricultural wealth belonging to anyone who was actively associated with the Nazi party in any way, shape or manner. It's a net with a mesh so small that few fish will escape.

The fever of reform has spread from Saxony to Mecklenburg, Brandenburg and Thuringia. There German Communists are arranging mass meetings at which farmers and small peasants are passing resolutions, condemning the Junkers and other land barons as reactionaries. Thus the way is being paved for further possible expropriations.

Estates Broken Up.

The reform in Poland has been sweeping. The Polish press agency, which is the official medium of the provisional government of Poland, says that by the end of last April 7,269,053 acres of land had been parcelled out to 269,899 families. As a concrete illustration of what is happening, it is said that the 6,000-acre estate of Count Alfred Potocki has been distributed among 1,050 peasant families.

An important development in connection with this vast Polish land reform is the establishment of new agricultural schools; the news agency says 329 are now in operation.

Without attempting to draw sweeping conclusions from these expropriations, it is an important commentary that much of the wealth of the Prussian war lords has come from great feudal estates which have been in the same families for generations. Thus it is obvious that some of the strongest roots of German militarism are being torn up in this manner.

Of course the mere ownership of many acres doesn't make a man a rascal, it's true, however, that in numerous parts of Europe there still exists a feudalism which at one and the same time has kept land from the peasant and has waxed fat from the sweat of farm laborers. In many instances these families of serfs have been attached to the same estates for generations, unable to break away and set up farming for themselves, even though untold thousands of acres were set aside by the barons for deer shooting and the like.

Seen in Bulgaria.

I've seen a small army of peasant girls digging with shovels on a great estate in Bulgaria, and have had the wealthy landowner tell me with a laugh that he paid them only 15 cents a day each, with a spot of food at noon. This sort of thing has been more or less typical of many parts of the Balkans and eastern Europe. There's been much of it in western Europe, for that matter, though not so medieval in form as one has seen in other sections.

California's 'Big Eye' Will Seek Secrets of the Skies in Two Years

The "big eye," the 200-inch telescope of the California Institute of Technology, will begin seeking out space some time in 1947. Work on the project, conceived in 1928 but halted by the war, will be resumed in November. It is to cost $6,000,000.

The observatory building on Mount Palomar in San Diego County is finished as is an 11.8-mile road to the summit of the mountain.

The main task is that of shaping the huge glass disk into a paraboloid which will make it slope a few thousandths of an inch deeper at the centre than the curve of a perfect sphere, and the final precision grinding with a rotating tool in a special cork-lined and dustless astro-physics laboratory. Manufacture of mechanical apparatus for the telescope is about 90 per cent completed.

Contrary to the general impression, the magnifying power of the telescope will be moderate. It will wrest no secrets from such relatively close objects as the moon and the planets, but its great power of concentrating light will enable observers to detect remote celestial objects.

The increased brightness of star images and nebulae, already known, can be photographed with spectrographs of higher dispersion.

Specifically, science hopes to discover, by this telescope, whether the universe is expanding. The expansion theory presents the problem of whether millions of stellar systems hurtle outward after an explosive phenomenon occurring while they were bunched together in a relatively small space, or whether the results observed can be interpreted in some other way, possibly associated with the enormous distances which light must travel through space.

When the finishing touches on the telescope are completed it will be trucked to the summit of Mt. Palomar and put in position. Then there will be several months of adjustments before the glass giant begins to seek out new stellar worlds to conquer.

The tube of the telescope is twenty feet in diameter, sixty feet long and weighs 125 tons. The mirror will lie on a special support system at the lower end of the tube. The weight of the moving parts, including gears and accessories, will be about 425 tons.

CHINESE SPEED JAP SURRENDER ARRANGEMENTS

American Troops Will Stand by and Do Only What Chinese Request

By DONALD HUTH

Nanking, Sept. 7 —(AP)— Indications today were that the official Japanese surrender in China would take place in this capital Sunday (Chinese time).

American troops here will stand by and do only what the Chinese asked them to do during the surrender of Japanese troops in China, estimated at about 1,090,000 men.

A comparatively small number of Chinese, assisted by U. S. troops, will accept the surrender. Collapse of the Japanese came so suddenly that large numbers of Chinese troops were not close enough at hand to take over immediately in the key points throughout China.

U. S. transport planes already have begun the greatest movement of troops by air in the military history of the Asiatic continent. Fully 80,000 men will be involved in the vast movement. The first fleet took off yesterday from Chihkiang in Hunan Province on the 650-mile flight to Nanking, beginning an operation which probably will take 40 days.

Flown to Nanking.

The Chinese 6th army was being flown to Nanking, and the Chinese 94th stood by at Liuchow at Kwangsi Province to be taken on the 900-mile flight to Shanghai, China's greatest city, this movement was expected to begin Sunday. Troops also are being flown to other key cities in the coastal provinces.

(Preparations were under way for Japanese surrender in Shanghai. A delayed dispatch from that city said Lt.-Gen. Chen Shu-Sun, representing the 3rd Chungking army, on Tuesday night handed surrender instructions to Lt.-Gen. Toil Minfu, chief of staff of the Japanese 13th army, detailing the manner of laying down of arms, evacuation of troops and other pertinent data.)

Use Gov't Buildings.

The signing of the surrender terms at Nanking will take place in the National Government buildings. The main surrender there will probably be followed by other surrenders at such points as Canton, Peiping and other cities.

Buildings and automobiles in the capital have blossomed out with Chinese national flags, forbidden until a few days ago by the Japanese.

Guided in by Records.

Chungking, Sept. 7 — (AP) — Phonograph records played by the Japanese-controlled radio station at Nanking helped guide the first American transport planes to the Chinese capital in preparation for the final surrender of Japanese troops in China, it was learned today.

U. S. Air Force pilots had no radio facilities to help guide them to the unfamiliar airfield, so arrangements were made to have the commercial station play records and thus serve as a homing point.

The Japanese refused to play the records during the night hours, so planes were flown to Nanking during the day.

Police Blotter

Two minor accidents occurred in the city yesterday. One was a two-car collision on Front Street incurring minor damages to both vehicles, while a lady backed her car into a hydro pole on Sinclair Street, snapping it off close to the ground. The car was not damaged.

A few drunks were apprehended with the majority paying the conventional ten and costs.

Sent to Ceylon.

Today he arrived from the Niiagto prison camp with 230 prisoners of war—among whom were 26 Canadians, members of the Royal Rifles and the Winnipeg Grenadiers captured at Hong Kong on Christmas Day, 1941. The wing commander explained that in November, 1941 he transferred to the R. A. F. and then was sent to Ceylon.

On April 4, 1942, while captaining a patrolling Catalina flying boat, he suddenly saw in the distance a huge Japanese fleet, which included seven carriers and eight battleships, headed for Ceylon.

He flashed a message to his base which resulted in the British fleet immediately heading to intercept the enemy and drive off the invaders. He then turned about to get a better idea of the composition of the armada.

Attacked by 30 Zeros.

He did not know he was on the fringe of Japanese fighter cover and without warning he suddenly found his Catalina attacked by 30 Zeros which in a few minutes sent his plane hurtling down in flames. One member of his crew was killed outright and two others were wounded.

They had no time to don their parachutes and had to fight their way out of the blazing plane before it sank. Then the Jap fliers came down shooting at the struggling crew members in the water. He and the others were wounded in the legs.

A destroyer subsequently picked them up and later transferred them to an aircraft carrier, where for days despite their wounds, all were mercilessly grilled and beaten with two by fours for refusing to answer the questions plied by intelligence officers.

The same treatment was continued in Yokohama where he was taken. But when the Japanese heard of his promotion, they told him of it and then made him do coolie labor of the most backbreaking type.

The wing commander grinned as he looked at the lieutenant colonel's badges on his shoulders.

"I couldn't find any air force insignia," he said. "I wonder what some of my tormentors would say if they could see me now."

He said that treatment of prisoners at Yokohama was very bad and after all efforts to get medical supplies failed he decided to call a sitdown strike involving the whole Niigato camp, for which he was sent to solitary confinement. Later he travelled to various camps where the treatment varied between bad and worse.

Wonderful to be Free.

"It is wonderful to be free," he said, as he paid compliment to the imprisoned Canadian troops. He said all Canadians he saw were well disciplined and of the highest fortitude.

He complained bitterly that the Japanese had not passed on any of his wife's letters.

The Canadians in this group are being sent to Manila where after processing they will be returned home as soon as possible.

Mosquito Spans Atlantic Ocean In Record Time

Maintains Average Ground Speed of 315 M.P.H. and Crosses East to West in 7 Hours, 2 Minutes

Montreal, Sept. 7—(CP)—Maintaining an average ground speed of 315 miles an hour, despite headwinds which near the end of the trip touched 80 miles an hour, an RAF Mosquito flew non-top from St. Maugans, England, to Torbay, Nfld., Thursday to set an east-west transatlantic record of seven hours and two minutes.

Setting out from the RAF Transport Command base which was the starting point for homeward flights of several RCAF four-engined squadrons, the fleet, plywood Mosquito also became the first twin-engine plane to fly the direct Atlantic route since the start of the war.

The plane landed at Torbay Airport, just outside St. John's, Nfld., a few hours after the air Ministry in London announced that the flight had been cancelled because of weather conditions.

The plane was piloted by Wing Cmdr. Merryfield, and had Flt.-Lt. Spiers as radio-Navigator. RAF Transport Command officials here said the Mosquito came through "very bad weather conditions" which included heavy fog and driving rain, to land at Torbay.

Original plans had been for the Mosquito to land at the United States Navy base at Argentia, Nfld., but this was later changed to Torbay. It was believed unofficially here that this change brought about the report the flight had been cancelled.

The flight gave Mosquitos both the east-west and west-east records. The west-east mark was set several months ago by an RAF Mosquito which flew from Gander, Nfld., to Prestwick, Scotland, in five hours, 36 minutes. The 2,215-mile Gander-Prestwick jump is about 100 less than the route flown by today's west-bound plane.

The previous west-bound mark of nine hours, 56 minutes was set by a four-engine Liberator of British Overseas Airways. While many twin-engine planes have crossed the Atlantic westward during the war years, they have been routed via the sub-Arctic route which provides a mid-ocean stop rather than the direct flight made Thursday.

Canadian Clubs In Germany And Holland Busy

By WILLIAM BOSS
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

Utrecht, Holland, Sept. 6—(CP)—Operation of recreational hotels, clubs and theatres for Canadian officers, N. C. O.s and other ranks in Germany and Holland has reached the proportions of big business, with army officers finding they are running a business with a gross turnover of more than $10,000,000 a year.

A portion of the money is paid by troops but most of it comes from the Dutch government and is chalked against Canadian credits under the mutual aid program.

Amounts paid by soldiers for meals, accommodation and entertainment meet the expenses actually borne by the army. They include vegetables and fruit bought on the market in season, beer and soft drinks on sale in clubs and the hire of orchestras. From Canadian credits with the Netherlands government comes money for staff salaries and the reimbursement for hotels, clubs and theatres requisitioned.

The existing mutual aid program terminates Nov. 8 and headquarters is preparing an estimate of probable requirements and costs thereafter as a guide for Canadian negotiators when a new agreement is made between the Canadian and Dutch governments.

Curtailment in entertainment facilities is probable after Nov. 8 as fewer Canadians will require them and certain establishments will be made available for the use of United Kingdom troops in 21st army group. Some probably will be for the use of United Kingdom troops exclusively.

FAVOUR

WHEN the housewife calls at the grocery store and orders a supply of provisions, she is not asking a favour ... she is buying goods for which she will pay on delivery ... purely a matter of business.

So with your bank. It is a business proposition just as much as the grocery store.

The grocer deals in groceries ... the banker deals in credit. And as the making of loans is one of the principal ways by which his bank derives its revenue, he is as anxious to sell his credit as the grocer is to sell his groceries. And like the grocer, the banker naturally wants to know that he is going to be paid for his goods ... that his loans will be met when they fall due. That, too, is only good business.

When you have occasion to ask for a loan, look at it this way. Come to the Bank, not feeling that you have to ask a favour, but to offer the manager a sound business proposition which will be of profit both to you and to his institution.

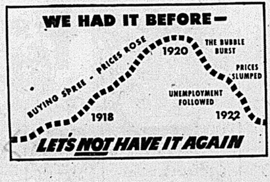
DEFLATION

AND YOU'VE GOT INFLATION

Let's not deceive ourselves by the belief that the danger is over—just because the war is won:
And let's remember that inflation is always followed by deflation with its misery of bankrupt businesses; mortgage foreclosures and unemployment.



It's your job and your savings that are at stake.

The danger of inflation, with its black shadow—deflation,—will remain as long as goods are scarce and insufficient to meet demands. That may be 6 months, 12 months, 18 months. Only time will tell. As quickly as controls are unnecessary, they are dropped.

After nearly 6 years of war, industry cannot switch over to normal production of civilian goods by a snap of the fingers. That takes time. The whole system of raw materials, labor and production has to be re-geared.

* * *

In the meantime, price ceilings, rationing and other controls are the safeguard for every one of us. It's everybody's responsibility to help make them work.

SO—Keep on watching your buying. Don't rush to buy scarce goods.
Keep on saving your money. Put it into Victory bonds and War Savings certificates.
Keep on supporting wage and price controls, and rationing.
Keep on fighting inflation and its black shadow . . . deflation.

This advertisement is issued by the Government of Canada to emphasize the importance of preventing a further increase in the cost of living now and deflation and unemployment later.

Ties That Held

The ties of loyalty and affection between the British Throne and the Far Eastern territories have never been broken but have been maintained in the darkness and suffering of war. That was the message to the people of Singapore by His Majesty King George on the return of that great bastion and seaport to Britain. The King points to the fact that "the time has come when their strength and permanence will again be displayed in calm before the whole world. The evidences of Japanese aggression cannot be wiped out in a day and the work of restoration will be long and heavy but it is a work in which we should be united in pride and in confidence, sure in the faith that security and happiness will, with God's help, be fully restored."

The lands that Japan overran in the flush of her aggression following the sneak war outbreak attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941 made a vast temporary sway for Japan, which as a New York Times writer says "at its greatest extension surpassed the Roman Empire." But the hold was tenuous for against Japan was arrayed great power that continued to grow to the maximum. Japanese have been claiming that the atomic bomb decided them to quit, but before the two atomic bombs were dropped Japan had been losing steadily for a long time and her homeland was being pounded by unrivalled sea and air power. Japan was speeding to the ultimate defeat and the Allied forces had come a long way from the days of the farthest extent of Japanese-seized territory. The Allied advance against Tokyo had been from island to island with a relentless force and energy. Japan had been strangled by the Allied navies. Russia's entry into the war and the dropping of the atomic bombs hastened the end. It is recalled that the former British Prime Minister said that the bombs saved more than a million lives. Before Japan encountered Russia and felt the mighty bomb she was on the way out and had earlier sought to find a way out of the war.

Now Japan is stripped and the lands over which she exercised the ruthless conqueror's hand have come back to their own, to Britain, to China, to the United States, to France and to The Netherlands.

While the war leaves results that will bring changes the old ties with Europe and America remain. Japan never could claim to have made indelible marks on the islands and other territory she snatched in her hurry of aggression. The Allies snapped back too quickly and the recovery of lands in the Pacific is one of the great stories of the war.

Japan aimed at an Asiatic empire of vast dimensions which would have made her a mighty nation could she have attained the goal of her ambition and if so she would have been a great menace to the future of civilization. But Japan never could break or sever the ties of the Asiatic areas to the European and American civilization. She utterly failed in that regard for nowhere did Japan win support from the Asiatics to whom she treacherously appealed. Asia in the Pacific area was wise, it knew what Japanese lack of principle and ideals meant. That the peoples of Asia remained staunch and upright to the cause of their champions in America and Britain is one of the finest tributes to western civilization, whose ties did hold.

These peoples have the intense satisfaction now of knowing that the enemy has been crushed along with his barbaric culture and that their way ahead is bright because freedom has overthrown Nippon's aggression and tyranny.

Singapore

Singapore, "The crossroads of the East," which was re-entered by British this week, is the richest centre and most important port in the Far East. It lies on the principal trade route from Europe to the Far East and astride the shortest route to the South China Sea and to the Indian Ocean. It handles a large volume of the trade to India, China, Japan, Australia, the United States, the United Kingdom, and Europe, and has developed extensively as the principal shipping and transhipment port for the Malay Peninsula, Siam, French Indo-China, British Borneo, and much of the Netherlands East Indies. In peace-time it is a port of call for all important shipping lines trading between Europe and the Far East, with frequent regular sailings by all classes of ocean-going ships to and from Europe, China and Japan, and to a lesser degree Australia and America. It has frequent regular services of small ships of the coastal type to the ports of Malaya, the Netherlands East Indies, Borneo, Siam and neighboring countries. Work on the great modern naval base, begun in 1924, was completed in 1938.

The ancient city of Singapore Island was destroyed by the Javanese about 1365. The island remained waste until the present settlement was founded in 1819 by Sir Stamford Raffles, who leased the site on behalf of the East India Company from the Sultan of Johore, by whom the entire island was ceded to the British by the Treaty of 1824. Sir Stamford Raffles, influenced by old histories, chose the natural centre to which he foresaw trade would flow from all corners of the world, and promised in 1820 that Singapore should become the pride of the East. The population, about a hundred and fifty when the settlement was founded, is now over half a million. The development of Singapore has been due to British administration, financed by British and Asiatic capital.

Up to the surrender to the Japanese in February 1942, Singapore was a free port. There were no port, harbor, dock, town or light dues charged. The customs duties for excise were on opium, alcoholic liquors, tobacco and petroleum only. Its trade in normal times consists of the importation of cottons, cigarettes, machinery, milk, provisions, hardware and other manufactured goods from Europe, America, India and the Far East, and their distribution in the Malay States, Borneo, Sumatra and other parts of the Malay archipelago; also the collecting of general tropical produce from these countries and reshipping to the consumer markets of the world. The two sides of its trade are complementary: The produce pays for the manufactured goods and the machinery of collection is closely interlocked with that of distribution. There is also a large import and export trade in rice, sugar and petroleum.

All classes of vessels can approach the port at any state of the tide. Plans were ready at the outbreak of war to increase the wharfage to nearly three miles.

The Singapore Harbor Board provided a large storage capacity. There were extensive oil fuel storage and fuelling equipment and repair facilities. The Singapore Harbor Board reports that during the year ended June 1938 a total of 3,231 vessels, with a total net registered tonnage of 9,756,419 tons, berthed at the wharves. A total of 1,807,444 tons of inward cargo and 1,576,559 tons of outward cargo were dealt with.

The urgent need now is to rehabilitate Singapore at the earliest possible moment, to supply the armies in Malaya, repatriate large numbers of Allied prisoners-of-war and internees, and to serve as a shipping centre for rubber, tin and other commodities. The appointment of a British Naval Commander is expected shortly.

Why Lower Casualties

(Belfast Telegraph)

In spite of a worse start than in 1914-18, the general direction of the war on the non-aggressors' side was far more long-sighted and efficient this time than last. Sorely beset and alone for a whole year, Britain had no hope whatever of winning a short war. She needed time to equip herself after Dunkerque. At all costs the sea lanes had to be kept open, the air arm lengthened and strengthened, the armies recruited and trained. Daring decisions were taken on occasion, decisions that were of tremendous moment in the general war, but the ground plan was long-term, the ruling idea being wherever possible to build up strength, so that the counter-blow when it came should be decisive. Time was needed too to recruit allies. This immense job of defeating German militarism could never have been finished alone. In due time all these things were accomplished and history will give British leadership, military and political, much of the credit, for therein lies the explanation of why Britain's casualties were mercifully lighter than in 1914-18, why this time there were no reckless adventures.

FIRST FAILURES

What if the dream be disallowed
And failure be your share,
'Twere better that than being cowed
And beaten by despair.

The easier way is to submit
And follow with the throng
Than stand alone to fight for it,
And prove the crowd was wrong.

Behind all triumph worth the name
Unnumbered failures lie
Which paved the way for one who came
And dared once more to try.

Butcher of Warsaw, Jos. A. Meisinger, Captured in Japan

San Francisco, Sept. 7 — Bob Brumby said in a mutual broadcast from Tokyo Thursday that the "Butcher of Warsaw," hulking Joseph Albert Meisinger, has been captured by five Americans who travelled 65 miles into unoccupied Japan on a tip that the Nazi was living among 100 German militarists in refuge.

Acting on secret information from an undisclosed source, Brumby said, the five Americans journeyed to an hotel in the Japanese interior, ate lunch with two Germans and learned that Meisinger was living in a room below.

The broadcast said Meisinger would be taken to Yohohama in American custody.

Meisinger was accused of slaying of 100,000 Jews in Warsaw between 1939 and 1941, when he went to Japan.

Emperor Decided To Sue for Peace As Early as June 22

By THOMAS J. O'DONNELL

Baltimore Sun Papers War Correspondent

(Distributed by The Canadian Press)

Tokyo, Sept. 7 — The Emperor of Japan decided as early as June 22 to surrender to the Allies, long before the atom bomb was used and the Russians entered the war, it was informed yesterday by Ito Hasegawa, foreign service manager of the Domei agency, who played some little part in the subsequent proceedings.

Hasegawa, who spent five years in London up to December, 1941, said the Emperor decided to call it quits after having lost all confidence in the Japanese army.

While the Japanese navy staked all its remaining strength in the defence of Okinawa, Hasegawa said, the army did not. The army's strategy was to wait until the American actually invaded the homeland and therefore it would not commit any considerable number of troops to Okinawa, he said.

The Emperor on June 22 held a secret conference with certain cabinet ministers and elder statesmen and decided then and there to sue for peace.

GOVT. DIRECTS USE

Victory was bought at a great price, said the speech as it went on to pay tribute to the fighting forces of Canada and other United Nations, express sympathy for the bereaved and the maimed and make special mention of prisoners now liberated from the Japanese.

The speech said the recent Dominion-Provincial conference made a "successful beginning" in considering proposals directed to high employment, high income and Dominion-wide social security. The government hoped when the conference resumed an agreement would be reached which would "make possible a reorganization of the Dominion tax structure on a simpler, more equitable basis, conducive to the expansion of enterprise and employment."

Peacetime Version Anticipated.

Reference to extension of "specified emergency powers" is understood to forecast a peacetime version of the War Measures Act under which the government exercised wide powers to legislation by order-in-council.

The measure has to do with the government's announced policy of continuing some war time controls, including those applied to prices and wages for a time after the end of hostilities. Whereas the War Measures Act powers are "general" the powers under the new bill will be specified.

Measures contemplated "to stimulate the restoration and expansion of external trade" are expected to include credits for Britain and other countries, enlargement of the lending powers under the export credits insurance act of last session and perhaps some tariff changes.

NEW SPEAKERS

Steps Not Intimated.

While the Throne Speech mentioned the desire of selecting a national flag, it did not intimate that steps, if any, would be taken to select a national anthem.

The legislation dealing with the defining of Canadian citizenship is expected to do away with the present practice of having Canadian citizens listed only as British subjects.

In connection with domestic relations the speech referred to measures of social security already enacted, including family allowances and unemployment insurance, and mentioned governmental proposals for health insurance and more generous old age pensions made to the provinces at the Dominion-Provincial conference.

Measures looking to the care, re-establishment and rehabilitation of Canadian servicemen and women will be consolidated and known as the Veterans' Charter, the speech said.

In the United States, the so-called "GI Bill of Rights" would be a parallel.

Put in Permanent Form.

Although the speech mentioned specifically only order-in-council as due for "consolidation," Veterans Minister Mackenzie later said it was intended to "put into permanent form" all measures passed during the last siv years. These would include both legislation and orders-in-council.

He said a Commons committee probably would be appointed to consider the charter and those things it is intended to encompass.

"Sine 1939," he said, "we have been passing acts in Parliament looking to the day when re-establishment would be in order. We have also been passing orders-in-council, some of which represented amendments, some of which established principles.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page or 100 Words Long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed.

TO ROLL OR NOT TO ROLL

Did you take your somersaults? (Brady style) this morning, old timer? What! You didn't? Well, no wonder you are grumpy, crabbed and cantankerous and don't give me that hackeyed line about your liver or your nerves.

I specify Brady style somersaults in order to forestall accidents which might occur if any one were to attempt a Websterian somersault. Webster's New International Dictionary (1935) defines somersaults as "a leap or jump in which a person turns his heels over his head, forward or backward, without touching the ground with any portion of the body; a turning end over end."

When I was a kid in Canandaigua some of the Chapel Street gang (Charlie Bradburn, Johnny Scantlin and another kid whose name I modestly refrain from mentioning here) could and did Websterian somersaults on those fine lawns of Main Street residents on our way to and from school (all persons having claims for damages to lawns or hedges should file them with the Canandaigua Messenger). We called them airsprings.

Now here is the way you do a Brady somersault. You crouch down close to the ground, rest palms on ground for support, bend your neck and touch the ground with crown of head as though to stand on your head, keep curled up tightly, give a little push with your feet and over you go and up on your feet — but without ever for an instant losing contact with the ground. Any real kid will show you. I'm sorry for any kid that cannot do Brady somersaults forward or backward and come up on his or her feet smiling and unflustered, for, such inaptitude shows the individual's education has been neglected. Barring illness or disability for which you are or should be under medical care, every adult who reads this should as of today or years ago, roll half a dozen somersaults (my kind) first thing every morning. I'm not fooling about this. You know if you have followed this column, that I have little use for medicine, for myself. I'll take the damned stuff if my doctor orders me to take it, but otherwise, no, thank you. But I take my somersaults six rolls before breakfast every morning, and frequently another half dozen here in my playroom if I get tangled up or stuck for a word or the right way to deal with some problem. Through the years I have found that the stunt (which takes only a few seconds) is a real ironer-outer for such kinks.

But that is merely incidental. If we had an extra column of space I could quote a few testimonials from people who have been rolling their own for many years. But it is doubtful if there will be sufficient space to print even this. Never mind—if you want to know more about the silly business send me a stamped self addressed envelope and ask for (do not use clipping) "Invitation to the Somersaultauqua," which tells how to turn 'em and why.

Answer—No. Do as you like.

No Such Thing

Kindly state whether it is harmful to use saccharin tablets in coffee. Have been told it is bad to use unless one has diabetes. (Mrs. A. C.)

Answer—Any one may use up to five grains of saccharin daily with impunity.

A Lot of Calcium

Engineers say a limestone mountain I own contains over sixteen million tons of calcium. It has been quarried for fluxing stone, macadam, agricultural fertilizer, with little profit. Keep on telling people to take calcium for rheumatiz and maybe I can put up a chemical plant and get rich. (W.H.I.)

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

"Third degree" is the popular name applied to a very searching examination or grilling of a suspected person by the police, especially when accompanied by unduly severe treatment, for the purpose of extorting from him an admission or a confession.

"Third degree" was derived from Freemasonry, the third degree in that order being that of Master Mason, which is conferred with particularly elaborate initiation ceremonies.

As applied to police methods the term was popularized, if not actually coined, about 1911 by Major Richard Sylvester, superintendent of Washington police.

Third degree methods, as the term is now employed, may consist of such mental and physical tortures as girding the prisoner head and foot, questioning him continuously for several days without permitting him to eat or sleep, beating him with a rubber hose, which is very painful but which leaves no mark, threatening him with a display of weapons, and other brutal and cruel treatment designed to break down his resistance and force him to confess.

The U. S. Supreme Court declared in the "Wan Case" that a confession obtained under duress is not proper evidence. Several times since then the same tribunal has reiterated its disapproval of the use of forced confessions as a basis for convictions.

The Federal Constitution provides in Amendment V that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself" and in Amendment VII that "excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted."

Text of Speech From Throne

Ottawa, Sept. 7 —(CP)— Text of Speech from the Throne opening the 20th session of Parliament on Thursday.

Honorable members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

You will rejoice with me that the opening of the 20th Parliament of Canada comes at the moment of the victorious conclusion of the war.

It is just six years ago that Parliament met in special session in anticipation of a declaration of war. Since that time, war has been waged continuously first against Germany, later also against Italy and Japan. From the very beginning, the resources of Canada and the utmost efforts of our people were commited to the fight for freedom and to the winning of victory.

One by one, the aggressor nations and their satellite states have suffered total defeat by the armed forces of the United Nations. All have been compelled to surrender unconditionally. The terms of surrender were signed by Italy on Sept. 8, 1943; by Germany, on May 8 of the present year; and by Japan, on the eve of the present week. The month of August witnessed the devastating use of the atomic bomb against Japanese cities, and the entry of the U. S. S. R. into war against Japan. Thus the world encircling conflict, the most terrible of wars in human history, was brought to its close. Not only has victory been complete, it has been won over strongly organized and sinister forces working in combination in an attempt at world conquest and domination.

Give Humble Thanks.

As you assemble at the opening of a new parliament, I join with you in giving humble and grateful thanks to Divine Providence for the deliverance which His mercy has vouchsafed to the peoples of our own and other lands. We of this day and generation have been the witnesses of a mighty manifestation of the workings of the moral law which inexorably connects wrong-doing with retribution. It is as applicable to nations as to men.

In the titantic conflict between the forces of good and evil, it has been ours to behold the triumph of right and justice. In this victory, we find the assurance of the ultimate triumph of righteousness as we seek to bring into being a new order founded upon world security and social justice.

Bought at Great Price.

The victory over Nazi and Fascist tyranny in Europe and over Japanese militarism in Asia has been bought at a great price. As the appalling extent of the power of the forces of aggression and tyranny was revealed, the free peoples of the world slowly began to realize what they owe to the Allied Nations who first opposed the aggresors. To their heroic resistance and to the armed might of all the United Nations, humanity owes not only its freedom, but everything which free men value and cherish most.

Our thoughts at this time are especially of the members of Canada's forces who have given their lives that victory might be ours and not our enemies'. The whole nation reverently bows its head in tribute to their sacrifice. At this hour, our hearts share, in special measure, the hopes and expectations of those who yearn for the return of their loved ones, now liberated after three and a half years in Japanese prison camps. The deep sympathy of Canada is with all who have been bereaved, and with those who have suffered impairment of body or mind, imprisonment, privation or want.

History Will Record.

It will be for history to record the magnitude of Canada's contribution in this global conflict. We rejoice that our armed forces have achieved so much in helping to defend and liberate nations to whose past and present our own is so closely akin. Our country will ever remember with pride and heroic exploits of Canada's fighting men and merchant seamen.

We pay tribute as well to the men and women without whose loyal and steady work on the farms, in forests, mines and fisheries, in factories, workshops and offices, in hospitals and homes, and in transport and other services, victory could not have been achieved. Canada's great contribution to victory has been made possible by the unbroken partnership of her warriors and her workers.

To all who have contributed by service and sacrifice to victory, I would, in the name of parliament, express our country's gratitude.

So far as the future could be foreseen, my ministers had taken steps to see that Canada was prepared to meet the very difficult situation which would arise when victory had been won. Under the authority of parliament, relief was provided to assist in feeding, clothing and housing destitute populations, and in rehabilitating areas devastated by enemy action in Europe. Additional measures to assist in meeting these and other imperative needs will be submitted for your consideration.

Preparations for the demobilization, rehabilitation and re-establishment in civil life of the men and women in the armed forces were well under way when Germany surrendered. The same is true of measures for the reconversion of the economic life of our country from a wartime to a peace-time basis, and for the maintenance of a high level of employment and national income. The plans thus developed to meet the requirements of the period of transition are now being put into full operation.

Will Promote Peace.

In the building of a new world order, my ministers are determined to seek above all else the promotion of peace, work and health in domestic and international relations. To further these great objectives, the government has received a definite mandate from the people of Canada.

The charter of the United Nations which was signed by the representatives of the 50 nations who took part in the conference at San Francisco will be submitted for your approval. The charter expresses their determination to maintain peace in accordance with justice and respect for human rights, and to promote the welfare of all peoples by international co-operation.

Successful Beginning.

To the promotion of national well-being, co-operation and good-will between the Dominion and Provincial governments are as essential as these attitudes, between nations, are to the maintenance of world peace and international prosperity. You will be pleased to know that at the Dominion-Provincial conference held at Ottawa during August, a successful beginning was made in the consideration of proposals designed to contribute to the maintenance of a high level of employment and National Income, and to the establishment of nationwide social security.

Could Re-organize Structure.

It is the earnest hope of my ministers that, when the conference resumes its deliberations, agreement may be speedily reached which will place the Dominion and all the provinces in a financial position to discharge effectively their several responsibilities. Such agreements would make possible a re-organization of the Dominion tax structure on a simpler, more equitable basis, conducive to the expansion of enterprise and employment.

Every effort is being put forth to ensure the return to Canada as rapidly as military commitments and transportation facilities will permit, of our armed forces serving abroad, and to accelerate the orderly release of men and women from the forces.

Through the joint efforts of the government, industry and labor, the conversion of war industries to civilian production is taking place with a minimum of delay and inconvenience.

Abolish Restrictions.

It is the intention of the government to abolish war restrictions in progressive steps as rapidly as that can be accomplished without occasioning inflation or other economic disturbances. Such controls as are essential to the welfare of our people will be continued for as long as they are necessary.

You will be asked to approve a measure to extend certain specified emergency powers to meet emergency conditions in the period of reconstruction.

The maintenance of long-term markets for our primary industries is receiving close attention. The continuing need for foodstuffs both at home and abroad will ensure, for some time to come, a heavy demand for the products of our farms and fisheries.

The government is continuing its efforts to stimulate the restoration and expansion of external trade. Measures to this end will be submitted for your approval.

In furtherance of stable international exchanges and adequate provision for international credit, you will be asked to approve a measure to provide for Canadian participation in the international monetary fund and the bank for reconstruction and development.

Provide Houses.

The provision of houses is being pressed forward as rapidly as the supply of materials and labor will permit. Plans already in operation provide for the expansion of home construction to keep pace with increases in the output of building supplies. Priority is being given to houses for war veterans and their dependents.

Plans for the establishment of a national minimum of social security and human welfare are being advanced as rapidly as possible. Unemployment insurance, floors under farm and fish prices, and family allowances are now in force. The government's proposals for the promotion of health and welfare made to the Dominion - Provincial conference include plans for a nation-wide system of health insurance and preventive medicine, and for old age pensions on a more generous basis.

Veterans' Charter.

Other measures demanding your consideration will include a consolidation, as a veterans' charter, of the various orders-in-council relating to the care, rehabilitation and re-establishment of war veterans; a bill to repeal the act establishing the Department of National War Services; a bill to merge the Department of Munitions and Supply and the Department of Reconstruction into a single Department of Reconstruction and Supply. The army and navy have already been placed under the jurisdiction of one minister of National Defence. A further consolidation of all defence services under one minister of the crown will be made in due course.

Members of the House of Commons:

You will be asked to make financial provision for all essential services, also to meet expenditures arising out of the war, and for the purposes of reconstruction. My ministers' proposals with respect to taxation measures will be disclosed in the budget.

Honorable members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

To Have National Flag.

My ministers believe that the position attained by our country among the nations of the world, makes it desirable that Canada, like the other nations of the British Commonwealth, should possess a distinctive national flag. You will the asked to appoint a select committee of members of both Houses of Parliament to consider a suitable design for a Canadian flag.

The government has directed that, pending approval by Parliament of a particular design, the Canadian Red Ensign which was the flag carried into battle by the Canadian army, and which was flown from the peace tower on VE-day and VJ-day as a tribute to the Valor of our armed forces and to Canada's achievement in war may be displayed whereever place or occasion makes it desirable to fly a distinctive Canadian flag.

The government also considers that it is advisable to revise and clarify the definition of Canadian citizenship, and to bring the legislation respecting national status, naturalization and immigration into conformity with the definition of citizenship.. You will be asked to approve the required measures.

No More Monuments.

The government has also been giving consideration to the most suitable manner in which to commemorate, in the capital of Canada, the service and sacrifice of Canadians in the war just ended. In the past, the sacrifice of human life in war has most frequently been commemorated in monuments of bronze and stone. Such a memorial our capital already has. My ministers are of the opinion that something more expressive of the vision of a new world order would, at this time, be most appropriate. They believe that this vision would best find expression in the planned development and beautification of the national capital and its surrounding areas as a national memorial. Steps have already been taken to plan the development of the city and region of Ottawa on both sides of the Ottawa River. As plans are formulated, specific proposals will, from time to time, be submitted to parliament for consideration.

Select Governor-General.

On the recommendation of the government of Canada, His Majesty the King has been pleased to select Field Marshal the honorable Sir Harold Alexander as orable Sir Harold Alexander as my succesor as his representative in Canada. Field Marshal Alexander's duties will not permit of his assumption of office until early in the new year. Meanwhile her Royal Highness Alice and I will pay a short visit to the United Kingdom, returning to Canada for a brief stay before our official departure.

As you take up your heavy responsibilities in these difficult days of reconstruction, I pray that almighty God may guide and bless your deliberations. May you be inspired by the vision of the better future for humanity which it is now within the power of the United Nations to create.

Wave of Tire Thefts in Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 6 —(CP)— The combination of unrestricted gasoline supplies and worn-out tires has resulted in a wave of tire stealing in Toronto, police said today, warning automobile owners to be on the lookout for "car stripping gangs." Latest trick of these gangs is said to be taking the entire four wheels and tires from cars and then cutting through the trunk compartment to make off with the spare.

The bridesmaid, Miss Reta Egan, was a picture of girlish loveliness in a pink sheer floor-length gown with pink silk net shoulder-veil and carried a nosegay of roses and mixed flowers.

Mrs. Joseph Dowling, who acted as matron of honor, was beautifully gowned in floor-length white sheer with silk net shoulder-veil with crown of pink satin and carried a nosegay of roses and mixed flowers.

Miss Jean Dowling, as flower girl, was daintily dressed in white taffeta with white silk net veil and carried a basket of roses, gardenias and ferns.

Mr. Joseph Dowling, of Hawley, brother of the groom, ably supported the groom. Mr. Anson Lord, of Deseronto, acted as usher.

Professor Lucien Nourry, of Kingston, rendered the bridal music.

Following the Nuptial Mass a reception for fifty-five guests was held at the home of the bride's parents. The spacious dining room was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers, and the arch under which the bridal table was laid was centred with white bells and carnations. A profusion of flowers carried out the color scheme. The bridal table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake.

The bride's mother received in a brocaded rose sheer gown with navy accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses and fern. The groom's mother wore black silk crepe trimmed with black sequins and black accessories. Her corsage was of American Beauty roses and fern.

The toasts were proposed by Rev. G. T. Martin and responded to by the groom, Mr. Joseph Dowling, Mr. Edward Dowling, Sr., and Mr. Arthur Ruttan.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pearl necklace; to the groomsman and usher each a lighter. The bride presented her bridesmaid with a gold lapel locket; the matron of honor a pearl necklace, and the flower girl, a Sterling silver locket.

Houses of Fashions Resume Operations In 'Gay Paree'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Paris, Sept. 7. (AP)—The Paris houses of fashion, resuming operations in the face of innumerable difficulties and with little prospect of immediate financial return, are already turning out models of a type which made this city the world's style centre.

Designers Jean Patou and Lanvin gave Paris its first post-war fashion show this week, and while the new models were interesting to spectators, overseas visitors were more impressed by the magnificent textiles which the French government permitted dressmakers to obtain so their industry can go ahead.

The finest woollens, silks, velvets and furs went into the garments.

Both Patou and Lanvin are showing tight-waisted dresses. Most coats are belted tight. Both of these houses are keeping the street dress at low knee in length, but from that point the designers go out on their own.

Both houses made considerable use of fur as a dress decoration.

They are mixing colors skilfully but the show also is studded with the smartest, sophisticated black dresses where the line is all important. These were studied closest by style-wise Parisian women.

Women's Activities

MELROSE W.I.

The regular monthly meeting of Melrose W.I., was held Thursday, August 30, at the home of Mrs. E. Pascoe, Sr.

The meeting was opened and a farewell letter to the Institute from Miss Mary Clarke, was read by the Secretary-Treasurer. It was unanimously agreed to purchase new song sheets now available.

A letter had been received by the President, Mrs. Grant McLaren, from a couple of Canadian boys overseas, who were in hospital. The letter was written on a label from a can of honey donated by Melrose W.I.

The Institute is receiving special donations toward the purchasing of honey to send through the Red Cross for overseas the same as they have been doing for the past few years.

The War Charities collections are to be continued until further notice.

The social part of the program was given over to Mrs. Roy Badgley. Mrs. A. Masters gave an interesting reading "What Won't They do Next With Glass". This reading carried a decided trend toward topic, Post-War Industries. Two numbers were sung from a song sheet. Mrs. Roy Badgley gave the topic "Linking Fields and Factories, for a Post-War World".

Planning a model home was discussed by Mrs. G. McLaren, afterward reading an article, namely "My Home Beautification Project", the main thought being "A Thing of Beauty is a Joy Forever".

The hostess was thanked for the use of her home and the meeting was closed after which dainty refreshments were served by conveners.

Walking barefoot in the bedroom is an easy way to get foot trouble. Toes get stubbed on chairs and punctured from pins. Don't leave clothing on the floor or other things, as traps for unwary feet.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton entertained about fifty of their friends and relatives at their home on Saturday evening, September 1st., this being the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary.

The rooms were tastefully arranged with flowers and the dining room table was centred with a wedding cake. An enjoyable evening was spent with Rev. Mr. Heywood having some contests and later delicious refreshments were served.

The honored couple received many beautiful gifts.

Mrs. Morton was formerly Nettie Holbert, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Holbert, of this village, at whose residence the wedding ceremony was performed twenty-five years ago by the Rev. Mr. Brown of Tweed, in the absence of the resident minister at that time. Mr. Morton is the eldest son of Mrs. W. J. Yateman and the late Edwin Morton, and he, as well as Mrs. Morton, have always lived in this community. Harold is a veteran of the First Great War. Among the guests at the anniversary who attended the wedding were: the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Holbert, Mrs. W. J. Yateman, of Stirling; mother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. William B. Vance and Mrs. Ross Wilson, and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Vance of Bloomfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton have one daughter, Mrs. Claude Dafoe, of Belleville, and one son, Gerald, at home.

Those from a distance attending the anniversary were: Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. George Dafoe and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dafoe, of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Vance, Jimmie and Sharon, of Batawa; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Adams and family of Picton; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Vance of Bloomfield; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Yateman of Stirling, and Miss C. Coulter of Moneymore.

The many friends of this vicinity join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Morton many more years of happy wedded life together.

On Monday evening, September 14th., about seventy-five friends of this community met at the home of Mrs. Albert Richardson in the village to honor her eldest son, Pte. Douglas Richardson, who was leaving for Calgary Tuesday after enjoying a thirty-day leave with his wife and small daughter Terry, at the home of his mother. Douglas has just returned after serving almost four years with the armed forces in the European theatre of war, being in Belgium on V-E Day.

While Douglas has never resided in this community, although he has spent some of his furloughs with his parents, who moved here from Grenfell, Sask., in 1940 and during this time he has won the admiration, as well as the rest of the family, of the people here, who felt they could not let him leave the community without in some small measure showing the appreciation of the sacrifice in which he had made in his life during these years and to wish him success in the years that lay ahead when he and his wife and little daughter settle in their own home, wherever it may be.

Rev. Bernard Heywood acted as chairman in a very pleasing manner and Mrs. Heywood presided at the piano for group singing. Mr. Heywood gave several entertaining and humorous readings. Jackie and Jean Vance favored with a duet and Mrs. Heywood gave a reading "Grandmother's Beaux." Douglas and Irene were then given seats of honor and Miss Betty Vance read a very appropriate address while Mr. William Morton made the presentation of a purse of money on behalf of the Thomasburg community. Douglas, in his usual capable manner, expressed his and on behalf of Irene, their sincere appreciation for the kind and warm thoughts of the people of Thomasburg in honoring them, while Irene expressed her thanks to one and all. She, too, being a newcomer to the community, being a war bride, coming to the village the latter part of May from Edinburgh, Scotland.

Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent socially, everyone departing extending their good wishes for a future happy home for Douglas and Irene and Terry here in Canada.

Douglas has just completed a thirty-day furlough with his wife and small daughter, at the home of his mother, Mrs. A. A. Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dafoe, of Belleville, spent the holiday weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton.

Miss Edna Reid of Tweed, spent the weekend with her mother at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Adams.

The village school bell rang again on Tuesday morning after an all too short vacation for the school pupils who were seen trouping their way back to commence another year of their education. The same two teachers are in charge of the school for another year, namely, Miss Jean Allan, of Madoc, as principal, and Mrs. Arnold Montgomery, Tweed, as assistant.

Mrs. William Vance entertained the ladies of Thomasburg United Church Women's Association at her home for their regular monthly meeting on Thursday last. A Pot Luck dinner with nine ladies and six children was enjoyed at noon and early after the dinner hour more members arrived who had found it inconvxenient to come for dinner. Main Hurling Strength of Tigers And Washington on Bench As Teams Battle Down the Stretch

Hal Newhouser Has Aching Back and Dutch Leonard Sporting Sore Arm

By JACK HAND

(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Hal Newhouser's aching back and Dutch Leonard's lame shoulder further complicate the American League flag race today as the clubs go back to a normal single game gait after two dizzy days and nights of doubleheaders.

Newhouser reported to the Tigers yesterday, before their split with the Yankees, but Manager Steve O'Neill is not sure when he'll be able to start.

"It's all up to Hal", said Steve. "The doctors in Detroit said he's underweight and plenty of rest was needed. He'll go when he says he's ready. That could be today or next week".

Leonard came up with his salary wing trouble after retiring St. Louis Browns in order in the first inning of their twi-night twin bill at Washington. Marino Pieretti finished off the job in satisfactory fashion but Manager Ossie Bluege has cause for future worry in Leonard's condition.

However, things look brighter for the Senators in the won and lost column for they're only 1 1-2 games back of the Tigers. Washington took a hard-fought pair from St. Louis Browns, 2-0, behind Johnny Nigelling and 3-2 on the Leonard-Pieretti combine. Little Marino also contributed three hits to the winning cause, scoring the big run after singling to open the ninth.

Almost Lost Two

Detroit almost lost two to the Yankees but rallied to pull the second out of the coals after trailing 2-0 for six innings. Roy Cullenbine's two-run homer tied it up and Hank Greenberg drove home two with an infield hopper. Joe McCarthy got so excited, arguing over alleged interference, that he was thrown out of a game for the second time this season.

The Tigers finally copped the nightcap, 5-2, with Les Mueller throwing a three-hitter, after absorbing a 14-5 lacing in the opener. Four Yank homers added to 15 walks and two hit batsmen by the futile Detroit throwers made it a cakewalk.

By the split New York remained 5 1-2 lengths out of first. St. Louis is five games behind and Cleveland, virtually eliminated, dropped eight off the pace by bowing to Boston, 9-3.

Chicago broke even in a pair with the last-place Philadelphia Club which took the first contest, 6-5, on George Kell's ninth-inning single. Wally Moses' triple helped Orval Grove even the score in the 2-1 finale.

Cards Lose Ground

St. Louis Cardinals lost another half-game to Chicago Cubs and now trail by five games. Ed Wright of Boston, turned back the World Champs with three blows, 9-1, and Ken Burkhardt of the Birds squared matters for his 16th victory in the 7-3 second game.

Chicago flattened New York Giants, 6-1, in the afternoon, an easy seventh victory for Hank Borowy, the ex-Yankee.

Brooklyn took it on the chin, but hard, in Pittsburgh, losing 17-5, amidst a usual rhubarb with the umpires. Leo Durocher and Luis Olmo were chased by Tom Dunn during an argument about a called strike.

Freshman Howard Fox of Cincinnati celebrated his first pitching success since July 8, snapping a nine-game losing streak at the Phils' expense, 4-1.

Bill Nicholson Of Chicago Cubs Ends Batting Slump

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, Sept. 7. (AP)—Big Bill Nicholson has brushed off the Kibitzers and personally packed the sock back into his terrific "swish" to give the league-leading Chicago Cubs throbbing World Series fever.

At long last, the brawny Cub outfielder apparently has ended his long batting slump.

In his last five games, Nicholson drove across eight runs on two homers, three singles and several belts that were snared against the wall. His 12th homer against New York yesterday was a 425-foot clout against the wind.

Up until Monday, the one-time terror of the league's mound fraternity was batting an anemic .248, had ten scattered homers and batted across 75 runs.

With due respect to the superb pitching of Frank Borowy, Paul Derringer, Hank Wyse, Claude Passeau and Ray Prim, the Cubs' hopes to stave off the Cardinals' stretch challenge rested mainly on an overdue comeback at the plate by Nicholson.

His mates say Nicholson, when in the deepest throes of his slump, would sit and stare blankly at the clubhouse walls trying to figure out the whole thing. Well-meant advice only added to his batting woes. So Big Nick finally decided it was simply mind over matter.

"I just gave up on the 90 different stances everybody was trying to teach me", explained the revived slugger. "I simply decided to go back to my old way of hitting—just standing up there and cutting at that ball.

"Trying to think of what I was doing wrong here and there, left me tightened up so badly across the shoulders that I couldn't swing freely. I'm loose again now and I'm giving that ball a ride for a change".

TORCHY PEDEN WEDS

Chicago, Sept. 7. (AP)—William (Torchy) Peden, of Victory, one of the outstanding six-day bicycle racing stars before the war, was married last night to Miss Ann Mae Jensen, Suburban Park Ridge in the Chicago Temple. They will spend their honeymoon in Victoria. Peden recently returned to civilian life after 31 months as a physical training and drill instructor in the R.C.A.F.

Canadian Sport Snapshot

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Sport's post-war coming-out party seems headed for a "make believe ballroom" unless steps are taken to provide appropriate setting for its star performers.

To elaborate the metaphor, Canada needs skilled direction and streamlined stage props for the big sports show anticipated as a logical war aftermath. The principals are prettied up, but the decor is adequate.

Three unrelated items from the nation's sport pages stress the theme:

1. In Windsor, Ont., a writer suggests an "Olympic-sized sports palace" for Ottawa as a National War Memorial.

2. In Toronto, a senior football team loaded with players whose names scream power may play league games in a public park because no stadium is available.

3. In Vancouver, horsemen feel racing may not survive against increasing competition from wealthy United States tracks.

All three stories are straws-in-the-wind, symptomatic of a national malady which may keep Canadian sport in swaddling cloths.

In suggesting Ottawa as an olympic stadium site, John (Windsor Star) McLean recalls Prime Minister Mackenzie King's statement that the men who fought for Canada made her a "nation among nations" and that Jacques Greber, Paris city planner, has been invited to visit Canada to plan a memorial.

"Mr. King" is not alone in his belief that now as never before the Dominion of Canada is ready to 'stand up and be counted'," says McLean. "There is no reason ..why Canada, one of the greatest amateur sport centres of them all, should not look to the future and to Canadian-staged games in ....1960 or even sooner."

The football problem is more immediate. Toronto Oakwood Indians, potential Grey Cup material with at least six championship veterans signed, face the prospect of playing in an open park because other suitable sites already have been taken by other Toronto teams—Argonauts, Balmy Beach and Varsity. There just isn't room for Indians.

Admittedly, one future plan has been announced for a civic stadium capable of accommodating 40,000 at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds here next year. If the plan develops as expected, the 1946 east-west final may finally have an audience and setting befitting a sports spectacle that could rank with lavish American football shows.

If Canadian sport is to get out of the bush leagues into the big-time, now is the time for action.

6 REPAIR DEPOT, TRENTON, WINS SOFTBALL TITLE

Defeats Air Force Headquarters in Semi-Finals in 21 Innings, 4-3

Trenton, Ont., Sept. 7—The major sporting event of the R.C.A.F. in Eastern Canada, the No. 1 Air Command Athletic championships commenced at R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, yesterday with many stations from Ontario and Quebec contesting to decide the command softball, swimming and diving champions.

The championship crests were awarded to the winning teams by the Air Officer Commanding, Air Vice Marshal E. E. Middleton, C.B.E., who congratulated the service athletes on their fine play and sportsmanship.

Capturing the prized crests of softball supremacy was the league leading team from No. 6 Repair Depot, Trenton, which hammered out a bitterly-fought victory in men's division, downing No. 1 Air Command in the finals, 1-0, with a last-minute counter. The R.D. outfit had earlier outlasted Air Force Headquarters in a 21-inning marathon, winning 4-3.

For the Women's Division, the favored team of R.C.A.F. Station Mountain View sniped the Command laurels by stoping R.C.A.F. Station Rockcliffe 9-2 in the finals.

R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, swept the men's swimming and diving events with 34 points, with St. Hubert runner-up with 21 points and T.E.S., Alymer, third with 10 points.

Air Force Headquarters captured the women's aquatic meet, with No. 5 Radio School, Clinton, and No. 4 Release Centre, Toronto, tied for second with 7 points each.

Other men's softball results: third round No. 1 Air Command, Trenton, defeated No. 4 Release Centre 3-1; No. 6 Repair Repot, Trenton, defeated 4 REMU, Brantford 6-1.

HEATED WORDS SAID

New York, Sept. 6 — (AP) — Orchestra Leader Cab Calloway and Claude Hopkins, a fellow-exponent of jive at the Club Zanzibar, had the joint jumpin' in court yesterday—but they did it with heated words instead of music. Hopkins accused Calloway of punching him during an argument over getting the show started at the club VJ-night. The case will be tried in general sessions court.

Just Call Me Bucko Reporter is Told

Ottawa, Sept. 7. (CP)—"How do you spell your name?" the reporter asked the new member of Parliament.

"M-C-D-. . ."

"No. Your first name".

"Oh, just call me Bucko. That's the name I ran under".

Thus did Wilfred McDonald, Liberal member for Parry Sound constituency, let it be known yesterday his new dignity would not mean the end of the name that stuck with him all through his National Hockey League career.

"Bucko" went searching for words when reporters asked him what he thought of his new job

He mentioned, stiffly, that he figured it was "thrilling" but he knew that wasn't the word he wanted.

So, grinning now and natural, he put it this way:

"I'm new here. I figure that for the time being at least I'll sit back and listen and get to know what goes on. That's the wise thing to do, isn't it?"

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, Sept. 7. (AP)— To get the idea of Hank Borowy's importance in the Cubs' Pennant drive, take a look at the relief pitching figures. . . .in 128 games up to yesterday, the Cubs had called on 14 flingers for 112 relief stints—some successful. . . Since Hank joined up July 29, they played 40 games and the starting pitchers were around on 26 occasions, including all of Borowy's nine starts. . . . The Tigers, incidentally, had 97 relievers in action in 131 games. . . If these two Clubs meet in the World Series, you can expect to see a lot of Walter Wilson and Hy Vandenberg, who have relieved 20 and 18 times, respectively.

Trade Secret.

After Monday's doubleheader in which Chicago's Andy Pafko hit a first-inning homer with the bases full, the versatile Red Smith of the baseball Cubs and football Giants was exulting. : . "A thing like that gives a team a lift that lasts all day", he explained, "and the other team suffers a letdown". . . Steve Owen, Reds' gridiron boss, moaned: "I wish somebody would tell the Philadelphia Eagles that. Seems like every time I look around my club is scoring on them in the first two minutes and we're usually lucky to save the game".

Today's Guest Star.

Billy Kelly, Buffalo Courier-Express: "Leo Durocher has collected $20,000 under a royalty provision in his contract based on attendance. Leo is one [illegible] league manager who isn't going to get the gate—but the gate receipts".

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Hunters, Beware.

Forest fires and unfortunate shooting accidents may result if sportsmen are not careful in the use of any service ammunition which comes into their hands. Incendiary and tracer bullets can easily set fire to forests, while armor-piercing bullets will pass right through ordinary bullet stops if used in an indoor range.

Now that the war has ended, small amounts of army ammunition may reach the hands of semi-service shooting clubs through release by authorities. Again, small amounts may reach the open market through illegal transactions, finally, soldiers may return with stray rounds in their possession.

Officials of "Dominion" Ammunition Division of Canadian Industries Limited have issued a warning that while specialized types of ammunition are not likely to get into the hands of dealers or sportsmen, it would be well to watch for them among questionable supplies or rounds.

As a general rule, do not use any doubtful ammunition with a lacquered bullet nose. These have specialized uses unsuited to sports rifles. A green or black bullet tip on British, American or Canadian ammunition indicates the bullet is armor-piercing and has a high power of penetration. For example, a Mark 7 will penetrate more than 70 inches of pine wood at close range. It will also ricochet without breaking up.

A blue nose indicates an incendiary bullet which will ignite any inflammable object it strikes. A red nose or a white nose indicates tracer ammuntiion which will ignite wood if not completely burned out before it strikes. The red colored tracer will burn for 1000 yards and the white for 600 yards, both much beyond the average sporting shot.

If you find ammunition with copper-red cartridge cases don't attempt to use it in a sporting rifle. It is very likely a proof round of much stronger charge than normally designed for testing barrels. If used indiscriminately it might easily damage the breech.

Although it is very unlikely proof ammunition would get into the hands of the public, it would be even more dangerous if used in foreign arms brought back as souvenirs or dumped on the Canadian market. This is particularly true of the Japanese Ariska rifles which are low quality and poor metal, but it also holds good for European makes, especially rifles picked up by soldiers in abandoned German munition factories. These rifles may be untested or rejected for faulty material or mechanism.

Generally Speaking.

Conny Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs mentor comes forth with the statement that the National Hockey League Club was prepared to back a professional hockey team in any enterprising municipality interested in the undertaking. It would be a sort of second Maple Leaf team made up of pro players, he says. He denied reports that the Leafs were prepared to back a high-salaried junior team ....Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] C. Argue and Mr. and Mrs. Caton of this city won the "high for 2" in the Mixed Rinks Bowling tournament held in Campbellford on Wednesday. Twenty rinks representing Belleville, Peterborough, Havelock, Stirling, Arnprior, Warkworth and Campbellford took part in the tourney which ended early Thursday morning. High for 3 was won by Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Glover and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Archer, Campbellford .... Softball and baseball teams now in the throes of winning playoffs might be the reason for the falling through of the scheme to organize a junior rugby football team here this year....The lads have not been turning out to practice due to other sport attractions, and "time's awastin." .. A team with only two weeks conditioning and practice under its belt would make a sorry showing against squads which have been practicing aplenty....So, it looks like curtains, unless a miracle happens...Bobby Bunton pitched that three-hitter against Picton on Wednesday with a ruptured knee cartilage and a sore back. At that he cleaned the sacks with a mighty triple in the first....If that kid ever gets well—what a ball-player....Columbian Squires feel confident they can tuck the Oshawa Aces "in the hole" on Saturday in Peterborough..They expect to have their regulars out in full strength for this payoff tussle, and let's hope the game goes the nine innings in daylight and not stop in case of defeat or tie and further Oshawa squawks about density of the "darkness."

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

An offer made Wednesday by Maj. Conn Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs to sponsor a hockey club "in any progressive municipality interested" brought speculation among hockey men at Montreal yesterday that the Quebec Senior Hockey League might turn professional and be expanded to include a Toronto entry.

No comment came from National Hockey League officials, assembled in anticipation of today's semi-annual league meeting, nor from Q.S.H.L. officials.

Meanwhile, J. S. Elliott, St. Catharines Parks Board member and Vocational Guidance Committee director, said last night St. Catharines "is definitely interested" in Maj. Smythe's proposal.

Stewards of the Henley-on-Thomas regatta announced yesterday in London the event will return to peacetime schedule next year, probably beginning July 3. The last four-day Henley was held in 1939.

Dr. J. A. Wright and Dr. E. Williams, both of London, Ont., won a two-ball foursome competition at Toronto yesterday in the concluding event of the Canadian Seniors Golf Association's three-day tournament.

The Canadian Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Union meeting yesterday in Toronto decided to reaffirm its previous decision to adopt a "limited program" of intercollegiate athletics, including an abbreviated football schedule announced Aug. 13.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 775

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

The mother-in-law joke was started by some son-of-a-in-law who was too selfish to first consider her virtues. The laugh at trumping partner's ace came from a palooka who never learned it was essential.

South was declarer at six hearts in this deal:

NORTH
♠A 7 3
♥A K
♦K 7 5 3
♣K 8 6 4

WEST	EAST
♠Q J 9 6 4 2	♠10 8 5
♥None	♥Q 10 8 2
♦10 8 2	♦J 9 4
♣J 9 3 2	♣Q 10 7

SOUTH
♠K
♥J 9 7 6 5 4 3
♦A Q 6
♣A 5

The opening heave from west was the spade queen. When dummy is faced, south thinks he is going to have no worries. It looks as if the worst that can happen to him is the loss of one trump trick.

He sits on the first trick with his south spade king and leads a trump. But when west shows out at once, trouble looms ahead. East shows four trumps to the queen. They may take two tricks.

The one manoeuvre that may overcome this threat is a smother on east. To do that, dummy must be in the lead at the critical moment. To be there then, south must rid himself of surplus trumps.

So, after winning the first trump in dummy, a spade is trumped by south. Dummy wins a second trump lead and south trumps his dummy spade ace to further reduce his own trumps.

Such a play is no joke. It is a practical operation with sound purpose. South saves nothing by sluffing a side card on the spade ace. Ruffing it helps him get rid of an interfering trump of his own.

Tricks are then taken with ace and queen and king of diamonds. On the fourth diamond from dummy, east dare not trump. If he does, south will surely lose only one trump trick. So, east drops a club.

South, however, trumps this fourth diamond that he knows is good. Now, cashing the club ace, a club is gathered in by the dummy king to put the lead in the north hand.

Meantime, east and south are peeled down to two trumps apiece. Dummy leads a club and east is smothered. Whichever trump he plays will net him only one trick. It was a fix.

Goaltending Star Goes to Toronto

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Gordon Bell, 20-year-old goaltending star from Portage La Prairie, was drawn by the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League as one of their 1945-46 goaltending candidates at a marketing session of N.H.L. leaders in Montreal yesterday. This was learned last night through a message to Toronto from Major Conn Smythe.

Bell, now member of the Royal Canadian Navy but slated for early discharge, made his pro debut with Buffalo Bisons two years ago and was described by Eddie Shore and other American hockey league experts as one of the outstanding goaltending prospects in years.

He comes to Leafs under a 1944 deal with New York Rangers under which the Toronto club was given a second choice on his services or on those of Charley Rayner, former member of the New York Americans. Yesterday Lester Patrick elected to take Rayner, who also is in the navy, and the Leafs got Bell.

Bell's acquisition gives Leafs four goaltending candidates, the others being Frank McCool from Calgary, Baz Bastien who has been in the army and Horace Lamerche from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

BRAMPTON TAKES LEAD

Brampton, Sept. 7 (CP)— The Brampton-Lakeshore Combines took a 2-1 lead in their best of five Ontario Lacrosse Association senior play-off series with Mimico Mountaineers last night with a late tally in the final quarter which gave them a 6-5 margin of victory. Joe Murphy whipped home the winning goal on a pass from Gordon Gair with less than two minutes to play.

JOHNNY GABARD IN SELECT CIRCLE, WINS 20 GAMES

Montreal Hurler Joins His Teammate, Pierre Roy, by Defeating Rochester, 3-2

(By The Associated Press.)

Montreal's Johnny Gabard was a member of the International League Pitchers' Select Society today with his 20th victory of the current campaign.

The stout righthander joined teammate Jean Pierre Roy and Baltimore's Johnny Podgajny as the loop's only 20-game winners by downing Rochester Red Wings, 3-2, in the opener of a twin bill last night. The Royals also won the second game, 13-4.

Gabard scattered six hits and did not walk a man while his mates touched up Veteran Bill Trotter for all their runs. The nightcap was a loosely played affair with Dick Mlady walking 11 men, but leaving 11 Red Wings stranded on the basepaths. Roland Gladu established a new batting mark for a Montreal player when he belted a triple in the second inning of the aftermath to bring his total number of hits to 202 breaking the old record held jointly by Bill Urbanski and Oscar Roettger.

The double defeat dropped the birds into the cellar, two percentage points behind Syracuse Chiefs who crushed Jersey City's Little Giants, 12-3.

Newark continued its mastery over Baltimore with a 6-2 triumph over the Orioles for its 14th victory in 17 engagements with the flock.

Pitcher Steve Hresko of Buffalo, switched to third base and clouted two triples, a double and a single in five trips to the plate as the Bisons crushed the Toronto Maple Leafs, 7-2, to strengthen their sixth-place position. Pitcher Hank Oana gained his 15th triumph for the Bisons.

DOG SAVED SOLDIERS

Tokyo, Sept. 7 (CP Cable) — The story of the heroic death of a dog—mascot of the Royal Rifles Regiment of Canada at Hong Kong in 1941, was told today by former prisoners of war who had adopted the dog in Newfoundland.

The soldiers said that a Japanese soldier had hurled a grenade at the Canadians during the battle for the island city, and the dog, barking excitedly, picked the grenade up in its mouth and dashed off with it. The explosion disintegrated the dog but the soldiers were saved.

BATA DEFEATS LATTA NINE 17-7 TO EVEN SERIES

Ken Peacock Restricts the Opposition Until Fifth When Relieved

Bata evened their City and District playoff series with Doc. Empson's Latta nine at the Alemite Field Thursday night defeating them 17-7 in an abbreviated contest. The series now stands at one win each and the third and final game will be played on Monday, Sept. 10th at six o'clock.

Peacock on the mound for the Shoemakers restricted the Latta batters to five hits, scattering them over the route but his mates started to kick the ball around in the fifth, when Doc Empson's gang scored five runs in a belated rally off two hits, one a triple by Jarrell.

Latta scored their other runs in the second and third innings.

The Bata batters nicked Marsh, Latta hurler for 11 baseknocks. They got to him for four in the opening inning, when they pushed across three runs; six in the second when they crossed the plate an equal number of times, four in the third for two runs and four in the fourth for three markers.

The teams:

Bata: Solmes, Scott, Muffet, Stojan, Aquino, Peacock, Brisco, Cook, Dafoe.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 8.

Folly Answers Bell.

Hilton thanked her silently vowing it was what he deserved for coming to live in a houseful of women. He had sense enough to stay in bed without having a doctor. Already feverish his resentment increased his thirst until his craving for water forced him to ring the bell Chan had brought him.

Chan unfortunately had descended to his own quarters by this time, but Folly heard it and came rushing down the hall with a bright blue smock over her sweater and a blue ribbon in her dark hair.

"What is it?" she carolled.

"Stay out of here." he croaked. "I've got the flu."

"I'm not afraid. What do you want?"

More churlish than grateful he grumbled, "A glass of water please!"

Folly brought it loving the idea of herself as a sister of mercy. She smoothed the coverlet and laid soft, cool fingers on his burning brow.

"You have a very high fever," she told him.

"I know it. Now you please get out of here? Your sister has already telephoned for a doctor. He should be here any minute."

"Well, I'll be watching for him," Folly promised thinking. "No wonder the poor darling is cross with a temperature like that. I'll stay right at the drawing room window so I can let him in."

Folly Ordered Out.

Hilton groaned. He'd go to a hospital before he'd have this silly kid running in and out of his room. He'd have the doctor put up a NO VISITORS sign. But how could he tell the doctor anything if she came in with him?

In this however, fortune favored him. Long before the doctor arrived Chan was on duty again so that he came down the hall at the same time that Folly left her post by the window.

Chan said sternly, "Go back, Missie! You not needed in here."

"Now, Chan, I am too. I want to hear what the doctor orders."

"I listen," he insisted. "I do everything he say. You stay outside."

The door to grandpa's room closed behind him so there was nothing for her to do but retreat to the drawing room. She would have been furious if she could have heard Hilton's instructions to Chan after the doctor had gone.

"Look, Chan, how about keeping the rest of the household out of here? I don't want to give this to anyone else. Flu's contagious, you know."

Chan nodded wisely.

"I take care of it. No need to worry."

"But I don't want those girls running in and out," Hilton protested feverishly.

"No more can happen." Chan promised. "Next time I go downstairs door will be locked from outside."

He kept his promise and when Hazel telephoned to know how "Grandpa" was Marta reported, "Chan says he wants to be left alone. He has the flu and does not want anyone to get it."

"It's an excellent idea." Hazel chuckled. "Look darling, have I had any calls?"

Marta was surprised. It wasn't like Hazel to be concerned about personal calls when she was on a case. Was that why she had telephoned or was she really worried over Grandpa?

Whichever it was from now on Hilton's privacy was undisturbed. Watched over by Chan he was not seen by anyone else, until the evening a week later when Marta was called to the telephone.

Marta answered the telephone. Folly and Hazel were out and Chan had finished his dishes and retired. She was startled to hear a masculine voice saying plaintively, "This is Grandpa."

Although Marta knew that Hilton had his own telephone she did not know that Folly had told him what the three girls called him. But she did not pretend to misunderstand.

"Yes, Grandpa!" she replied demurely. "What can I do for you?"

"I'm lonesome," he said shamelessly as if he had not issued the order for his own solitary confinement. "I'm practically cured now so there is no danger. Would you be willing to take a chance and come to see me?"

"I ought to let you suffer," Marta chuckled. "But since I never cherish grudges I'll be there in ten minutes."

She appeared at his door with cocoa steaming in a flowered chocolate pot.

"It's such a cold night I thought you might like a night cap." she said cheerfully.

A Warm Welcome

He was dressed with the blue dressing gown about his shoulders and he had arranged two chairs with mathematical precision before the fire in the fireplace. Although freshly shaved he still looked rather pale but the welcome in his eyes was unmistakable.

"Sit down here and pour for me," he said cordially. "I'm not very good at such things. Tell me, does the flu always leave one so depressed? By nature I'm a cheerful sort of cuss but since the doctor tells me I'm better I'm practically crying in my beard."

There was something very feminine and comforting about her, he decided and she filled one of the cups and passed it to him.

"No wonder the other two girls depend on you," he said.

"It's nice of you to say that even if it isn't altogether true. I'm the oldest you know and since grandpa died I've naturally become the head of the family."

"I've had a lot of time to think since I've been in here alone," he said thoughtfully.

Marta Tells of Her Work.

"Chan said you wanted to be alone but Hazel has telephoned several times to know how you were doing. And of course Folly was always begging Chan to let her bring your trays."

"And you?" he urged.

"I've been busy," she reminded him. "Working for the Fourth Interceptor Command three nights a week leaves me very little time for anyone else."

"So I've discovered. I've been watching you go in and out. I can see the front door in my window you know and I've watched all of you breezing in and out." He put down the empty cup saying suddenly "I hope you're not still angry with me because of what I said. It wasn't any of my business but I hated to see you going around looking so defeated. I thought if I could make you good and mad it would be better for you."

"Maybe you were right about that. In any case it doesn't seem to matter as much as it did. There are so many more important things to think about just now. Let's talk about something else shall we?"

Grandpa "Her Idea."

"There's always the war" Hilton said glancing at the evening paper. "Sometimes I wish I were one of those boys sailing for the thick of it instead of stuck here at home. But it just happens that there are only a few men in the country who have trained for my particular type of work. I X-ray metals you know. May I tell you something about it?"

Although not as well informed on the subject as Hazel had been he found Marta an interested listener. He was still talking when she rose.

I really don't think you should sit up any later. But I've enjoyed talking to you and tomorrow night you can probably come to the dining room," said Marta.

"Yes, and I'm going to work the first of the week," Hilton replied. "Thank you for taking pity on a poor, sick old man. . ."

"By the way, where did you get the idea of calling yourself Grandpa?" Marta asked, picking up the tray.

"A little bird told me it was your idea."

"But it wasn't," she smiled. "Folly started it herself. Grandpa's room used to be hers and she didn't want to give it up to you."

That ought to hold him for awhile, Marta decided. She was anxious to escape before Folly came home. But she had no sooner entered the kitchen with her tray than Folly appeared.

Folly Gets Proposal

"Well Marta," she exclaimed "after all you've said to me on the subject I saw you standing in the doorway of grandpa's room smiling at him like a Chessy cat."

"He sent for me," Marta said serenely. "The poor chap is well now but feeling very lonely. That's no reason for your bounding in on him, however. He'll be well enough to come to the dining room tomorrow."

"Will he indeed?" Folly inquired indifferently. "I'm tired of being treated like a child around here Bruce Potter proposed to me tonight. He positively begged me to marry him."

"What did you tell him?"

"I told him I could never marry anyone who hadn't any money," Folly replied.

"How cruel of you!" Marta cried indignantly.

Meaning of Love.

"Would it have been kinder to tell him I wouldn't marry him under any circumstances? There was a moment during the blackout," Folly admitted, "but when I could see him it was all off."

"You don't know anything about love, Folly."

"But I suppose you do?"

"No," Marta said frankly, "I'm beginning to realize that I didn't love Jim. I just thought I did."

With this parting shot she turned off the kitchen lights and started for the front stairway. Is she falling in love with Hilton, too, thought Folly.

Determined to take advantage of his last day at home Folly waited the next morning until Chan had gone to market then ran into the garden to select the largest, most beautiful red rose she could find. Without re-entering the house she climbed the steps to Grandpa's entrance and gray eyes gleaming with appreciation of the picture she must make rang Hilton's bell.

"Good morning!" beamed Folly as Hilton Wood opened his door.

The lilt in her voice was a part of the fresh, bright day.

February brings the first hint of spring to San Francisco. The distant hills of Marin county were already showing faint green. Tulip and daffodil bulbs were thrusting delicate spears through the sandy soil.

Large Fish Hawk Hunts for Food Near Upper Bridge

Sitting a lonely vigil on a dead branch of a tree on the north bank of the Moira river near the upper city bridge is a large fish-hawk—and not an eagle as has been reported by several people.

The hawk has been standing guard over the river for the past few days keeping sharp eyes on the water below for unwary fish. If he spots a meal he darts swiftly to the water, there is a flash of sharp talons—and dinner is ready for the hawk. It is said to have a wing spread of two feet or more.

Since the hawk's arrival, the large number of gulls that frequent the river at this point, have transferred their activities to other parts of the river.

The presence of a fish hawk in the centre of the city is unusual according to observers.

PARTED WITH JEWELRY TO PAY JAPANESE GUARDS

New York, Sept. 7 —(CP)— The British Information Services last night relayed a report from released British prisoners of war in Hong Kong that they had to part with personal jewelry—even the most precious and sentimental—to pay Japanese guards for food supplies essential to keep them alive.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP) — The mining groups and the industrials were narrowly lower and the western oils gained moderately on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Trading continued at about the same tempo and the turnover fo rthe first three hours was 563,000 shares.

International Uranium advanced 34 cents to 2.29 in active trading. Labrador and Nickel weakened and the other base metas were steady. Donalda was in demand at an advance of 10 cents to 1.25 and Eldona was up 5 cents to 76. Madsen gained 6 to 2.96.

Utilities were firm generally though Montreal Power was down 3-8 to 23 1-2. Canadian Breweries, Page-Hersey and Winnipeg Electric were gainers.

In the western oils Home was down 5 and Vermilata and British-Dominion were a little stronger.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 7 —(AP)— The peace-time buying wave of Thursday carried over into the early proceedings of today's stock market but faltering tendencies soon appeared.

The prosperity tone of the President's message, combined with a mild revival of inflation thinking and the urge to invest idle funds, inspired further selective demand.

Dealings slackened after a fairly fast opening. Assorted industrials and utilities were able to record new eight-year peaks.

In front most of the time were Bethlehem, U.S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Pepsi-Cola, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, General Electric, N.Y. Central and Northern Pacific. Laggards included Texas Co., Standard Oil (N.J.), Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Westinghouse, Public Service of N.J. and Loew's.

Among irregular Canadian issues leaders were Distillers Seagrams and Hiram Walker, up 1-4 each. Canadian Pacific and McIntyre on the down side were off 1-2 and 1-8 respectively.

HOGS

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Grade A, dressed, delivered, were $18.25, unchanged, at Hull in the only bacon-hog market reporting early today.

Elusive Boy Believed Armed With Automatic

Toronto, Sept. 7 —(CP)— The elusive 12-year-old boy who twice escaped Toronto Police in the last two weeks when picked up on charges of robberies, including theft of a car and a truck, now is thought to have armed himself with an automatic.

Police say a boy answering to the description of the fleet-footed lad whose latest escapade was to leap from a detention room in the juvenile court to make good his escape, was found in the Sporting Goods Department of a store here, his arms loaded with weapons. He dropped all but an automatic and made good his escape again.

First arrested three weeks ago, the boy escaped from a children's shelter.

Allied Troops Occupy Tokyo Without Fanfare

Gen. MacArthur Orders Flag Unfurled Near the Palace

Tokyo, Sept. 8 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur, shunning all fanfare as a conqueor, entered Tokyo today with fully armed troops and officially signalized the occupation of this war-wrecked city with a 10-minute flag-raising ceremony.

The supreme commander of the Allied powers was stern of visage and firm of voice at the United States Embassy grounds—within five minutes drive of Emperor Hirohito's palace—as he ordered: "Have our country's flag unfurled and in Tokyo's sun let it wave in its full glory as a symbol of hope for oppressed and as a harbinger of victory for the right."

The general and his men came as the first foreign victors ever to enter this heart of surrendered Japan. In their hour of triumph, they were all business.

There was no parade of pomp. The word had been out that the men would march from the Diet building to the Embassy.

Tanks had rolled up to the outskirts. They halted there. Gen. MacArthur chose not to bring them in unless needed, to avoid further damaging Tokyo's streets.

The raising of the flag over the Embassy grounds—rather than over a Japanese building such as the Diet, in the gesture of an arrogant conqueror—was impressive in its simplicity. Gen. MacArthur arrived shortly before the 11 a.m. ceremony (10 p.m. E.D.T., Friday) after motoring from Yokohama.

No Japs Present.

No Japanese were present at the ceremony.

The first reconnaissance groups entered around 7 a.m. (6 p.m. E.D.T., Friday) and set up a guard at the Imperial Hotel, to serve for the time being as general headquarters.

Few Japanese were in the streets or along the road as they entered Tokyo. They continued their errands and their work in small business places. Seldom did they give a glance to the columns of armored cars, self-propelled field pieces and personnel carriers crowded with troops in battle gear.

Bayonets Fixed.

There obviously were many bitter memories among the men at the symbolic end of their journey. The trim soldiers, with freshly pressed khaki uniforms, helmets and combat boots, with bayonets fixed to their rifles, had fought many of the hardest campaigns of the Pacific war, including the battle for Manila.

The neighboring district around the U. S. embassy bears grim evidence of the war. For several blocks on two approaches to the embassy everything is flattened.

As the occupation, which will bring 15,000 troops into a 40 square mile area of Tokyo by Monday, progressed, a naval task force of the North Pacific fleet began moving today into Mutsu Bay, 400 miles north of Tokyo, on North Honshu's tip.

The warships, commanded by vice-admiral Fletcher, approached Ominato naval base which is to be surrendered formally tomorrow.

ADOLF'S GIFT

A gift from Adolf Hitler to Eva Braun, the girl he is said to have wed a few days before taking the easy way out, was found on an S.C. corporal who was arrested recently. The platinum wrist watch set with 62 diamonds was given to her on her birthday in February, 1939. The reverse side of the watch bears the inscription "to the 6th of February, 1939, cordially, Adolf Hitler."

Set U.S. Clocks Back One Hour By September 30

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Congressional leaders promised today to set clocks in the U.S. back an hour by Sept. 30 by having Congress abolish Daylight Saving Time, adopted in 1942, to provide more day time for war work.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (Dem.-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee said the repealer would pass quickly. He said he does not expect "a single vote" against the action in either the Senate or House.

Government officials who promoted Daylight Saving Time said it helped conserve power and provided more daylight working hours. Many legislators disputed this, even during the conflict. They list many reasons for a return to Standard Time. They say Daylight Time:

1. Deprives millions of hours of sleep.
2. Makes school children start for their studies in darkness.
3. Has farmworkers out in the fields before the dew is gone in the mornings.
4. Contributes to an increase in juvenile delinquency.
5. Increases absenteeism in factories.

3,000 TO BE LAID OFF

Toronto, Sept. 8 —(CP)— W. R. MacLachlan, a director of the John Inglis Co. Ltd., said yesterday that about 3,000 employees in the company's ordnance department will be laid off in the next three weeks.

Claim 126,000 Killed by Bomb

Tokyo, Sept. 8 —(AP)— The Domei agency said today that 126,000 persons were killed at Hiroshima by the world's first atomic bombing.

This figure is more than twice as great as any previously reported by the Japanese.

Domei, quoting the Hiroshima prefectural governments authority for its report, listed casualties as follows:

Instantly killed, 66,000; died of injuries, 60,000; missing and believed dead, 10,000; seriously injured, 14,000; slightly injured, 104,000.

HORSES GO TO BELGIUM

Montreal, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Nearly 700 horses, one of the largest single shipments of farm horses ever to leave Montreal harbor, will be loaded onto the United States vessel Mexico which docked here yesterday. The horses will be delivered to Antwerp for use in the devastated farmlands of the Netherlands.

Nazi Ringleaders Said Pointing Accusing Fingers at Ex-colleagues

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

Nuernberg, Sept. 8 —(AP)— Nazi ringleaders are "snitching" on each other while being questioned for their war crime trials, a member of the United States interrogation staff said today.

This source did not disclose who was telling what on whom but said there were several cases where the defendants were pointing fingers accusingly at ex-colleagues in apparent efforts to gain consideration for themselves.

The prisoners are bearing up well physically except for former Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop who is showing a "recurring neuralgic condition," jailers said. Some are showing mental strain and depression, however, and psychiatrists have been rushed here from Paris to take their places on duty in the cell blocks along with doctors and dentists.

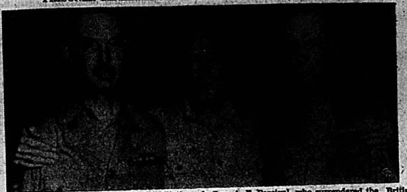
The latest arrivals were a group of Nazis caught in Italy, including S.S. Gen. Kurt Wolff.

Two disturbances by principal war criminal defendants were reported by a security officer last night.

One of the leading defendants, identified by the officer only as "that so-and-so who's crazy or pretending to be crazy," attacked his guard, but the guard was uninjured.

The other disorder was caused by a woman prisoner, also unidentified, who the officer said displayed "a fractious show of temperament." He did not elaborate on her offense. Some of the women held here are former mistresses of the top-ranking defendants.

PRISONER GENERALS ON HAND TO WITNESS JAP SURRENDER



Two generals who suffered the humiliation of surrendering to the Japs and one who led the way up the long uphill road to ultimate victory are pictured here. They are, Lieut.-Gen. Jonathan Wainwright who surrendered American forces on Corregidor in the Philippines (at right), Lieut.-Gen. A. E. Percival, who surrendered the British forces at Singapore, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur (centre) who came back. All three were on hand to witness the Japanese surrender ceremonies aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay on September 1st.

400,000 NAZIS MAY BE TRIED FOR WAR CRIMES

Guilty Will be Hanged Because Shooting Regarded as "Honorable Death"

Washington, Sept. 8—(AP)—As many as 400,000 Nazis may be tried for war crimes when the Allies deal justice to the architects and terrorists of the Second Great War, it was disclosed today.

Guilty big shots probably will be hanged. The military regards shooting as "an honorable death."

Small fry who get off with their skins may be given labor sentences, perhaps helping rebuild what they destroyed in Russia and elsewhere.

Hitler's terror organizations, the Gestapo and the S. S. (elite guard), will be charged collectively with war crimes. Conviction would mean automatic punishment of any member of either outfit who couldn't prove he was forced in.

These and other details were learned authoritatively today by persons familiar with the plans as the Allied war crimes commission moved toward the master trial at Nuernberg.

A Mass Trial.

This will be a mass trial of top culprits, like Hermann Goering. It will begin in late October or November in the city which was for years the scene of the Nazi party's annual congress.

Twenty-four, including Goering, have been named defendants. Half dozen more are likely to be added.

Nuernberg will set the pattern. Thereafter, lesser assorted murderers and conspirators will be tried—many possibly at the scenes of their crimes, as in Warsaw where the Nazis burned the entire Ghetto.

Tons of German official documents have been culled. Investigrtors believe many a German may have written his own death warrant who will be admitted.

Pictures will be Offered.

And pictures as well will be offered. From Hitler's personal photographer alone, the Allies have taken a score or more volumes of photographs which tell their story of top level Nazi knowledge and guilt.

The basis for the prosecution will be the charge that the Nazi leaders committed crimes against the peace. They planned and waged aggressive war in violation of international treaties. They violated rules and customs of war.

It isn't certain yet whether the entire German general staff will be charged collectively as will the S. S. and Gestapo.

Plane May Have Been Afire Before Machine Crashed

Florence, S.C., Sept. 8 —(AP)—Military authorities and officials of the Eastern Air Lines investigating the crash of a transport which brought death to 22 persons near here said today the plane might have been aflame before it plowed into a dense swampland.

The plane, making the night run from Miami to New York, crashed about 2 a.m. yesterday in a heavily wooded Cypress swamp about eight miles northwest of Florence as the pilot searched for a place to make an emergency landing.

At least nine service men were reported aboard the plane.

WAY IS CLEARED FOR FULL DEBATE ON THRONE SPEECH

John Bracken, National Conservative Leader, Will Open Debate For the Opposition

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (CP) — The inaugural formalities over, the way now is open for debate in the House of Commons to take on a critical tone when opposition members deal with the government's programs forecast in the Throne Speech and its record of past performances.

The first criticism will be heard Monday when John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative leader, resumes the debate on the address in reply to the Throne Speech which was set off yesterday by two young veterans of the Second Great War.

Mr. Bracken elected to the Commons for the first time in the general election of June 11, will make his first formal address in the Commons as leader of the official opposition. He is expected to deal at length with the government's programs and record.

Mr. Bracken moved adjournment of the debate after these developments in the Commons:-

1. The address in reply to the Throne Speech was moved by Wing Cmdr. W. N. Benidickson (L—Kenora-Rainy River) and seconded by Lieut. Leopold Langlois (L—Gaspe).

2. Finance Minister Ilsley followed up the tabling of the report on the mutual aid board by Munitions Minister Howe with a statement on the discontinuance of mutual aid.

3. Mr. Ilsley, commenting on recent discussions with Lord Keynes, advisor to the British Treasury, said the United Kingdom was not expected to experience any difficulty in financing with Canadian dollars her trade with Canada in the next few months.

4. Prime Minister Mackenzie King tabled some of the international agreements which parliament will be asked to ratify. These included the United Nations charter, the Bretton Woods monetary agreements and civil aviation agreements.

Mr. Ilsley said that effective Sept. 2 Canada's mutual aid was halted but there was no interference with the movement of needed supplies and countries which benefitted from mutual aid were given the opportunity of having supplies continue with the understanding they would be paid for. This would necessitate credit arrangements and some of these already were being made.

The report tabled by Mr. Howe showed that mutual aid expenditures to March 31, 1945, totalled $1,715,945,000 with the United Kingdom receiving the largest share $1,442,056,000.

In moving the address in reply to the Throne Speech, Wing Cmdr. Benidickson, 34-year-old peace-time barrister with more than two years overseas administrative service in the R.C.A.F., asked that encouragement be given servicemen to remain in Canada's permanent armed forces. He hoped that a "still

Document of Torture and Terror Tells of Chanfi Prison Camp

By ALLAN HUMPHREYS

Singapore, Sept. 8. (Reuters)—Out of the civilian internees camp in Singapore has come a document of Japanese terror and torture methods which makes some of the grimmest reading of the far eastern war.

It was drawn by three doctors of the camp after taking evidence lasting for three days from 36 internees—survivors of a group of 57 men and women taken from Changi jail for "special interrogation" October 10, 1943.

The report is signed by Prof. N. S. Alexander, and S. N. King and W. L. Blythe, members of the Malayan Civil Service.

The internees are unanimous that the story should be told to let people have an authentic record of the horrors perpetrated by the Japanese. Their cry is not for vengeance but for justice upon these criminals against mankind.

The report states:

"The course of interrogation showed that the Japanese were trying to establish that there was a spy organization in Changi prison. . . .

"In fact, there was no spy organization. . . .

"Conditions under which internees were detained were rigorous in the extreme. From eight o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night the inmates had to sit up straight on the bare floor with their knees up, and were not allowed to relax, or to put their hands on the floor, or to talk, or to move except to go to the lavatory. Any infraction involved a beating by the sentries.

"There was one watercloset to each cell and a water supply for all purposes, including drinking. Nearly all the inmates suffered from enteritis or dysentery. No soap, towel, toilet articles or handkerchiefs were permitted. The three women taken from Changi prison were detained in exactly the same condition as the men, and shared cells with male prisoners of all races.

"Buildings occupied by the Japanese military police resounded all day and night with blows, bellowings of inquisitors and shrieks of the tortured. From time to time the victims from the torture chambers would stagger back, or if unconscious would be dragged back to their cells. . . .

"At times the victim would be tied to a table and flogged until he lost consciousness. This treatment was in some cases carried on daily for from four to five day consecutively.

"Of the 57 internees, 12 died of sickness directly attributable to the appalling conditions under which they were detained, one as a result of a fall and torture, and one was executed.

"Survivors required prolonged treatment in hospital for extreme emaciation, chronic dysentery, neuritis, scores of ulcers, scabies, beriberi, weak hearts or injuries to joints and limbs".

Canadians, Britons Fought Gallantly For Hong Kong

Outnumbered, Outgunned With No Support From Air

Hidden four years behind the veils of Japanese secrecy and censorship play details of the valiant fight staged by the outnumbered defenders of Hong Kong before the British Crown Colony surrendered Dec. 25, 1941. Now, with release of survivors of the campaign—and nearly four years of filth and torture in Japanese prison camps—the grim story is unfolded. Here William Stewart, CP war correspondent, in the first composite story of the battle of Hong Kong, depicts the part played by Canadians as described to him by various men who fought there.

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Manila, Sept. 8 —(CP Cable)—The melancholy story of the fall of Hong Kong on Christmas Day, 1941, is gradually being unfolded by Canadians who aided in the attempt to halt the Japanese onslaught and who now have been released from prisoner of war camps.

As the Japanese threat began to unfold in the Pacific members of the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Rifles of Quebec were sent to bolster the Hong Kong garrison of British and Indian troops, Hong Kong volunteers and other miscellaneous groups.

The campaign was a hopeless defence in which the defenders were outnumbered two to one at least, outgunned by the Japanese and unsupported from the air.

Units Transferred.

All naval units of any importance had been transferred south to Malaya. Apart from the fact that Hong Kong's defensive system was designed primarily against attack from the sea, the Canadians had barely got into position when the Japanese attacked. The Canadians, furthermore, generally were unfamiliar with the hilly island, which is 32 miles in circumference.

Men with whom the Canadians fought 10 days after the failure to hold the Japanese at the Shumshum river on the mainland included the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Scots, the 1st Battalion of the Middlesex Regiment, a battalion of Punjabs, a battalion of Rajputs and groups of Hong Kong defence volunteers, some Royal Engineers and some shore-based naval personnel and dockyard defence units. Altogether they made up a garrison of 14,000.

Two Divisions Used.

Against them the Japanese employed up to two divisions (more than 30,000 men), supported by artillery firing across the Hong Kong harbor and the accuracy of which may have been helped by fifth columnists at large on the island. The inexperienced Canadians could hardly distinguish the Chinese from the Japanese.

The Canadian forces reached Hong Kong Nov. 15 aboard the transport Awatea, with one company of the Royal Rifles in the former liner Prince Robert now an anti-aircraft cruiser with which the naval liberation forces sailed into Hong Kong last week.

The Royal Rifles had previously been in Newfoundland and Saint ohn, N. B., while the Grenadiers had spent several months in the West Indies. There were 1,972 officers and men and two nurses in the force which sailed from Vancouver, Oct. 27.

(It was announced from Ottawa that the force consisted of 1,985.)

Lawson in Command.

Brig. J. K. Lawson of London, Ont., was in command, with Col. Pat Hennessey of Ottawa acting senior administrative officer. Lt.-Col. D. L. R. Sutcliffe of Winnipeg commanded the Grenadiers, and Lt.-Col. W. J. Pome of Quebec commanded the Royal Rifles.

The force included medical and dental groups, signallers, army service corps, ordnance, postal and provost personnel. Some of the Canadian transport vehicles, travelling in another ship, didn't reach the force.

The day after their arrival the Canadians marched to the outskirts of Kowloon and into the Samshuipomilitary Camp which, after the fall of Hong Kong, was turned by the Japanese into a prisoner of war camp.

In Battle Positions.

Although the Canadians started 48-hour exercises in manning Hong Kong defence positions about Dec. 1, and had made tours of the island by road and boat, it was not until Sunday, Dec. 7 that they moved across the harbor from Kowloon to their battle positions.

The two battalions at first became part of an island brigade commanded by Brig. Lawson, later killed in action, and including a Middlesex Battalion, stationed in prepared positions around the Hong Kong shoreline, and some volunteers.

TWO ARRESTED IN LOCAL CAFE

Two brothers caught drinking beer in the washroom of a local cafe last night, did not like the idea of being arrested and taken to the police station.

In fact they objected strenuously both verbally and physically and the police officer investigating the disturbance was forced to call a Provincial Police officer who was a guests in the cafe to his assistance.

During the scuffle damage done to the cafe equipment amounted to ten dollars. The men were eventually taken to the station and will likely face charges of obstructing an officer, as well as other counts.

Corn was offered from 25c to 40 cents the dozen ears upwards and pickling cucumbers went for 65 cents the six-quart basket. Table "cukes" sold at "name your price."

Chickens were an average offering with young birds selling at from $1.85 to $3.00 the pair. Fowl was offered at $1 each. Eggs were steady at 48 cents for top grade and 46 and 44c for lower qualities.

Inebriate Takes Involuntary Dip In Moira River

Young blades of the town may attempt to absorb all the "firewater" and beer in the city but they are foolish to try to drink the Moira River dry, police said today.

That tremendous chore was apparently attempted last night when a city youth who had been gazing on the wine when it was red attempted to step across the river behind the Queens Hotel.

Fortunately for him, a soldier, Private Gordon Hay, noticed his plight and fished him out of the river before the pickerel and bass became intoxicated.

Police investigated the occurrence and were told by the man in question that he had been hit over the head and pushed in the river.

The ducking had had a sobering effect and he was taken to his home to dry off.

DUKE OF YORK STEAMS INTO TOKYO BAY

When the Japanese signed the Allied surrender terms aboard the U. S. S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1st, the H.M.S. Duke of York, flagship of Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, Commander-in-Chief of the British Pacific Fleet was alongside. Here the Duke of York enters Sagami Bay on her way to Tokyo Bay.

Canadian Soldiers Freed at Hong Kong Hungry for News of Weapons

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Manila, Sept. 8 —(CP Cable)— Canadian soldiers liberated from prisoner of war camps find themselves almost completely ignorant of happenings outside their camps in the last three years and among the things they are most eager to know about are the new Allied weapons.

Such terms as bazooka and Piat mean nothing to them and they are only finding out now about rocket firing aircraft and jet propelled planes. They are amazed by the weapons in the hands of servicemen here and they are surprised to see the American helmet which has become world-famous. The last time they saw American servicemen was before their imprisonment when the U. S. soldiers were still wearing the tin-hat type of helmet.

While the Canadians at Hong Kong were awaiting evacuation to Manila, they spent their time visiting ships in Hong Kong harbor and were particularly interested in the aircraft carriers.

They had been told about German 88 being one of the best guns of the war and were given descriptions of the King Tiger tank and the Panther tank.

They were keen to get information about Canadian army operations in Europe and many of them were surprised to learn that some officers whom they knew were of comparatively junior rank at the start of the war were now wearing red bands on their caps and are brigadiers, major generals and even lieutenant generals.

A couple of Canadian officers who spent the duration at Samshuipo camp in Hong Kong without the opportunity to gain promotion discovered they now were outranked by their wives in the CWAC. The etiquette to be observed when they meet their wives in Canada was giving them some food for thought.

A group of Canadians now at No. 29 replacement depot here have received their first mail dated mid-August and written on the blue airmail forms which get the speediest delivery.

Men who are "hospital" cases read their letters over and over and could hardly believe they were true. Until the Canadians arrive at their homes, mail will be the most important thing in their lives, probably exceeding in value even the food and comforts of the reception camp.

Committee Formed to Plan WelcomeforRegt.

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, former commanding officer of the 2nd (R) Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was appointed chairman of a general committee, which will arrange for a fitting reception to the 1st Battalion of the Regiment, which is expected to arrive in the city around the last of October. Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins acted as chairman for the discussion.

Associated with Col. Donnan on the committee is Major Colin Hepburn, who will act as administrative officer and City Comptroller Harold Bateman, who was appointed secretary.

The meeting held in the City Hall was thoroughly representative of the district. About fifty people representing the church, veterans' organizations, civic committee and other men's and women's associations, were present and voiced their whole-hearted co-operation in preparing a welcome and reception befitting the gallant sons of the counties and district.

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Sisler, commanding officer Argyll Light Infantry, Major Will Davern, acting officer commanding the 2nd Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and Captain Geo. H. Carver, 34th (R) Field Battery, R.C.A. represented the reserve army units of the district.

Picton, Trenton, Madoc and other district centres were well represented and all agreed to act on sub-committees which will act under the direct supervision of the general body.

General discussion brought out parades, etc. It was felt that the parades, etc. It was melt that the regiment should detrain at the Canadian National Railways station and march through the main streets to a point of reception.

Trenton, Picton and other district points representatives stated they were 100 per cent behind Belleville in their plans for welcoming the regiment.

Police Inspector Clare Hayes asked for the co-operation of the public in leaving their automobiles at home on the day of arrival.

The meeting unanimously endorsed a motion that Mayor Frank Follwell, who was absent due to vacation, declare the day

Angus Macdonald Is New Premier Of Nova Scotia

Halifax, Sept. 8 (CP)-- Nova Scotia has a new premier today. He is 55-year-old Angus L. Macdonald, who takes over from retiring Premier A. S. MacMillan. The swearing in ceremony, which saw the entire MacMillan cabinet returned to office, took place at Government House before Lieutenant-Governor H. E. Kendall this morning.

There was only one change in the cabinet, and that was the adition of 47-year-old Lt.-Col. Arthur W. Mackenzie as Minister of Agriculture. He has been Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the last three months.

CANADIANS

The coastal defence guns were manned by Hong Kong and Singapore artillery units. The Royal Rifles went into the eastern positions and the Grenadiers into the western.

Besides rifles and Bren guns, the Canadians, some of whom were wearing battle dress, had two-and-three-inch mortars with considerable ammunition. Borrowed vehicles, manned at first by Chinese drivers and later by Canadians, were put to use.

On the island was the China command headquarters, headed by Maj.-Gen. C. N. Maltby who had come to Hong Kong a couple of months earlier.

The Japanese struck across the Shumshum river border of 400 square miles of new territory as the Canadians settled in Hong Kong. The Japs had been in their position less than 20 miles from Kowloon since 1938 and had plenty of time to mount their attack.

Proposal Rejected.

The Kaitak airfield east of Kowloon was attacked by 30 Japanese fighters at 8 a.m. Dec. 8 and after the raid, one Wildbeeste, an old style aircraft, was the only British plane serviceable. A proposal that the single plane be used for a token raid was rejected.

The Eamshuipo barracks were bombed and some among the Canadian rear parties there became the first casualties of the campaign. Two of the three great war destroyers left their harbor that night for Singapore with some smaller craft.

As air attacks were carried out, the Japanese sent two columns across the Shumshum river toward the lines manned by the Royal Scots, Punjabs and Rajputs, bolstered by Hong Kong defence volunteers.

Scots Held Key Position.

The Scots held the key position of the Shingmun redoubt on the night of Dec. 9th, a company of the Grenadiers commanded by Capt. A. S. Bowman of Winnipeg crossed to the mainland to provide close support. As it turned out, the Grendier company covered the withdrawal.

Shingmun fell the same night when the Japanese advanced with armored spearheads and the mainland defenders started to fall back toward the harbor. By the morning of Dec. 13 the mainland had been evacuated, with the troops crossing to Hong Kong in whatever craft they were able to board.

During the three-day evacuation period the island defences were reorganized with the Canadian Battalions being placed in different brigades. The eastern brigade was made up of the Royal Rifles, rajputs, elements of the Middlesex Battalion and some volunteers. The western brigade, commanded by Brig. Lawson comprised the Grenadiers, the Scots, Punjabs and also some Middlesex men and some volunteers.

Battle Lasted Week.

The first Japanese move toward Hong Kong came the night of Dec. 15-16 following a heavy bombardment from the Kowloon area. It was a dark night and the Japanese crossing in boats was made in the northern area of the Lei Mun channel near the positions occupied by a platoon of the Royal Rifles commanded by Lieut. A. B. Scott of Quebec.

The real battle of Hong Kong landing in the Taikoo dock area, landing in the Taikoo dockarea, at Quarry Bay and at North Point. By midnight the Japanese, wearing rubber-soled sneakers, had reached the sanatorium in a gap between Mount Parker and Mount Butler, having cut through the Rajput positions in the darkness.

Southeast of the Indians' positions, a Royal Rifles company commanded by Maj. W. A. Bishop of Bury, Que., suddenly came under rifle fire from a position overlooking their defences in the Lei Mun gap. The company fell back after carrying out counterattacks in which casualties were suffered.

The Japanese, worked up toward the top of the 1,500-foot Mount Parker looking down on the northeastern channel and dominating the hill around. Meanwhile, platoons of Grenadiers engaged the Japanese pushing southwest in the area of Jardines Lookout, a feature due west of Mount Parker.

Fatal casualties included Lieutenants G. A. Birkett and C. D. French, both of Winnipeg.

Heavy Casualties.

A Grenadier company commanded by Maj. A. B. Gresham of Winnipeg was ordered to a position in Little Hong Kong on the southern side of the island and came under personal command of Brig. Lawson; moving forward to meet the Japanese the company was ambushed and with few exceptions every member was killed or captured.

In their infiltrating advance the Japanese crawled along concrete water troughs winding around the hills for catchment purposes and by dawn, Brig. Lawson's brigade headquarters area was under direct attack.

At 7 o'clock in the morning of Dec. 19 the Japs held the Jardines Lookout and Mount Parker in strength and an attempt by the Royal Rifles to clear Mount Parker failed.

Some Japanese had penetrated by then to the Wong Nei Chang gap, better than half way across the island and their plan to cut the island defences in two became clear.

Brig. Lawson Killed.

Brig. Lawson was killed about 2 o'clock, evidently while arranging for withdrawal of his headquarters group from Wong Nei Chang.

During the morning of Dec. 19, the eastern force started to evacuate the area of Tai Tam, Nicholson Dagular and Obelisk Hill toward the general line of Notting Hill, Sugar Loaf Stone Hill and Stanley View. Pillboxes and gun positions had to be abandoned and by dark a new line was formed.

On the left a composite company commanded by Maj. Ernie Hodkinson of Winnipeg moved east to reinforce in the Wong Nei camp area and had to fight its way there. There were casualties from shelling and an attack was carried out against the Japanese in the police station building. Maj. Hodkinson was wounded but has recovered.

Infiltration now extended toward Repulse Bay on the south side of Hong Kong and by nightfall the island had been cut in two. Orders to Col. Sutcliffe and the Grenadiers came direct from China command headquarters in underground positions above the naval dockyard at Victoria.

Sir Mark Young Governor of Hong Kong, visited Col. Sutcliffe before dark on the 19th and still displayed good spirits.

Manoeuvre Fails.

A force of the Royal Rifles under Maj. T. G. Macaulay of Quebec, and some Hong Kong volunteers, attempted to push through the enemy positions around the Tai Tam Tuk reservoir in the hope of joining up with the eastern force troops at Wong Nei Chang. There was no artillery support and progress was impossible.

Remnants of a Grenadiers headquarters company surrendered at Wong Nei Chang after having been encircled for three days.

Seven unwounded men who were left of a headquarters company were without ammunition. Dec. 21 was spent under heavy selling and bombardment of five-inch Japanese mortars.

On the 22nd., the Grenadiers had to retire from the Wan Chai gap when a company suddenly came under machine-gun fire and the Japanese broke into the Grenadier lines.

Withdrawal Covered.

The withdrawal was covered by Capt. A. W. Prendergast, Winnipeg, with a machine-gun section.

On the following day the Grenadiers retired still farther to Wanchai gap and a line running southwest to Aberdeen which was reoccupied by a force under Maj. J. A. Baillie, Winnipeg.

Defence groups now were being torn wider and wider apart and the troops were subjected to sniping, mortar bombing and shelling by day and infiltration by night.

In the afternoon of the 23rd the Rifles were ordered to retire south to Stanley Peninsula for a last stand with one company left behind on high ground at Cheongham Kok.

The Japanese attacked Mount Cameron next day and a section led by Lieut. L. B. Corrigan of Swift Current, Sask., held off attempts at the foot of the west slope. A group headed by Lieut. W. F. Nugent, Lindsay, Ont., held the Japanese at Bonnetts Hill as Baillie's company position at Aberdeen was penetrated.

24th Rifles Relieved.

On the 24th the Rifles were relieved by Hong Kong volunteers and Middlesex and retired to Stanley fort. Shortly after midnight the Rifles were ordered to a position overlooking Stanley village to stave off a reported break-through attempt.

Day attacks were carried out by companies of Rifles but lack of artillery support made them hopeless. One company lost 26 men killed and 75 wounded.

Armistice Declared.

A general armistice was declared at 3 p.m. on a bloody Christmas day but the Rifles and British and Indian troops continued to receive heavy shelling.

The Grenadiers fought Christmas day, attacking in an attempt to support Baillie's company at Aberdeen. There was an armistice to permit civilians to leave Repulse Bay hotel during the day but the Japanese shelling was uninterrupted and machine-guns were trained on the Grenadiers' battalion headquarters.

The Grenadiers moved from Wan Chai gap to Gough. Col. Sutcliffe, who survived the campaign but died April 6, 1942, of illness, was ordered to brigade headquarters and sent back word that hostilities were over.

Baillie's company at Aberdeen couldn't be notified until 6.30 p.m. but held its position until the end.

MacKENZIE'S COLUMN

Jap War-Lords' Plot Shows Grip Militarism Has Had for Japan

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

A long, long line of Japanese war-lords and other criminals must be made to walk the plank if we are to get lasting peace, and the sooner we square our jaws for the task, the better.

The amazing disclosure of how the militarists plotted and fought to prevent the Mikado from surrendering, even after the atomic bomb had demonstrated its annihilating power, shows the grip of militarism in Nippon. The barbarities which are being uncovered in the Japanese prison camps are in themselves enough to condemn the country.

The whole nasty situation is well summed up in a statement by the sultan of Jahore, whose state lies just across the narrow strait from Singapore. He says the Japanese commander of that great naval base, Lt.-Gen. Itagaki: declared a few days ago that he expected to return to Singapore about 20 years hence.

That's what the Allies are up against—the determination of the Jap militarists to try again to conquer Asia. However, as this column pointed out a couple of days ago, if the Allies kill that determination right where it stands, they won't have to fight another war a generation from now. I raise the subject again, not because we need fear that supreme commander Gen. MacArthur will be too lenient, but because it is well for the Allied publics to be prepared to do a stern job in Japan.

Emperor's Power.

There's another lesson which we shouldn't overlook, and that is the tremendous power wielded by the spiritual-temporal ruler of the Empire. We already knew that his hold on his people was great, for they regard him literally as a living God. But never before has the world had such a demonstration of his influence as is shown in the sensational circumstances surrounding the battle in Tokyo over the surrender.

Many observers previously had concluded that the Allies would need the Mikado's influence in their rehabilitation program. The disclosure of the Emperor's stand for surrender is likely to strengthen that view.

WAY IS CLEARED

broader program" of veterans housing would be announced.

"There are a number of men who, after long service have decided that their special aptitude lies in continued membership in the armed forces," he said. "They were volunteers at the outset of the war, but today they would like to beome members of the relatively large permanent services which Canada is expected to maintain after the war, or else, perhaps, contribute to an international police force.

"To the best of my knowledge, two at least of the services are not making it possible for men so minded to remain in the services; I suspect that the cream of the crop, from a military point of view, is being lost through this oversight."

He did not identify the services.

Wants National Anthem.

Lieut. Langlois, dressed in the blue unoform of a naval officer and making part of his speech in French and part in English, hoped steps would be taken to give Canada a National Anthem.

The Throne Speech has forecast the setting up of a committee to choose a design for a distinctive Canadian flag and he hoped that this would be followed by action with respect to a National Anthem. These symbols were needed to inspire pride in Canadian citizenship.

When Canada had her own flag and her own Anthem possibly those responsible for education in the country would agree to provide all schools with a uniform history book that would be complete and impartial.

He urged that the best possible treatment be given to discharged service personnel and suggested that a better service should be set up to direct the discharges into the line of endeavor for which they were best suited.

400,000 NAZIS

Not all Favorably Disposed.

Unofficial word is that Allied military men are not all favorably disposed. The reported reason: the German general staff just carried out orders.

The realistic reasoning behind the Allied decision to hold trials is this:

Trials will build up a formal, legal record, specially and in general. The record would come in handy if—say 10 years hence—the Germans begin trying to make themselves believe somebody else started the war, that nobody ever proved the charges against their leaders.

Case Against Vidkun Quisling Goes to Jury

Tells Court Hitler Had Deep Liking for Him and Wanted Him for Other Tasks

Oslo, Sept. 8 —(AP)— The treason case against Vidkun Quisling went to a seven-man judge-jury panel Friday after he concluded a two-day oration in his own defence.

"If my activity has been treason—as the records of this case charge—then in the name of God I hope that for Norway's sake many of her sons will become the same kind of traitor as I without, however, being thrown into prison," the pale-faced former puppet dictator declared.

The verdict is not expected to be handed down before Sept. 12.

Quisling had told the court that "Hitler took a deep liking for me and wanted me for other tasks in Europe."

He said German leaders "knew more about our defences than our own officers."

Recounted Meeting.

He recounted his meeting with Hitler in December, 1939, a few months before Germany invaded Norway, and said the Fuehrer talked of peace. But he said also that Germany would invade Norway ruthlessly, should Norway's neutrality be violated, Quisling testified.

He said Hitler respected him "because I took care of my people's interests," and there was no secret plot to deliver Norway to the Nazis.

"Any charges that I gave Germany secret information are fantastic," he said. Words flowed swiftly from his lips.

Said He Met Raeder.

He acknowledged meeting Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, German naval chieftain, but said the conversation was "perfectly innocent" and had nothing to do with planning the invasion of Norway.

He explained his friendship with the Nazi leader Alfred Rosenberg by asserting that Rosenberg worked for better treatment of Norway, much to the distaste of Josef Terboven, German commissioner for Norway.

Quisling said he considered Russia justified in moving into the Russian-populated eastern parts of Poland. But he added that Poland's fate was a frightful example of what could have happened to Norway, because he said he was convinced Russia wanted the northern provinces of Norway.

44-Month Gap For Their Lives

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Hong Kong, Sept. 8 —(CP Cable)— Most of the more than 2,000 civilians who have been interned in Stanley Camp since this British Colony fell to the Japanese in December, 1941, feel there is a 44-month gap in their lives and they doubt if they will ever catch up with what went on while they were in internment.

As it was with servicemen who were prisoners at Shamshuipo camp near Kowloon, across the harbor, lack of news tended to be demoralizing but generally spirits in the camp were up or down according to the size of the ration.

I was shown through the camp Monday by 12-year-old June Davis, a polite little girl of Kentish parents who was known to the other camp children as "Porky," excuse she is stout and healthy-looking.

To her the abnormal life of the camp was just an every-day affair. When she pointed out parts of the camp which the guards did not permit her to visit she explained it just as though she was saying that her mother didn't permit her to eat candy between meals.

DRAFT BOARD DOES NOT WANT GIRL WHO WAS NAMED "GENE"

Malden, Mass., Sept. 8 —(AP) —Gene Blanchard Jodoin, just turned 18, reported to the draft board Friday, as ordered, and the board said: "We don't want you."

Gene is a girl, and it seems her identification got mixed somewhat way back in 1927 when a physician, with many other things on his mind, registered her at city hall as "male."

She knew the order to report was just another mixup but she went down, just the same. Board members gulped a bit as the bobby-socker smilingly checked in—then decided they weren't drafting girls.

Admiral McCain's Death Caused By Combat Duty

San Diego, Sept. 8 —(AP)— Vice Admiral John S. McCain, who won a flier's wings at 50 and went from a Washington desk job to share fame with Admiral Marc A. Mitscher as the United States navy's greatest carrier task force strategists, died Thursday—from exhaustion caused by combat duty.

Admiral McCain, 61, had lived just long enough to see Japan surrender—but he was not convinced that the enemy war lords would be docile as they appeared outwardly.

"They are not half licked," he said two days ago en route home from witnessing the surrender aboard the U.S.S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay. "I don't like the look in their eyes."

The Admiral arrived here Tuesday. He was scheduled to go to Washington after a short rest and visit with his wife. He was full of post-war plans—and a carrier advocate to the last.

"Give me enough fast carriers and let me run them and you can have the atom bomb," said the commander of the famous Task Force 38.

Reported Worn Out.

Earlier yesterday a navy physician reported the Admiral was worn out from the strain of the past four months' activities directing his task force, and that he was suffering from a slight cold.

McCain's wife and the physician were at the Admiral's side when he died.

McCain had been reported planning to go to Washington Saturday to accept a position in the veterans administration, directing affairs for naval veterans.

He was born at Teoc in Carroll County, Mississippi, and graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1906.

During the First Great War, he was on duty aboard the cruiser San Diego, escorting convoys. Later as Lt. Cmdr. he was transferred to the Bureau of Navigation.

German Car Magnate Airs Two Complaints

By JAMES F. KING

Wiesbaden, Germany, Sept. 8—(AP)—Wilhelm Von Opel, 75-year-old German automobile magnate, said Friday he had two complaints — the Americans took his car so he has to walk and American soldiers instead of officers were put in his luxurious mansion.

Opel, for whom Germany's most popular automobile is named, has been a paid up member of the Nazi party since 1933, he admitted in an interview. He brushes that aside lightly.

"I do not feel guilty," he explained with the reasoning you meet almost everywhere in Germany. "I only did my duty."

He said he had turned a large sum of money over to his son, who is in the United States. Most of his securities, Opel added, now are in I. G. Farbenindustrie, the huge German firm under investigation as a leading factor in international cartels to strengthen German war potential.

Sidney Twp. Council

The September session of the Sidney Council was held on Sept. 4th.

A grant of $75 was made to the Stirling Fair Board and a grant of $150 was made to the Belleville Agricultural Society. Road accounts under Road Voucher No. 9 and relief accounts for August were ordered paid. A counter petition to the one presented at the August meeting asking that a roadway between lots No. 13 and 14 from Highway No. 2 to the bay was presented to the council but no action was taken re either petition as yet.

Another petition from the taxpayers on lots No. 31 to 37 in the 5th concession of Sidney Township was presented by Mr. Geo. McCullough requesting that certain drainage of the aforesaid lots be undertaken by the council under the Municipal Drainage Act.

A by-law to divide Snider's Poll No. 6 into two separate polling sub-divisions was passed through its various readings and council was adjourned to meet October 1st at one o'clock p.m.

Labor Chief Tie-up In Construction Of New Homes

Toronto, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Of 3,000 families of returned men hoping to find accommodation in 600 Wartime Housing Ltd., homes now under construction in Toronto "only 100 might get possession by Christmas," the Toronto Telegram said Friday. "Another 500 will take over 'some time' after that, and the other 2,400 might just as well forget their dream."

The Telegram said this was the "considered opinion not only of Wartime Housing Ltd., but also of foremen and superintendents on the projects."

Labor was said to be the chief tie-up. Inexperienced carpenters were blamed by foremen and superintendents for the slow progress of the work.

The Telegram said the survey showed "hundreds of private and, in many instances, palatial homes are under construction, absorbing experienced men who could do same work on housing projects which were to be ready for the soldier, sailor and airman when he returned home."

$1,030 IN BILLS FOUND WRAPPED IN CLOTH

Barrie, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Bills totalling $1,030, wrapped in a piece of cloth and lying on a street here, were found by Dave Crowley of Peterborough, Ont., while he was working near the spot. Crowley took the money to the police station where it was later claimed by a woman who came to report the loss.

The woman, who insisted Crowley accept a substantial reward, explained she always kept her money in the cloth pinned inside her dress.

Triumphal Allied Parade

General MacArthur's triumphal entry, representing the Allied Nations, into Japan's capital, Tokyo, indicated the spirit of the victors in the three-hour parade. Japan has seen the type of men who have brought down German and Japanese militarism and tyranny and Mussolini's Fascism to the dust. The deepest significance attaches to this event for it marks officially the occupation of the capital of Japan, the first occupation in the long history of the Japanese people. The people could see there the evidence that they have been conquered. It was the visible proof that the tyrants and aggressors who planned the most gigantic and powerful tyranny and conspiracy of all time against progress had been crushed by the power of the forces of liberty.

What Tokyo, as the capital of Japan, witnessed in this three-hour parade was a symbol of overwhelming power of the spirit and arms of the United Nations who are the great majority of the peoples of the earth. The triumph represented the feeling and determination of the people in every Allied capital, city, town, village, hamlet and countryside to uphold the Allied victory and make peace so secure that no tyranny can again even attempt a blow at freedom. If the Japanese in Tokyo had vision they could see in every part of the Allied world, and wherever there is an Allied people, a like march of triumph in the spirit, marking the downfall of aggressive Japan.

General MacArthur as Supreme Commander of the Allied forces has all through the proceedings leading up to the official surrender of Japan and the occupation of Tokyo shown the unity of spirit and the firm resolve of these nations who make up so large a proportion of the world's populations to carry on in peacetime the determination to maintain peace and preserve liberty forever.

Japan should see in this triumph in Tokyo's streets the deathknell of any future spirit of aggression.

Training in British Industry

As British industry, which is now busy incorporating six years of intensive research and development in peacetime manufacturing processes, demands today from workers far higher standards of skill and knowledge than ever before, the Government and individual industries have already set up comprehensive nationwide organisations to train the huge body of experts needed in every branch of production.

The Government's outstanding contribution has been to organize technical training schools throughout the country, covering every aspect of industrial life for men and women leaving the forces. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the United Kingdom industrial training is the part played by private firms.

In the aircraft industry any promising boy is given full opportunity of advancement. The scheme at present calls for the training of two hundred boys yearly under the standardised training plan evolved by the Society of British Aircraft Constructors. After six weeks of work the school pupil passes through all the engineering departments of the works. Arrangements have also been made for daytime attendance at local technical schools, and as is customarily the case, wages are paid during training.

There is another technical example in the pharmaceutical field, its aim being to eliminate the "deadend" laboratory assistant. Students, who can study for highest professional qualifications, spend their time between the firms' laboratories and the university.

Heavy industries are well represented. Under an industrialized O.T.C. scheme one thousand ex-servicemen who have shown ability and leadership in the forces are given years of training for administrative executive jobs. An iron works which has been running training courses since 1918 recently inaugurated a scheme for special apprenticeships, giving the chance to qualify for a university engineering degree. Apprentices employed by a firm of engineers are able to study for the highest qualifications in firms and technical schools under an eminent industrial educationist. The school also caters for "nonproductive" material.

Ex-workers of an automobile firm are "going back to school with pay in various motor works." An O.T.C. scheme gives boys entering a motors firm the opportunity of taking a three year course equally divided between the college and workshops—all fees being paid by the company. There are also departmental training courses for those in the accounts, supply or export departments.

Dutch Total Up Cost of War to Them

(U. S. Foreign Commerce Weekly)

Losses occasioned by actual war destruction in Holland amount to around $3,024,000,000, or between 25 and 30 per cent of the national wealth in 1938.

This estimate is given in a report by Dr. Idenburgh and Prof. Tinbergen of the Netherlands central bureau for statistics. The report also estimates that over-all damage will reach a total of $5,670,000,000.

The difference was put down as due to Nazi thefts of food, machinery, stocks of all kinds, and movable supplies and equipment. Over half of the Dutch transportation apparatus, rolling stock and vehicles of all kinds disappeared, said Dr. Idenburgh, while losses of building materials and agricultural tools and implements were estimated at between 10 and 15 per cent of the pre-war total.

Now One War is Over

(Newsweek Magazine)

In New York a grocer questioned an early-morning customer on Aug. 14: "This is the day the war is over, isn't it?"

"It certainly must be," said the customer.

The grocer picked up the phone. "I've been waiting for this," he said. Then he spoke into the transmitter: "Hello, Mrs.—," the name was muffled. "The war is over. Don't you ever come into my store again. You keep out of here. Understand?"

"That woman," said the grocer down the receiver, "for two years makes trouble. She squawks about the food. She fights about the ration stamps. She tells me that one day the war will be over and I'll be glad to see her, then. Now the war is over. I told her."

Wars Are Preventable

(London Daily Herald)

Cynics will doubtless continue to protest, as they did after the last war, that man is incorrigible and that all the dreams of a saner world are in vain. But the great mass of the common people refuse to accept this trumpery nonsense. Wars do not come like thunderbolts from the sky. They are made by men and can be stopped by men. Indeed, this war of all wars was preventable. It was not the ideals of the peoples who prayed for peace in 1918, nor even the machinery which they instituted to effect their will, that were chiefly the cause of the second descent towards barbarism. The ideals were betrayed. The machinery was left to rust.

Nature knows no pause in progress and development and attaches her curse on all inaction.—Goethe.

A noble brother, whose nature is so far from doing harms, that he suspects none. —Shakespeare.

MAN-TRAINERS

No hope have I of changing matters much,
All pretty things I know I mustn't touch.
Women have trained me, since I was a child,
And to that slavery now I'm reconciled.
How please the women? I can tell you that:
Always, on coming home, hang up your hat.

Remember, too, when entering from the street:
There is a mat whereon to wipe your feet.
Mothers and aunts and serving women, too,
Long years ago taught me what man should do;
Don't let discarded raiment lie about,
And never leave the dresser drawers pulled out.

Such training lasts from cradle to the grave!
Man never learns correctly to behave.
He runs the house like an unbroken pup,
Behind him follow women "picking up."
And till he dies he'll hear them all deplore:
"Man never learns what hooks and shelves are for."

Blessings for All Mankind If World of Men So Willed It

New York Times

General MacArthur, accepting an academic decoration at Santo Tomas University, reminded those who heard him that the same sun shines for all nations. The same sun that grows the rice for the East grows the wheat for the West, and from that basic beginning come all the other material blessings. But human toil is necessary, too, and that toil requires favorable conditions, peace most of all.

Neither the rice nor the wheat can be grown, neither the Orient nor the Occident can prosper when the war consumes the toil of the earth's millions. Without peace, though the sun pours down its giving light and warmth for all peoples, the human scheme of things collapses.

The MacArthur thought might seem too obvious to require butting into words, and yet it needs to be said over and over again. Even now, in the first days of peace in many weary years, it has to be spoken. People forget so soon the cost of war and the price of peace. Nations turn back so fondly to the old ways that led to war before.

The old rivalries, the old trouble-breeding suspicions, the old scramble for the products of the sun threaten to begin again. And yet, as General McArthur implies, those products and the blessings of life that follow them could be enough for all if the world of men so willed it.

Leeches Killed Wild Ducks

(Boissevain, Man., Recorder)

Last year, as this year, thousands of ducks died around the shores of Whitewater Lake. A similar epidemic among wild life took place at Netley Marsh in 1937. At that time, as well as a year ago, the epidemic was stated to be Botulism, and no doubt the cause of the epidemic this year would have been classified as the same (Botulism) had it not been for Ducks Unlimited, who sent out two of their men to be on the ground when a probable recurrence of the disease would likely take place.

The men were Mr. F. Ward, and Mr. D. Landon. They arrived here and immediately got in touch with Game Guardian H. Henderson. They went to the lake and found many dead ducks and thousands dying. Mr. Ward was satisfied, in his own mind, that ducks did not die at Whitewater Lake a year ago by the disease as stated, for if such was the case, ducks in other nearby lakes would also have been affected. Therefore on his arrival he started to make a thorough examination of the dead and dying ducks, and in a few minutes found the cause—leeches that were sucking the life blood out of the birds. He, his assistant and Game Guardian Henderson, brought 100 of the dying ducks to town, removed the leeches from their nostrils and throats, and then hand fed and watered them, with the result only two or three of the birds died. In a couple of days the birds had fully recovered their strength, and they were removed to one of the lakes in the bush, and they swam away.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Fairgrounds Floodlighting

Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer.

I wonder if the citizens of Belleville know that the Council is about to spend $8,500 on floodlighting the fair grounds. Lights to be used about 20 hours per year, and blow down or be knocked down the rest of the year.

There could be no objection to the Fair Board spending their "profits" if they ever have any, for any purpose they might wish, but these raids on the taxpayers' money here should be stopped. It is always easy to spend the other fellow's money, but this seems absolutely ridiculous. If I could afford it I would take out another injunction, but maybe I had better attend to my own business and let the city go, where it is surely headed.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 8 —(CP)— The opening of the 20th parliament was an orderly jumble that had something of the beginning of college term atmosphere and something of the gaeity of a club gala.

There were a few slips of forms unbrushed during a period of wartime austerity. In the red Senate Chamber which had seen no women guests during the war, there was a bit of uncertainty at to procedure.

Newly-appointed officials hesitated in their ceremonial.

When the Governor-General drove up to the main entrance, his big maroon phaeton took the wrong turn and let him out under the Peace Tower Arch instead of on the pavement in front where the honor guard was drawn up.

The presentation of new members in the Senate held a special interest for the press gallery for one of their own members—Charlie Bishop, former Southam Ottawa bureau chief—was among the new Senators. Conscious of the overloaded press gallery looking down at him, Charlie, who had covered hundreds of similar ceremonies, got nervous.

He pulled at his stiff collar and mopped his brow. Then when it came time to sign his name, his pen shook so that he had to postpone the signing until later. Afterward he told a reporter "sure I was nervous; who wouldn't be with all you fellows looking down at me."

An innovation springing from the wartime availability of modern army equipment was used in connection with synchronizing the Royal Salute ceremonial by the honor guard and the band and the firing of a 19-round vice-regal barrage from a battery of guns at nearby Major Hill Park. Walkie-talkie radio equipment was brought into play and this means of communication was also used to relay tips to the guard commander on the approach of the Governor-General and his motorcycle escort.

Resources Minister Glen, who, as Speaker for the last parliament, was a stickler for form and propriety, was one of the only two cabinet ministers attending the opening without morning suits. Like Finance Minister Ilsley he wore a light grey suit.

Mr. Glen laughed more heartily than other members, when he heard Prime Minister Mackenzie King describe one of the assets of a good speaker as "having the capacity to sit still for a long time." He recalled the protracted wartime sessions over which he presided — sessions which sometimes began in February and lasted until August.

Vet Members: Appointment of Maj. Frank Bridges of Fredericton as Minister of Fisheries brings to the cabinet the first veteran of the war just concluded.

But it is expected that when parliamentary assistants are announced the names of several other veterans will be included. Among the names mentioned are Lt.-Col. Hughes LaPointe, of Quebec and Lt.-Col. David Croll of Toronto.

Col. Croll is a former Ontario cabinet minister.

SOLD IN BLACK MARKETS

London, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP) — A London butcher, who served four years overseas with the Canadian army, told a meeting last night that Canadian beef and bacon was sold only through black markets in France, Belgium and Holland during the time he served in those countries. The butcher, whose name was not obtained, made his statement during a meat rationing discussion between Prices Board representatives and London and District Butchers and Slaughterers.

TWO OF US MAY BE WRONG

The compromise you suggested July 23 does not suit me, as it changes the terms of your prize contest. There are laws to protect the public against such fraud. The announcement of a contest with terms and prize offered must be followed at the close of the contest by public announcement of the name and address of the winner. It is neither legal nor sporting to alter the terms to suit your whim after entries have been submitted. (M.O.)

First I offered to contribute $100 to the Red Cross or other philantrophy my teacher might indicate if any one would give me a menu for free meals which will supply not merely the fat, carbohydrate and protein but also all of the vitamins and minerals one needs for good nutrition. I specified that the diet list must give the quantities of all items.

Following, is the list submitted by M. O. May 27, '45:

Breakfast
Orange Juice
Two slices Whole Wheat bread
Butter
Two Eggs, poached
Canadian bacon
Milk
Lunch
Braised Beef liver
Boiled potato
Green peas
Cabbage and grapefruit salad
Bread and Butter
Chocolate cake with fudge frosting
Milk
Dinner
Broiled salmon steak
Baked sweet potato
Cauliflower in cream
Banana salad — Mayonnaise
Vanilla ice cream
Milk

You gave no quantities, Ma'am, and therefore your entry was disqualified.

On separate sheet you submitted an interesting table of fractional proportions of various elements, vitamins, fat, carbohydrate, protein and calories yielded by most of the items in your menu—but still your entry does not qualify for the reason stated above.

For that matter, now that the contest is closed, the menu or diet for a day that I sought has not been forthcoming.

I must admit, however, that your entry, Ma'am, seems to me one of the two that most nearly fulfill the requirements—I published the other (submitted by a high school girls' physical education class) here last Monday.

In your menu, Ma'am, you include broiled salmon steak and in the separate table you credit to 100 grams (approximately 3½ ounces) of salmon 10,000 units of vitamin A, 500 units of vitamin D, 280 micrograms of thiamine (B1), 6400 micrograms of niacin (nicotinic acid) etc.

I have repeatedly cited here this statement of Dr. Norman H. Jolliffe: "In order to secure the 550 international units of vitamin B1 which has been lost during the past century as a result of refinement in milling of wheat, one would be forced to consume tremendous and impossible quantities of these particular "prote protective foods" (that is, milk, green vegetables and fruits) — one would have to consume daily a combination of 625 Gm. (1.4 lbs) of fruit, 600 Gm. of potatoes, 880 Gm. (nearly 2 pounds) of other vegetables and 1,260 cc. (5 large glasses) of milk.

Of course, Jolliffe, even though he is recognized as an authority, may be wrong about this. But I'm banking on the soundness of his view. Whether I am right or wrong, at this writing it looks as though I should divide the prize (fifty-fifty) between Mrs. M. O. who submitted the menu printed above and the high chool girls' physical education class, and the additional $100 to the American Red Cross, no particular chapter —unless the two winners ask that it go to a particular chapter.

I've learned my lesson now, I hope. Never, never another contest of any description.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

In England a courtesan used to be as a quail, in allusion to the supposed amorous disposition of the European bird called the quail.

The practice of closing the eyes of the dead is very ancient. In Genesis 46:4 the Lord tells Jacob that his son "Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes."

Turnpike roads were common in England already in the 17th century. In his "History of England" Macaulay wrote: "Soon after the Restoration (1660) this grievance (bad roads) attracted the notice of Parliament; and an act, the first of our many turnpike acts, was passed, imposing a small toll on travellers and goods, for the purpose of keeping some parts of this important line of communication in good repair."

Geologists say that rock and stone are formed in several different ways. Some rock, such as sandstone and limestone, is formed by sediment in water; others, igneous crystalline rock for instance, were formed geological ages ago when the earth was a molten mass; and still others, such as metamorphic rock, were formed under pressure, heat or chemical action.

The sense of smell is highly developed in most fishes. There is a common but erroneous notion that a fish smells with its gills. The nose is the seat of the smelling sense in all fishes.

The phrase "to lick into shape," meaning to make presentable or give a good appearance to, was suggested by the old notion that bear cubs are born "informous and unshapen" and that the mother afterwards "licks them into shape and life." In Shakespeare III King Henry VI the hunchback Richard, Duke of Gloucester, compares himself "to a chaos, or an unlicked bear-whelp that carries no impression of the dam."

Notwithstanding many assertions to the contrary, scientists do not believe that the hair, beard and finger and toe nails of a human being grow after death.

Some are born great, some achieve greatness by their industry and ability, and some become great through the seniority system.

Proving That Diagnosis Is Only A Fine Art

(By Harry Morton Robinson, In The Reader's Digest)

Harvey Cushing, the brain surgeon, was once examining a woman patient who complained of severe headaches and vertigo (dizziness). His office had just been redecorated, and the odor of fresh paint was so strong that Cushing himself had a slight headache from the fumes.

"Does this smell of paint bother you?" he inquired casually, as he proceeded with his examination.

"I don't smell anything," said the woman.

"Anosmia," murmured Cushing to himself. Translated for the layman, "anosmia" means "loss of the sense of smell"; this condition is often caused by a tumor in a certain region of the brain. Further investigation satisfied Cushing that his patient was suffering from such a tumor—which was then surgically removed. The woman's headaches and vertigo disappeared.

An attractive but very nervous young married woman, consulting the great diagnostician, Harlow Brooks, described her symptoms as follows: "Doctor, I'm jumpy and jittery all the time. Sudden noises alarm me and I'm short-tempered with my husband and children—even though they're darlings—"

"Wait a moment, interrupted Dr. Brooks. "Did your usually considerate husband complain bitterly last night about your throwing off the bedclothes?!"

"Why, yes, Doctor, come to think of it, he did."

Dr. Brooks smiled benignly. "Your trouble, Madam, is overactive thyroid. Last night was quite chilly, but because most persons with a hyperactive thyroid develop more body heat than others. You felt warmer than your husband—hence needed fewer blankets. We'll give you a metabolism test, just to make sure."

The test proved Dr. Brooks' diagnosis. After a month of simple medication the patient's jittery symptoms disappeared and she was sleeping tranquilly under normal coverage of blankets.

Sir William Osler had an undoubted genius for spotting obscure maladies at sight. His most tragic diagnosis was on a friend who had just returned from a term of military service in India.

Osler and his friend were smoking and chatting before a pleasant fire in the doctor's home. The doctor, a magnetic raconteur, was unfolding an unusual medical history, when he noticed that his guest's cigarette had burned down to a stub and was searing his fingers. Yet the spellbound man seemed to be feeling no pain. Osler knew that such a deadening of the nerves could mean only the most dreaded of diseases—leprosy. It then became Osler's painful duty to announce this heart-breaking fact to his friend, who died a few years later at the leper colony.

Into Dr. William Mayo's office several years ago came a well-dressed, ruddy-faced man, his forehead creased with worry. "I've been a locomotive engineer for 20 years," he began. "Never had a sick day in my life. But for the past year I've been time I come to a certain curve. I fainting at the throttle every go into a complete blackout for a half a minute. What's the matter with me, Doctor? Have I got epilepsy or something?"

Dr. Mayo didn't bother to make even a perfunctory examination. Pointing to the engineer's starched collar he asked. "Do you wear that collar at work?"

The engineer reddened. "Yes," he admitted. "They call me Gentleman Jim, and kid me about it. But I wear it, anyway." Then defiantly, "What's that got to do with my fainting?"

Dr. Mayo arose and pressed his finger against a big artery in the engineer's throat. "If I pressed hard enough here," he explained, "I'd cut off the blood supply to your brain and you'd faint. Now when you take that curve you lean out of your cab window and your highly starched collar shuts off the supply of blood to your brain. For a complete cure I prescribe a 'lower, softer collar."

The engineer followed Dr. Mayo's instructions, and although he lost some of the dandified reputation at least he didn't faint any more.

Wounded Veterans Helped to Health By Therapeutists

Progress of Wounded Boys Payment Enough for Work, Says Hospital Matron

Halifax—(CP)—The occupational ward of the naval hospital at H.M.C.S. Stadacona here provides one of the most important steps in adapting wounded servicemen to civilian life. Under the supervision of Matron Barbara Miller of Montreal, wounded sailors, soldiers and airmen are being put back on the road to recovery.

Countless patients who have lost the use of muscles or joints have passed through the ward and after treatment ranging from three weeks to three months have been discharged as good as new.

"To see the great progress the boys make in the short time they are here is payment enough for the long hours of patient and absorbing work we put in," says Matron Miller.

There are three other navy nurses who help in this work: Nursing sisters Yvonne Goodwin, St. Catharines, Ont. Florence Pennington, Windsor, Ont., and Elizabeth Jamieson, Sarnia, Ont.

Would Continue Career

Many of the Wren sick berth attendants who have specialized in this work like it so much they plan to take the occupational therapy course offered by the University of Toronto when they return to civilian life.

Occupational therapy is based on the principal that "occupation is nature's best physician." Remedial and diversional branches of the science bring about a cure by keeping the patient's mind occupied to keep him from becoming discouraged. At the same time he works at some craft which helps him to strengthen the injured part.

A third phase, psychiatric therapy, rebuilds the patient's confidence in himself and others through crafts, games, group activities and some psychotherapy.

Closely connected with occupational therapy where the patient takes part in outdoor and indoor sports. Favorites are horse shoes and darts, which strengthen shoulders and arms and table hockey and croquinole, excellent for fingers and wrists.

Tobacco Effects Under Discussion By Psychiatrists

British Woman Doctor Says Smoking is "An Insidious and Increasing Disease"

London, — (CP) — Dr. Sybil Tremellen, a London psychiatrist, has stirred controversial echoes by condemning smoking—in a nation, where women puff cigarets on the street and tobacco is the inevitable associate of morning and afternoon tea in offices and workshops.

Dr. Tremellen said her patients, mostly suffering from "anxiety neurosis," are plunged into deep depression if they smoke; that the effects of the smoking on the new-born child will be discovered only later; that smoking is "an insidious and increasing disease"; that the medical profession should face the whole question "honestly" and take steps to overcome habit and that the increase in nervous illness is partly due to smoking.

One reply came from the Institute of Industrial Psychology which said that "the soothing effect of a cigaret is a very important factor in the productiveness of the nation's workers."

Dr. R. S. Schilling. secretary of the industrial health research board, said that there was evidence heavy smoking had an injurious effects on health but as far as industrial workers were concerned he did not think the matter serious. Few of them had opportunities to smoke while at work.

Alex Jackson, manager of the Wembley Speedway, where motorcyclists careen about dirt tracks, said that only men with the strongest nerves were successful at this sport. Nearly all the riders smoked and they had told Mr. Jackson a cigaret was a useful sedative before a race.

The war office and air ministry asked for their views, said simply that their plan to let soldiers and airmen buy cigarets at a cheaper rate than the general public "has proved very popular."

The Kitchen Of Tomorrow Coming Soon

Chicago—(CP)—Life in the kitchen can be easier hereafter—if women have the inclination and money to buy time and labor saving gadgets.

The nature of things to come was ascertained in a canvass of manufacturers which coincide with recent anouncements that new household appliances would begin reaching retail markets in limited quantities this fall.

Upcoming equipment has streamlined thing-of-beauty motif, but the fundamental aim is utility rather than Utopia.

Fewer shopping trips are envisioned for homemakers who freeze food or stock up on frozen or prepared foods.

Freezing and frozen food storage units ready for production range in size from midget, four-cubic-foot models for small apartments to big, "walk-in" coolers of 150 cubic feet earmarked especially for farmers. Most of them will embody the two-temperature feature, with separate compartments for freezing foods and for storing them after they're frozen.

Many refrigerators also will have a separate, insulated compartment for storing frozen foods.

Cooking ranges with waist-high broilers should signal the end of bending double to see what's cooking. Most of them will have two ovens—large and small—and some will have a warming drawer to keep food and plates warm until needed.

Electric stoves will be equipped with automatic controls, built-in clocks and lights, and outlets for connecting percolators, toasters or mixers. Certain designs include a glass porthole or window in an oven to eliminate frequent opening and closing of the door. A "V" shaped wire rack in the ovens of some models will be used for roasting meat or fowl evenly without turning or basting.

Some automatic dishwashers will occupy a compartment as big as a large oven in a cabinet-style sink. They hold 65 dishes or an assortment of pots and pans, are equipped with motors and are connected with the plumbing. The housewife closes the door and pushes a button to wash, rinse, drain and dry with heated air.

Some automatic clothes dryer cabinets contain a large, perforated metal basket which rotates while a fan distributes heated air to carry off moisture. The dryers are intended to complement washers, and permit the lady of the house to dry one batch while she washes another.

A disposal attachment, to be fitted in sink outlets, grinds garbage into a fine pulp and washes it down the drain when the cold water is turned on. One model of electric iron has a steam attachment—a slot in the bottom of the iron.

PROPRIETRESS OF OLD PUB RETIRES

London,—(CP)—Ye Olde Bell, one of Fleet Street's famous hostelries, has changed hands, and the licensee for the last 25 years, Mrs. Nellie Bear, has said farewell to her hundreds of newspapermen customers.

The house, dating from 1572, was rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren for the convenience of his workmen rebuilding St. Bride's Church after the Great Fire. It is the oldest "Bell" in the city and was for years the haunt of noted journalists.

Among Fleet Street celebrities who were familiar figures at the Bell were writers Ben Johnson and Oliver Goldsmith, journalist and playwright George R. Sims and T. P. O'Connor, Irish statesman. Mrs. Bear, whose six children were born at the Bell has retired.

Another policy-holder reports . . .

"I AM a policyholder in The Mutual Life of Canada, an average man with the average man's problems. I know what people mean when they talk of stretching the dollars to meet all the needs. That is the reason why I decided to insure in the first place. I knew that it was unfair for me to go on making plans for the future with my family and doing nothing to guarantee their fulfilment if I should not be here. It was then that I realized that the only practical solution was life insurance.

"I discussed my needs with a Mutual Life representative and as a result I purchased Ordinary Life insurance.

"The amount I pay remains the same each year. I share in the Company's earnings and my protection remains in force as long as I live. But I also have the option of using the cash value of the policy to provide a retirement income at any time I choose. What I shall do will depend upon my circumstances, but it gives me a great sense of security to know that I own this insurance with its constantly increasing values."

Let a Mutual Life representative help you select a policy adapted to your particular circumstances!

How's Your Speaking Voice? Read Aloud and Find Out

Judith Evelyn is known for her clear, resonant speech.

By HELEN FOLLETT

CONSIDERING what vast sums of money are spent to gain good looks and attractiveness, it would seem as if a girl might do a bit of tall thinking—which costs nothing—about her voice. Many of the unpleasant or just so-so voices aren't that way because of vocal defects, but because of bad speaking habits. The voice is pitched too high or there is too much volume. Or it has picked up little eccentricities of emphasis that makes it irritating, if not annoying.

Men are susceptible to voices. They like 'em sweet and low. A shouting woman makes their nerves crawl. Men notice these qualities more frequently than the women realize.

Clear Enunciation

The woman who trains herself to enunciate clearly, to select her words carefully, and to voice them beautifully in correctly pitched tones has a charm asset that is out of the ordinary run of beauty riches.

A good speaking voice can be developed as a singing voice can be trained. A vocal teacher can turn the trick. The first step is a series of breathing exercises, drawing air into the lungs, crushing stale air out. The next step is to learn to avoid harsh, nasal tones.

Tones of Speech.

Let us consider the offenders—the droner, the one-key talker, the whiner, the loud-speaker, the one who uses too much emphasis. All these should reform for the sake of the public ear.

Speaking too rapidly is a common fault. Heavy guttural tones make a woman seem mannish. Then there is the slovenly conversationalist who drops her g's, muddles up words generally, enraging cultured individuals who have respect for the English language, hate to have it abused.

Suppose, gentle lady, you make a test. Read aloud. Be critical. One way to help enunciation is to say the vowels slowly. And please, some of you, say what you have to say without hemming and hawing. Get your engine started, keep it going.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Letter of Sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My niece was recently married to an Army officer, whom I met, liked very much indeed, and who was a guest several times in my home. After their marriage they went to a western city to visit his family. His father had been ill, and soon after they arrived, he died. Now, although I have not had the pleasure of meeting his mother, I would very much like to write her a letter of sympathy. Will you please suggest what kind of letter I should write?

Gertrude

Your note of sympathy might be worded something like this:

Dear Mrs. Field,

Although I am a stranger to you (I am Dorothy's aunt), I feel as though I really do know you, for your Bob, when he was at my home here, told us so many charming things about you and his father. And so when Dorothy wrote me the sad news of your husband's passing, I wanted to tell you of our heartfelt sympathy for you in your bereavement and deep sorrow, and to tell you too that we are thinking of you with warm friendliness and understanding.

Most sincerely yours,
Gertrude Smith Robbins
(Mrs. John Robbins)

Planning a Visit to South.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

In a week or two I am planning to visit my son who is attending School in the South. Will you please give me a few suggestions as to the appropriate clothes I should wear on the train and take with me?

G. R.

For today's problematic train-traveling I suggest you wear on the train either a dark, very-light-weight dress or suit, non-crushable if possible; a small, smart hat; and fabric gloves, not too light in shade. Also to ease the amount of luggage to be carried I suggest that as soon as possible you send by railway express one piece of luggage containing shoes, perhaps a medium-weight coat for wear in the evenings, and other items classified as "heavy". Your wardrobe for the summer heat of this Southern state should be of summer-type, the number of costumes depending, naturally, on the length of your stay. Simple, "spectator-sports" type dresses will be most suitable for day-time wear, with one medium-size sport hat that will be appropriate for all your day-time costumes; a pair or two of white summer shoes. And for evening wear I suggest one short informal dinner dress, and "in case" of a more formal occasion, a long dress, simple in type, which does not necessarily have to be of a light shade.

Checking Into School

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE girls going back to college (or even beginning their first year) seem a more serious lot than the pre-war contingent. There is many an ex-fighting man who will be sharing classes with them, and more than one is a married woman and a mother, herself.

A shirtmaker frock of good-looking fabric which can be worn to classes, and also double at home, and for the errands of housekeeping, is a much desired wardrobe item.

Here is one of tattersall checked rayon, in soft spun fabric, and a label on it tells the proper cleaning method. It is made to wear and clean well.

CAREER GIRLS OF TOMORROW IN CHEMISTRY

Woman Scientist Sees New Field for Her Sex in Chemical Research

New York,—(CP)—The early post-war world offers women great career opportunities in Chemistry, says the first woman chairman of the New York Section of the American Chemical Society.

She is Dr. Cornelia T. Snell, of Foster D. Snell Inc. (consulting chemists and chemical engineers of Brooklyn N. Y. and author of a number of books on chemistry.

"We are going to be short of chemists for several years, even though the war is over," said Dr. Snell, a pretty blonde, as she sat in her Park Avenue apartment the other day. "Our young chemists were taken by the military services, unless they were doing essential war work. There have been almost no young men graduates in chemistry during the last few years.

"There is going to be a big post-war gap and some one must fill it." Dr. Snell was born in Binghamton, N. Y., taught high school mathematics two years, married her girlhood sweetheart Dr. Foster Snell, in 1921, and since then has devoted her working life to chemistry.

Mrs. Snell has been most active in her husband's company, which develops chemical formulae for cosmetics, household products and other things manufactured by industrial companies.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Women Who Dramatize Their Flaws.

I doubt whether anyone would consider Katherine Cornell a great beauty. But there are few women on the stage or screen with faces that are more interesting.

She has a large, wide-lipped mouth, and she accents this feature by using a heavy coating of lipstick. Many women would regard it as a good-looks handicap. She wears her hair arranged in a severely plain manner. It would appear that she makes no effort to improve her appearance. But her technique is perfect. The idea is to look interesting. Some of the pretties might ponder on that subject; do away with an excess of fluff, cultivate a more personal note.

Helen Hayes' pint-sized figure hasn't interfered with her success. She probably thinks it is fun to be small, while other half-portions of feminine charm bemoan their abbreviated shapes. Being small simplifies life. You can find cute duds any time. You can't pile on jewels and ornaments because there isn't enough parking space.

Men like small women. The contrast makes them feel manly and protective. If you are tiny, make every effort to be dainty. Keep healthy and strong, full of pep and good humor; forget diminutive dimensions.

Some women consider prematurely white hair to be a beauty liability, yet it has made many women appear lovely and distinguished who otherwise would have seemed plain and uninteresting. If the complexion is clear and of good coloring, the figure youthful, and the spirits gay, silvered tresses do not impart the appearance of age. In some cases, it makes a woman look younger than her years. There is no head of hair more truly beautiful than white locks that are cleverly arranged. They form a soft frame for the face. They are a blessing to the one whose countenance has taken on fine lines; dyed hair accents every mark of time.

Men Like Small Women.

There is the tall girl, who hates her extra inches. Ever conscious of them, she gets into the habit of stooping, ruining a figure that, otherwise, would be lily-tall, stately and graceful. Why bother about what cannot be helped? Why not play it up, make the most of it?

Getting back to the subject of hair, we're not crying down the dye spot. If locks are of an uninteresting color, there is no reason why they should not be changed. The big idea is to have the work done perfectly, by an expert, to continue treatments so there will be no revelation of artifice. Not that we object to artifice these days. But unless there is a frequent touch-up, the glorious crown will be patchy or streaked.

Women don't lie any more about resorting to dyes. Why should they? They even talk about their facelifts.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Time, and Change of Scene, Great Healer for Broken Heart

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My husband and I would like to get a disinterested opinion from someone not personally acquainted with any of us, concerning our daughter's problem.

"She was engaged to a boy she had known all her life. They went through high school together, had one year of college, when he was drafted. And after his boot training was sent overseas. They wrote reams to each other, two and three times a week. Then followed a period when she heard nothing at all from him.

"Word came to her from a buddy in the service that he was missing, and it was believed he'd been killed. She didn't know the soldier who wrote, and as no official word was received she wrote to the War Department and received an answer that no casualty had been reported. During this time we were afraid she'd lose her mind. She refused to see her friends, took no interest in her former activities, gave up her choir singing and became seriously ill.

"One day a war veteran whom she knew slightly, came to see her and told her the truth. Will, the boy to whom she was engaged had married a girl in Australia and was still there. My daughter's reaction was unbelievable, considering her past life. She began to go about to taverns and dance-halls, remain out half the night and come home under the influence of liquor. Her father and I were broken-hearted but we never reproached her. We begged her to take up her singing professionally. She has a lovely voice.

"We begged her to visit friends, especially her father's sister who has a ranch in Wyoming, but she is adamant to all our suggestions. She treats her father and me as if we were to blame for this whole unfortunate affair. We're at our wit's end. Have you any suggestions? We're comfortably fixed and can afford to help her forget.

F. S. M."

When a girl's pride has been hurt to the quick, the real remedy is time. Change of scene helps wonderfully, and if you can persuade your daughter to go to the relative in Wyoming and take up riding, I believe she'd find herself. Why not go with her, as you're able to afford it? Begin to go shopping for jodhpurs, flannel shirts, etc. In helping you shop for the western adventure, she'll probably fall in line and begin to take interest in selecting things for herself.

Thank goodness you're financially able to do something practical for a girl who is so unhappy. Thousands of girls who've suffered similar tragedies have to grin and bear it, in surroundings which only serve to remind them of faithless lovers. Please write me again.

The Marry Go Round

The Dangerous Years.

"The Dangerous Age" is not half so dangerous for women today as it was when Ellen Key wrote her famous book of that name.

If you care to date yourself, you may remember that this age was somewhere in the late thirties to the middle or late forties, when a woman's children are grown and on their own, her husband is wrapped up in business, her struggles in life are over, and she is bored to death, and tempted to have one more fling and play tiddlywinks with her life.

In those good old days, there was nothing for her to do but try to recapture her youth chase rainbows, make a mess of her life and wreck her dull but perfectly good marriage, by foolish flirtations or a sorry "affair" with a gigolo or a fortune hunter.

But, nowadays, when a woman reaches that age and stage, there are a thousand outlets for her restlessness and excess energy—a thousand ways to make life interesting. Sometimes she goes in for politics and runs for office; sometimes she takes up social science and starts a group movement for something or other; and sometimes she studies child welfare and does a lot of good in the world. She may even go on the radio, or do a column, or write her memoirs, or start a little shop of her own. There is no end to the possibilities—and no limit, except the amount of her brains and intelligence.

But the Dangerous Age of Man is much more hazardous; and apparently it has advanced about seven or eight years since I wrote a column setting it at 47. It may begin at 47, but these days men stay young much longer; and it is often, not until they reach their middle fifties and are well-heeled financially, that they decide they are missing "life" and welcome a second blooming.

If they are single, they often begin playing around with girls less than half their age, and usually marry one of them—to their sorrow later when they make the big divorce settlement. If they are married, they suddenly develop the roving eye, and begin staying out late with girls the age of their daughters.

The idea, of course, is that association with the sweet young things will make them feel and look a lot younger. (They are all Fausts!) Whereas, it is much more likely to make them feel years older. The violin age simply can not keep step with the saxophone age, without overworking the tired old heart and the stiff old arteries.

Of course, many young girls do find older men more interesting, more polished and sophisticated than boys their own age. But the average girl who marries a man 30 years her senior is merely marrying his pocket-book.

There should be plenty of interests for men as well as for women when the Dangerous Age overtakes them. And for many men there are. The average man has worked so hard all his life for success that, if he is a student and loves his wife and family, there is plenty for him to do—besides going haywire! Otherwise, the Dangerous Age may be more perilous for men than for women, these topsy-turvy days.

FASHION FLASHES

HOME-GROWN is the word describing some pretty alligator bags fashioned of domestic skins. A charming affair is a tiny salt box bag of red or blue alligator made with a round shell frame. There is tucking on the alligator handle.

The latest angle for a hat is the very sharp side tilt. It is used for a pretty hat of sparrow-brown felt with an irregular breton sweep to the brim which is posed at a three-quarter angle. Bow of pine green satin and matching green veil. A good hat for a suit or untrimmed coat.

It goes with everything, is the plea advanced for a new shade, billiard green. We saw a beautiful suit of billiard green gabardine that was shown with black then with brown, then with navy blue accessories, and it was equally smart with each color.

A big change from ubiquitous fur jacket is the stole and the cape-stole so frequently seen now. Silver fox is used for a handsome cape-stole with a deep cape section and long, softly curved panels which may be snapped up in muff form or worn long with slit pockets.

Picturesque is the word for the new dinner and theatre hats. A beauty is a face-framing turban of ruby colored coq feathers with turquoise motifs dividing the sweeps of coq that frame the face.

How good it is to find a dress that is simple enough for unobtrusive wear during the day yet smart enough not to be out of place at a luncheon or tea. Such a frock is of black woollen buttoned down the front to the hem with square, mirrored buttons. Pockets in the side of the skirt, soft side gathers, easy armholes and a black satin bow at the neckline are other details.

A DIRECT RESULT of the recent textile situation is the emergence of the fur suit. Made of flat furs, and available in the less costly pelts, this fashion is thought to have big possibilities since the suits are so styled that the jacket goes well with a wool skirt or frock, while the skirt teams up with a woollen jacket.

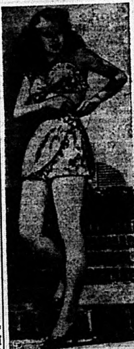
Much accent on sleeves this season. A black crepe frock has sleeves with shoulder to elbow fullness, the sleeves tightening into a narrow cuff just below the elbow. Shirred vertical lines either side of a narrow centre panel for a molded effect, with half belt in back. Two-stranded pearl bead choker is attached at the neckband.

New handling of fur trims marks some of the new coats. Woollen dyed to match natural silver blue fox is used for a handsome three-quarter-length, simply cut coat. The silver fox rounds the shoulders and swirls around and down the sleeves, forming a half cuff at the sleeve hem.

Jewelry owners who like to show off their rings and bracelets should be delighted with one designer who has created an evening glove of black velvet with lace inserts to show bracelets and rings.

It's easy to dress up soft little suits for sparkling night life with the aid of the dressy dickeys now being shown. Striped lame, silvered gauze, lace, and satin or crepe with sequin trim are just some of the fabrics used.

NEW SWIM SUIT



Attractive Mona Freeman sports one of the latest styles in swim suits as she buttons her wrap around skirt of grey rayon with white carnations. The shorts under the skirt are made of matching material, as is the bra top which has self ruffles. The suit is excellent for sun bathing.

Beauty Backed Up by Health

Cleanliness is the first law of beauty.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WOMEN of this day and age have too much sense to believe that there are magic beautifiers that will create a new complexion over night. Toiletries are a help; they are fun to play with but they can't come through with flying colors unless they are backed up by health measures. To be truly beautiful one must be a follower of the Goddess Hygeia, eat wisely, bathe daily, get exercise out of doors, have long hours of refreshing sleep.

Care of the complexion must go on faithfully, not spasmodically. Scrupulous cleanliness of the skin is the first law. Use every possible means of keeping the pores free of dust deposits. Clear away makeup at bedtime with a cream of light consistency. Then on with the lather, using soap that is mild, acceptable to the most sensitive epidermis. To allay the starched feeling that often follows the sudsing, apply a heavy cream. Rub it in with flattened fingers, using an upward motion then tap and slap.

Brisk circulation is the next consideration. Muscles elsewhere keep firm and elastic through exercise. Facial fibres must be toned by galloping blood streams and massage. Use cold water every morning. It will keep the flesh firm, will impart pleasing coloring to the cheeks.

To retain fine texture, stick to a balanced diet, avoiding fried foods, too many pastries, rich sauces.

Cosmetic Preparations

That cosmetics are largely responsible for faces that are free from wrinkles in middle life is not to be doubted. Oily preparations help to keep the surface normal, and friction necessary for their application keep the underpadding firm so the skin is not loose or stretched, in a condition to fall into fine lines.

Give cosmetics their due, but don't expect too much of them. You have to do your part, too.

St. Louis, New York, Cleveland On Brink of Elimination In Torrid American Loop Race

Washington Keeps Pace With Detroit Tigers Both Winning on Friday

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Barring a baseball miracle, the American League race has narrowed down to a two-way stretch between Detroit and Washington with St. Louis, New York and Cleveland on the brink of elimination.

Only unexpectedly strong comebacks by the Browns, who are six games back, and the Yankees, who trail by 6½ lengths, could save them from the disaster suffered in their series with the Senators and Tigers. St. Louis has only 22 to play and New York 23 left.

George Case all but ran St. Louis out of the park last night stealing three bases, including home, in a 3-2 verdict for Roger Wolff over Bob Muncrief. The argument over Case's theft of home in the first inning became so heated that Umpire Joe Rue chased catcher Frank Mancuso.

Detroit's aching back pitching staff continued to make life miserable for the Yank sluggers. Hal Newhouser, fresh from a series of examinations by the medicos, threw his high hard one past the home club, turning in a neat four-hit, 5-0 shutout. In the seven-game series the Tigers captured four of six with one to be played today.

Ryba Douses Indians.

Mike Ryba, Boston's venerable handy man, doused Cleveland with a three-hit coat of whitewash, 1-0, outpointing Mel Harder. Philadelphia copped both ends of a twin bill from Chicago, 4-3 and 9-2 with the help of five White Sox boots. Bill Connelly, 19-year-old lad from Alberta, Va., registered his first big league triumph in the opener and Charley Gassaway copped the finale.

St. Louis pared Chicago Cubs' National lead to four games by blanking Boston on George Dockins' three-hitter, 4-0, after New York's Sal Maglie had handcuffed the Bruins, 2-0, for his third shutout in six Major League starts.

Tom Seats and Art Herring teamed up in Pittsburgh to hurl Brooklyn to a 3-2 decision after the Dodgers had their daily spat with the umpires.

The Phillies and Cincinnati split another double bill, the Reds copping the first, 6-2 for Joe Bowman and the Phils easing out an 8-6 margin in the finale despite two homers by Eddie Miller. Only 675 fans were present.

George Case and Joe Kuhel, Senators — Case stole three bases and Kuhel became first Washington player to hit homer at Griffith Stadium in 3-2 nod over St. Louis.

Sal Maglie, Giants — Whitewashed league-leading Cubs, 2-0, his third shutout in six big league starts.

Mayo Sparking Tigers Infield With Fine Plays

By SID FEDER

New York, Sept. 8 —(AP)—It is one of baseball's little jokes—like finding three Dodgers on one base—that the guy currently sparking the Detroit Tigers up the American League pennant path is a fellow who wasn't good enough for such aimless baseball wanderers as the Giants, Athletics and Braves.

Away back in '36 the Giants gave up Eddie Mayo because Sweet William Terry thought he was too slow afield. He lasted only one season with the Braves. Later the Athletics sold him over the counter because of lack of plasma in his hitting, the result of a spring training eye injury that left him in a "blind shadow" at the plate.

But time and nature cleared up the retinal hemorrhage and he's currently jolting the junior circuit's most esteemed elbowers in a manner to which they certainly have not become accustomed. In the current series with the Yanks he's only gone 13 for 27 or somewhat better than par for the course.

The Tigers took care of the glu-footedness by moving Mayo from third base to second base. While this made neither a gazelle nor a Gehringer of our hero, it was good enough to establish him as the shining light of an inner defence which otherwise appears tied together with baling wire and bicycle tape.

Mayo now is up there around the .300 hitters as well as in the upper bracket among the loop's home-hitters and run-knocker-inners. And his new style of fielding has been good enough to make the Tigers the league's second-best double-play producers.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

National Hockey League President Mervyn (Red) Dutton did not say whether any agreement had been reached yesterday in the N.H.L. governors' meeting with the Quebec Senior Hockey League which is considering entering professional ranks.

If the league turns pro and if a Toronto entry is accepted, it will take the name of Marlboroughs, Manager Conn Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs announced. Leafs would sponsor the projected Toronto entry.

President Ernie Hamilton of Montreal Royals said a Toronto entry would complicate the league's schedule arrangements.

Toronto, Sept. 8 — (CP)— Between tentative stabs with rod and line, Bill Tobin leaned back in the fishing boat and savored the intriguing story of hockey's Three Live Ghosts.

It started, he said, a couple of years ago at Hibbing, Minn. He saw Ghost No. 1 for the first time when Coach Paul Thompson shepherded an undernourished-looking youngster into the office which served Manager Tobin as headquarters for the National Hockey League training camp of Chicago Black Hawks.

As the fishing party out of Kingston, Ont., drifted through the Thousand Islands, Tobin recalled the incident and chuckled. The kid, he said, looked like a skeleton. He was a "walking ghost" with tousled jet black hair and feverish eyes. But Tobin shrugged and told Thompson to get the kid a pair of skates.

A few weeks later, the kid had a Chicago contract. Later, but not much later, he was known to every N.H.L. fan by the name of Doug. Bentley.

"Doug was a standout from the start," Tobin told the fishermen. "He literally burned up the ice with his speed. After several games . . . I called him into the office to . . . give him a bonus."

Doug thought he was being shunted back to the minors and looked like a "scared puppy," recalled Tobin. When he heard about the bonus, Doug told the Chicago official he had a brother named Max "who is twice as good."

So Max, who like brother Doug could have closed one eye and passed for a needle, came to Chicago and almost overnight fame. Even then, Tobin didn't tumble to the fact there was a total of 13 talented Bentleys at the family home in Delisle, Sask.

"Then I had exactly the same experience with Max as I had with Doug," continued Tobin. "He came into the office one day to tell me that they had another brother, Reg, who was even better than Doug or he."

Reg looked less like a ghost than his brothers—but he didn't let it be a handicap. He made good, though not with the same smash which marked his brothers' debut.

All the Bentleys — well the three big time Bentleys—are free of commitments this year and Tobin expects to see them reunited on the Chicago front line.

In fact, Tobin told Doug (Windsor Star) Vaughan who was along on the fishing trip, "I figure we'll be the most improved team in the N.H.L. this winter."

ROYALS MAKE IT FOUR IN ROW OVER ROCHESTER

Toronto Leafs Bunch Hits to Defeat Buffalo by 8 to 6 Count

(By The Associated Press.)

Red Durrett, of Montreal, and Johnny Dudick, of Syracuse, each gave a four-star swatting performance in the International League last night that carried the Royals and the Chiefs to easy victories.

Durrett clouted his 20th and 21st homers to drive in six runs as the Royals made it four in a row over Rochester, 14-9. Dudick bashed out a triple and a double to drive in five runs and sparked the Chiefs to a 12-4 triumph over Jersey City. Wally Caze also helped Syracuse's Bob Katz notch his 19th Victory by swiping two bales to boost his number of stolen sacks to 68.

Buffalo outhit Toronto, 14-11, but the Leafs bunched theirs to better advantage to win, 8-6, while Newark swept a doubleheader from Baltimore, 3-1 and 13-9. Serman Lollar connected for his 34th homer for the Orioles in the nightcap as Johnny Podgajny made his 66th mound appearance of the year for the birds.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 8 —(AP)— The Southern Association has drawn more than 1,000,000 attendance this year for a 140-game season. In five previous years when the loop passed the 1,100,000 mark each club played 154 games. . . . That leaves observers wondering why the Southern wants to jump into "AA" classification, where expenses will be bigger but the crowds probably won't. . . . Mike Karakas, Chicago Black Hawks goalie, is a parking lot attendant at Rockingham Park. So is George Army, the Rhode Island Reds' trainer. . . . Showing unusual optimism, Columbia's Lou Little maintains that his new passer, Gene Rossidee, has the same stuff as Sid Luckman and Paul Governali did when they came out of high school.

When Lieut. Leo Houck, Jr., a glider pilot who engaged in every major airborne invasion prior to Germany's surrender, came home unexpectedly after 17 months in the European theatre, his father, veteran Penn State boxing coach, slouched to the floor in a faint. . . . When he was revived, Leo, Sr., who is very proud of his stand-up record in 200 pro fights, explained apologetically: "That was my first trip to the canvas."

KAMPMAN, BRODA, KARAKAS WAIVED OUT OF THE N.H.L.

Season Will Open Oct. 27th and Close March 18th With Each Team Having 25 Home Games

Montreal, Sept. 8 — (CP) — Adoption of the 1945-46 schedule, completion of working agreements with other organizations and a few rules adjustments were among the accomplishments recorded at yesterday's semi-annual session of the National Hockey League's Board of Governors. Reports said that 25 players were waived out of the league during the day's get-togethers.

The new schedule apparently was drawn up to the satisfaction of all, with each club drawing 25 home games as in previous seasons. The season will open Oct. 27 and will close March 18. The same playoff system will prevail as in other years with four of the six clubs qualifying for the playofsf and each series being the best-o-seven games.

It was announced by President Mervyn (Red) Dutton that many of the wartime restrictions with regard to players in the armed services were lifted so as to give every man on any club list an opportunity to re-enter hockey immediately upon being demobilized.

Recommendation of the management committee that 14 players and as many goalies as desired might be dressed by a team, was taken from last season's rules and teams were restricted to 13 players on the bench, and two goalkeepers in uniform.

In the reported player changes, it was said that Mike Karakas, Bingo Kampman and Turk Broda were waived out of the league. Boston refused to waive Joe Cooper, Chicago rearguard, and unless waivers are recalled he will go to the Bruins. Chicago Black Hawks claimed Walter (Ants) Antanas and Fred Thurier.

Gordon Bell, of Regina, who was recently in the Navy, was purchased from New York Rangers by Toronto Maple Leafs in a cash transaction.

The Calder Trophy, awarded eah year to the prize rookie, now is an actuality. The Governors inspected a new sterling silver mug to bear the Calder name and gave their approval.

The new constitution and the new playing rules also were adopted. The big change in the playing rules is the abolition of the minor penalty shot; the lines remain unchanged.

Appointment of the referees was left to President Dutton; the minor officials will be appointed by the home clubs for each game.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

There's plenty doing this afternoon in the world of sport, the day when sports columnists should duck everything, grab the fishin' tackle, get himself some suds and buzz off down the bay. But in these hours of playoffs, with phones ringing every two minutes, the boss trying to find out if the expenses are warranted, "Is this trip necessary," and the better half figuring on roast beef and Yorkshire pudding on the Sabbath when ear-rending snores issue from the scribe's couch, the Sat. p.m. holiday is just another day of work.

And here is what is happening. This afternoon Columbian Squires trek to Peterborough to settle that first round Junior O.A.S.A. argument with Oshawa's Aces at 4 p.m. At 2.15 in the same city the Mountain View Bomberettes tangle with Peterborough's Westclox ladies in the second bout of the first round P.W.S.U. playdowns, and if they cop, play a second game at six o'clock.

Down at Point Anne, at 5.30 p.m. to be exact, the Ox Pointers, conquerors of the Kingston Victorias, are hosts to the smart Oshawa Mayfairs, who eliminated Peterborough Plazas in the first round of the Intermediate "A" playdowns.

At six o'clock, as far as we know,- the Belleville Juniors baseball squad takes on SWACOS in their first game of the two-of-three playoff series in the City and District Baseball Loop. And if you guys think this corner is not going to have a busy Sunday, then the Nips are a fine, clean understanding nation who were misled.

Our choice of the party is Peterborough where the Bomberettes and the Squires hold forth. Claude Tice, pinch-hitter extraordinary, who scores a good game, will do the Point Anne-Oshawa joust. And speaking of that, softball fans should make the trip to Ox Point this afternoon for this Oshawa team is a smart aggregation, and with Point Ann hotter than a June day, the tilt should be worth watching.

Mountain View Bomberettes grabbed the championship of No. 1 R.C.A.F. Training Command at the softball and swimming meet at the station on Thursday. Vicky Hillier and the gang still smarting from that Peterborough shellacking reverted back to form and won the title from the Rockcliffe, Ottawa, gals by a 9-2 count. That's the third title for Vic Bagnato's bevy of charming Bomberettes. If the airgals win the first game in Peterborough this afternoon, Vicky will do the iron-man stunt of pitching two games on the same day. . . . Too much to ask, sez we. . . . But we're pulling for the tall, dark and handsome Westerner and her gals in the air force blue. . . . George Tice has been requested by the Oshawa Fair Board to act as starter at the two-day harness race meet being held in conjunction with the Oshawa Fair next Tuesday and Wednesday. George has earned an enviable reputation as a starter in this district and the invitation to act at Oshawa is but another tribute to his ability. . . . He knows the harness race game from sulky to wheel to bit and the drivers, canny cusses that they are at times, know that fact. George doesn't fool—and gets the nags away in sometimes record time. . . . He will be seen, as usual, at practically all the country fairs this autumn. . . . That 21 inning softball joust between 6 R. D. and Air Force Headquarters at Trenton on Thursday was a real mushball marathon, with the Sixardees getting the 4-3 nod. . . . The teams battled hammer and tongs with only one error occurring when the A.F.H. first baseman dropped an easy fly. . . . Sixardee later went on to win the Command title by eliminaitng No. 1 Air Command by scoring the only run of the game in the ninth innings.

And so to Peterborough . . . .

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 776
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When Oxpert Zeke has hands too weak, his bids are always rash. Without enough he chucks a bluff and ends up in a crash. But let him hold a hand of gold, as surely as I live, he starts to nurse it in reverse and goes conservative.

Put yourself in the mood for this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠Q 3
♥None
♦A J 7
♣K Q J 8 7 5 4 3
NORTH
♠A 5 2
♥10 9 7 4
♦K 6 3 2
♣A 6

South has a typical four club opening. Its main feature is a practically solid suit of at least seven cards. Important also is that it shows at least eight tricks with a sure trick outside.

Partner needs no clubs to support it. The suit shown by such a bid is expected to be long and strong enough to stand alone. It is assumed to fear no trumps the opponents may have.

So, regardless of how many trumps he has, partner may bid five in that suit with any kind of a trick or more. Even if they do not make a game, it is worth the try.

But if partner has two sure tricks, he responds with some bid other than five in that suit. This becomes a signal to indicate that there is probably a slam in their pair.

With two aces and a king, north responds at once with a bid of four no-trump. This is the signal for asking partner how many aces and kings he has. And partner must tell.

Following The Kibitzer's convention, south signals an ace and a king with a reply of five hearts. Learning that opponents have an ace and two kings, north should be content with six clubs.

But he was one of those birds who had an aversion for minor suit contracts. He bid six no-trump. East doubled with mental glee. Knowing north's odd ways, south took it out to seven clubs.

East doubled that, too. But do you know what? South took all 13 tricks with an inverted squeeze. I'll show you how.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — The farmers in this locality observed the Labor Day holiday in the usual way, and that is working on their farms. The past few weeks have been extremely busy. The stook threshing has been delayed by heavy dews in the morning and the grain was made much more difficult to handle. By lodging Messrs. Goldie McInroy, Elmer Wilson and Nelson Stapley the local threshers in this district have been kept busy and were hard pressed at times to keep the farmers in good humor.

Many of the farmers have had to work so hard that they have become somewhat discouraged and as a result numerous farms in this locality are being offered for sale. Already a number of real estate deals have been transacted.

OLAF OLSEN MATCHED WITH EARL McCREADY

"A grudge bout by the look of it" is the way a fan described the return bout between Earl McCready and Olaf Olsen which takes place in the Hume Arena on Wednesday night. Several weeks ago McCready met Olsen in a thirty minute time-limit go and the two big fellows had a rip-snorter of a session. At the end Referee Cliff Fox raised McCready's hand as a point winner. There had been no fall and the giant Swede put up quite a fuss. As near as we could make out this is what he said: "Ay bane rassle for long time now and nefer in Scandihovia do dey beat Ollie with such stoff." "Yumping Yiminy"! In any case the men come back in the main bout this week and the fans are guaranteed one "doozer" of a battle. The "Moose" has fully recovered from the hip injury he suffered here a month ago and the way he tore into Whipper Watson the other night shows how he feels about the opposition these days. On the other hand this huge Swede is a mighty man if ever there was one. Standing away over six feet and weighing over two hundred and fifty pounds big Ole moves around the ring like a middleweight. The decision win which McCready took over him in the short bout before is the first loss he has sustained and he has no intention of letting that mark stay on the record books.

Pilot Officer Pat Flanagan and Bunny Dunlop also renew their feud but this time they will have forty-five minutes in which to settle their duel. It should be great to watch for the clever Flanagan comes up with some of the smartest wrestling ever seen here. Dunlop outweighs the Airman by considerable and has the power to back it up. In the opening match Irish Tom Collins who has been quite a favorite here in past seasons comes back to battle Jumping Jim Bennett from Detroit.

Toronto Tip Tops To Represent Canada At World Tourney

Toronto, Sept. 8 —(CP)— Toronto Tip Tops will represent Canada at the world softball tournament in Cleveland it was announced Friday night after Hamilton Beavers refused to continue a play-off game with Tip Tops which was tied 0-0 at the end of nine innings.

Charley Lewis of Toronto, who said he had been appointed convener for the series to determine which team would make the Cleveland trip, said: "Hamilton refused to continue because they wanted another big gate at Hamilton. I instructed them to play to a decision last night in order not to disappoint the big crowd. They refused. I immediately wired . . . Cleveland, stating that Tip Tops would represent Canada."

The Hamilton club said that they were unable to continue the game because they were due back at Hamilton at midnight when their ace pitcher, Russell Johnston, was due to report upon his police beat. They contended also they should be given an opportunity of a good night's sleep before tackling Tip Tops in the third and fourth games of the series in Toronto today. In the series opener in Hamilton the two teams played to a 1-1 tie in 10 innings.

Johnston and Cam Ecclestone engaged in a great pitching duel before about 8,000 fans last night. Each struck out 11 batters and Ecclestone issued the only walk.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night Saturday, and Sunday morning it was raining and me and Artie were playing games on the living room floor and pop was asleep in his private chair with different parts of the Sunday paper around him, and Artie said, Hay I, wonder if we could go out now, it's not raining much.

It's got to stop all a ways before I can go out, I know from experience, I said, and Artie said, Well it's trying to stop, so the least we can do is try to go out. Let's ask your father, he said.

He's asleep, I said, and Artie said, Well that's the perfect time to ask him. Didn't you ever hear about silence giving consent? he said, and I said, I never heard anything about unconsciousness giving consent.

Then we'll ask him just loud enough so he can hear it but not loud enough for him ot understand it, Artie said. And he looked at pop still asleep in his private chair, saying, Can we go out, Uncle Will?

Not saying it hardly loud enough even for me to hear it, and Artie claimed silence gave consent, and I said, Nothing doing, he's got to make some sound to prove at least he heard us.

Well then you ask him, but you dont have to yell about it, Artie said, and I said, Hay pop, can me and Artie go out now?

Saying it just loud enough for him to understand if he'd been awake and listening hard, and pop made a sound to prove he even heard it in his sleep. The sound being a grunt, and Artie said, There you are, he heard us and he didn't say no, let's go.

Which just then the sun came out looking as if it had never knew it had been in, and me and Artie started to run out yelling and laughing, and pop yelled out, Stop that racket and go out and take a walk for Peet sake.

Which we did for our own sake, still laughing.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 9

The rose Folly held in one hand was no more radiant than the girl in the first flush of youth. Gray green eyes expectant, red lips parted, dark curls hanging like a soft frame about her flower like face.

Fed Up With Solitude.

Any man would have appreciated the picture she made and by this time Hilton was fed-up with solitude. Forgetting that the least encouragement might prove fatal he welcomed her warmly.

"How nice of you," he said, "to bring me the first rose of your garden."

"It isn't the first," she dimpled, walking past him. "But it is the prettiest. I wonder if you've anything to put it in."

"Now that I think of it there was a rose on my desk when I moved in. The vase is still in the bathroom. I'll get it."

Lauds Folly's Beauty

Producing it filled with water he watched as Folly arranged the single lovely flower. Every touch of her delicate fingers was like a caress. She was truly beautiful, Hilton admitted. Skin hair, eyes and mouth.

If only she could have stayed as she was that instant, innocently concerned with her task. Yet even then she was deceiving him. Her absorption in the rose was assumed for his benefit. Folly was too clever not to suspect her own appeal. She lifted velvety eyes to murmur in a dulcet tone, "It's beautiful, isn't it?"

He was closer to her than he had realized. Her eyes seen at such close range were hypnotic. Scarcely knowing what he said Hilton replied, "You are beautiful too."

Her face with its flowerlike sweetness seemed to float up to his.

"I've missed you so," Folly whispered.

As if it were his cue in a scene many times rehearsed, the man found his lips pressing hers. Yet her answering kiss was a surprise.

"Oh, see here. I'm sorry!", he stammered. "I didn't mean to do that. Truly I didn't."

"I'm not a child," Folly cried passionately. "I know what I'm doing."

Hilton held her away from him opening the door with his other hand.

"You're very temoting, Folly but I'm much too old for you," Hilton said.

Enchanted by her own power she cried, "You aren't too old to make me fall in love with you."

"In love with ME?" he repeated. At the risk of sounding like a cad, indeed of being one since he had certainly kissed her, he was determined to make himself clear. "Look, Folly, you're damnably attractive but love has nothing to do with it."

She smiled at him.

"I don't believe it. How can you say such a thing after what has just happened?"

At that moment Hazel appeared at the outer door which was still open. Putting down her suitcase she walked in.

"It's nice to see you up again," she said to Hilton, ignoring what she must have heard.

A Rebuke to Folly.

"Thanks," he replied embarrassed. "Folly was kind enough to bring me a rose. You have all been very good to me."

Hazel said matter of factly. "No more than we should have done for anyone living in our house."

"She's furious," Folly thought, following her sister meekly down the hall, up the stairs to the third floor. Hazel did not speak until they were in her room.

"I thought you understood that you were not to go into grandpa's room."

"I don't see why I shouldn't. You went in to take his temperature the other morning and Marta spent the evening in there last night while we were gone."

"That's different. I'm a registered nurse and Marta is old enough to know how to behave which you evidently aren't. What did you mean by referring to what had just happened. WHAT HAD HAPPENED?" Hazel demanded.

"He kissed me," Folly admitted dreamily.

"Then why was he practically pushing you out of there?"

"Because he didn't think he should have done it. He said I was too young to know what I was doing. But he was wrong. I'm not."

Says Hazel's Jealous

Hazel sank into a chair sighing, "I guess the only answer is to ask him to leave although it does seem too bad when we need the money so much. I wouldn't even hesitate about it, Folly if I didn't know so well that you probably kissed him."

Folly's face was white.

"You say that because you're jealous, Hazel Wainwright. You are in love with him yourself."

Hazel said coldly, "I give you my word I'm not, Folly. And I'll tell you why. There's some one else you don't even know about. Some one I met on my last case."

Folly said sulkily, "I don't believe it."

"It's true. His name is Charles Gates. He's a captain just back from Pearl Harbor. His mother was my patient but she recovered almost as soon as he arrived."

"You've never gone out with him," Folly said doubtfully.

Folly "Too Young."

"I'm having dinner with him tonight. He's been telephoning to know when I'd be through with my case at the hospital. Oh Folly, please be a good girl and don't cause Marta and me any more worry."

Although Hazel had not lacked dates never before had she admitted her interest in a man. Folly stared at the sparkling gray eyes and happy face, then turned and ran from the room. It wasn't fair, she thought. Hazel couldn't be any more in love than she was but no one thought she was old enough.

Hilton's attitude at dinner that night was so paternal and kind, so utterly unloverlike that Folly decided to go out with Bruce the next time he asked her. At least Bruce didn't kiss her and apologize for it. As a matter of fact Bruce had kissed her only once. She had slapped him but it didn't discourage him.

"Never mind, Folly, you'll kiss me yet," he had said, nursing his cheek.

The very next time she had seen him he had asked her to marry him. She wouldn't have married him for anything but it did a lot for a girl's morale to have a proposal.

It was terribly depressing to practically be repulsed by the only man you could ever love. And it was in this dangerous mood that Folly met the man who drove all thought of Hilton Wood from her mind.

The party was at the home of a former school friend on Broadway. Although secretly she considered herself a "man's woman" Folly had always been popular with other girls. Perhaps because she made no obvious effort to attract them or they may have liked her because she never confided in them.

She had never apologized for the shabby old house on Washington street but when she entertained, which wasn't often, Folly did so down town. When she spoke of her home it was gayly as an enormous old place where the girls "rattled around" with an old family servant to look after them.

"Chan must be at least a hundred," Folly exaggerated. "But he is still here. You know how faithful those old Chinese are. He won't listen when we suggest getting some one to help him. So I just entertain away from home. It's less complicated."

No Confidences.

The other girls who took cooks and houseboys, even butlers, more or less for granted never doubted Folly. They assured her that it was more fun to go down town anyway. Folly always had money to pay her share. Her clothes, if not so expensive, were equally smart. She never confided any of her secret ambitions or misfortune. No one had ever seen Folly cry except that afternoon that she was summoned home by Grandpa Tucker's death.

The Tuckers had been well known in San Francisco. Although he had never consented to live in the house he had built for his daughter, Grandpa had never really forgiven her for marriage to an impecunious book-keeper. Folly could scarcely remember this unassuming little man.

An Orphan at 6

It was Grandpa with his tempestuous likes and prejudices his secret charities and occasional snobberies who had been like a father to her. The child had been only six when both parents were killed in an automobile accident but she never spoke or thought of herself as pitiable.

The affection of her sisters and grandpa to say nothing of Chan had lulled her to a false sense of security. No wonder she couldn't understand their sudden reversal to more severe tactics. When she thought of it all, which wasn't often, Folly resented their attempt to push her into a cold, unfeeling world. But something or somebody would rescue her at the last moment. She knew she would marry some one. It might be Hilton Wood who would keep her from having to go to work in a store or office.

The night that she went to the party at Susan Whitcomb's she was hurt by Hilton's attitude after he had kissed her. She dressed in her most sophisticated dress of black taffeta and swished out on the arm of the boy who had been asked to call for her.

She knew Hilton was sitting before the fireplace in his room where he could see her. Her light laughter floated back and she hoped it tantalized him. But his reaction was not what she desired.

"The poor kid," he thought filling his pipe. "I was pretty tough with her but the only way to stop an affair like that is to let her know where I stand."

Longs for Company.

Tired from his long confinement in his room he longed for company. Hazel had gone out with her captain, looking radiantly happy in her tiny black hat and tailored suit. It was Marta's evening to work. Even if it hadn't been he could not impose upon her again.

Not for years had Hilton Wood had so much time to think and he was beginning to think that even his prized solitude could become boredom. He wished he had not been quite so definite in breaking with Evelyn Newman. She would probably forgive him if he telephoned and gave her his new number. But did he want to get involved again in her everlasting possessiveness, her telephone calls, her demands and suspicions? Hand ready to dial, he sighed, and decided not to make the gesture. Tomorrow would be Sunday and on Monday he was going back to work.

Meanwhile Folly had arrived at the pretentious house on Broadway and having removed her wrap was trailing gracefully down the stairs. Suddenly she noticed a man's eyes fastened upon her. It was no one she knew but a stranger, tall and handsome with a military bearing, although he wore no uniform.

The stranger's hair was fair, his eyes ice blue but warm with an admiration he made no attempt to conceal. He had a small mustache which gave him an enchantingly foreign air. What a beautiful contrast we would make, Folly thought, with no sign of interest showing in her face.

Folly Meets Count.

She saw him speak to their hostess and an instant later they were being introduced.

"Count Eric Gustavus Linstrom," Susan murmured, as if a count was nothing unusual.

Folly smiled as he bowed over her proffered hand.

"Did I understand Miss Susan correctly?" he inquired. "Your name is really Folly?"

"It is what every one calls me. Very few people even know my real name."

"But how charming," he murmured. "May I find a chair for you? Or perhaps a cocktail?"

Folly fluttered demure eyelashes. He was even handsomer than she had thought from the stairway. Here indeed, except for his complexion which was fair instead of dark, was her ideal man. Aristocratic, tall and romantic.

One couldn't have everything, she conceded, and while Hilton's appearance suited her better this man was even more exciting. The nice part about it was he felt it too. He didn't treat her like a silly child. The only time he left her all evening was to dance with his hostess.

Britain to Ask For Post-War Free Lend-Lease

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Sept. 8 — (AP)—Britain is expected to try next week to obtain the United States help for her reconversion to peace virtually free of cost.

The British argument will be based on the contention that a kind of post-war lend-lease arrangement would be fully justified by the sacrifices which the British made in the war.

Anglo-American economic talks will open Monday. Lord Keynes, noted economist and an adviser to the British treasury, arrived yesterday to take part in the conference. The British Ambassador to the United States, Lord Halifax is due Sunday. He will be the other principal British representative on the economic mission.

Advance indications are that British and American officials will start from widely-separated bargaining positions but with common agreement on one basic point: It is in the long range interest of the United States to help Britain get back into peacetime industry and trade as soon as possible.

Some American officials with an eye to post-war markets in the United Kingdom, say that such a reconversion in Britain would be a great help to business expansion and the creation of jobs in the United States.

What United States representatives want of Britain in the talks beginning Monday is fairly clear.

They want commitments that Britain will modify or do away with various practices which tend to promote the growth of commerce solely within the British Empire and those areas of the world financially dependent upon it.

They contend that the main objective should be to liberalize trade among all countries.

At the same time United States officials say that the U.S. must extend considerable financial help to Britain. The tendency in Washington has been to talk of this in terms of a loan, which would have to be specially approved by Congress.

Britain, on the other hand, is reported very relictant to talk about a loan. Britons say they already have enormous debts, that their resources have been greatly reduced by the war and that to take on new obligations now would be impractical if not impossible.

Million Japs To be Surrendered

By DONALD HUTH

Nanking, Sept. 8 —(AP)— The official surrender of approximately 1,000,000 Japanese troops in China probably will take place at the Central Military Academy, China's "West Point," it was reported today.

Lt.-Gen. Leng Hsin, commander of Chinese forces in Nanking, has not announced the date for the formal surrender ceremonies but unofficial sources say the signing will be Sunday.

Chinese army headquarters moved into the Central Military Academy today after the Japanese had vacated the school.

Crews were busy repairing roads leading to the grounds, hanging decorations and making repairs for one of the most momentous occasions in Chinese history.

Gen. Yo Ying-Chin, Chinese Field Forces commander, who has been delegated by Gen. Chiang Kei Shel to accept the surrender, was expected to arrive from Chungking by plane today.

In Mahattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

New York, Sept. 8 (CP)—Best news for pop-song fans in many a moon was the announcement this week by Ira Gershwin that his late brother, George, had left dozens of complete compositions, and the musical treasure-trove would be made public.

Existence of these compositions by the man who wrote "Rhapsody in Blue", "Porgy and Bess." "An American in Paris" and the score for many Broadway and Hollywood musicals had long been rumored, but never confirmed till Ira announced a forthcoming 20th Century-Fox musical would feature a George Gershwin score. The film "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim," will star Betty Grable and Dick Haymes.

Ira, frequent lyricist for his brother, said: "As the world knows, George was a prolific composer. When a tune would come to him, he would play it, write it out, and say 'this is one for the icebox.'

"When commissioned to write a score, he would go through his notebook for material that would fit his immediate need. In 1938 he started to catalogue his unpublished works. On each of them, he would make a notation to indicate whether it would make a song, a dance or a melodic theme for a movie or play."

Only complete compositions—not fragmentary phrases — are preserved, said Ira. "George usually finished everything he started, and all periods in his creative life are recognizable in this music."

Lauritz Melchior, famed Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company and more recently a film acros, will return to his native Denmark for the first time since the outbreak of the Second Great War, taking off from here next Friday.

At the invitation of King Christian, he is to sing during a Danish independence celebration, returning to California later this autumn to finish work on a motion picture and take part in the San Francisco opera season.

Locking Tower of London Is Ancient Ceremony

London's ancient fortress, His Majesty's Tower of London, is still ceremonially locked up for the night, writes Michael Standing in "London Calling." When the hands of the Tower Clock say five minutes to 10, the Chief Warder, with a military escort, is already on his way to perform exactly the same ritual that his predecessors have carried through for centuries.

Every night in fair weather or foul, war or peace, and even during the London blitz, it has continued. Sometimes during the last five years, when the Tower was ringed with fires from the burning city, it was shorn of its trappings and reduced to the barest essentials. Tin hats took the place of Tudor bonnets, and time-honored custom flung itself temporarily to the ground at the swish of an approaching bomb. But today it is the "Ceremony of the Keys" again handed down in some part almost from the days of William the Conqueror.

Origin of Custom Lost

No one can say exactly when it started, or when it assumed the form that still survives. But when you stand there and watch it unfold, the very fact that the origins are lost in the mists of time somehow gives an added color to the proceedings. You can persuade yourself, if you like, that you are back for a few minutes in the medieval days of the Plantagenets, in a plot-ridden Tudor world, or in the troubled times of the Stuarts. In any case, the event and its setting would quicken the dullest imagination.

Stand on Water Line

To see it through, you stand first on the stretch of roadway called Water Lane. It used to be cobbled, and runs on the river side between the inner and outer walls of the Tower. The shadow beneath the archway of the square-built tower in front of you—the Bloody Tower—is deep black; but through the opening you see the moonlight catch the bayonet of the sentry who stands guard outside the Jewel House just beyond. Bayonet is it? Or pike?

Behind you dark and sinister, is Traitor's Gate, a broad Norman archway through the outer wall—once the main gateway from the river, but now disused, and set below the level of the road. Kings and queens, princes and nobles—the unhappy procession steps for a moment out of history and begins to pass you by: some on their way to the scaffold on Tower Green; some to the dungeons; some, like the two princes, to end their young lives in the BloodyTower.

Escort to the Keys Drawn Up

Already in the roadway the Escort to the Keys is drawn up: four men from the Tower Garrison, a sergeant, two privates, and a drummer, in khaki battledress—or is it leather jerkins?

Down to the left you hear footsteps, and you see a dim lantern swinging there by the Byward Tower. A figure steps out from the shadow. It is the Chief Warder in his long red coat, and his black Tudor bonnet trimmed with red, white, and blue roses. Like his yellow Yeoman Warders he is a deserving, gallant and meritorious discharged sergeant from the army.

The little detachment moves off toward the first gate to be locked—at the outer barrier, the old stockade. They cross the bridge over the old moat and go on through the Middle Tower.

Gates Closed and Locked

There is a clank of iron and a rattle of keys as the Chief Warder, now joined by the Watchman—a Yeoman Warder and modern successor to the "varlet" who once earned a halfpenny a night for his labors—closes the gates and locks them. Exactly the same ceremony is repeated as they lock the great doors of the Middle Tower and at the Byward Tower. So is the Tower of London shut for the night, just as it was when its walls enclosed the Arsenal, the Mint, the Treasure, and the Crown Jewels, and when its dungeons held dangerous prisoners of state.

There is a tramp of footsteps again in Water Lane as the Keys are escorted back. From beneath the black teeth of the raised portcullis under the Bloody Tower, a sentry challenges: "Halt, who goes there?"

"The Keys."

"Whose Keys?"

"King George's Keys."

"Pass King George's Keys. All's Well."

Guard Salutes the Keys

The little group moves on through the archway and to the Main Guard drawn up almost in the shadow of the great four-turreted White Tower—Central Keep of William the Conqueror's fortress that still dominates its surroundings today. The Guard presents arms in salute to the Keys. The Chief Warder, raising his bonnet, cries "God Preserve King George," and withdraws to return the keys to the Governor's quarters in King's House—overlooking Tower Green.

The strains of "God Save the King" come from a band on the parade ground. The mellow chimes of the Tower Clock float out over the battlements. The Last Post sounds and echoes round the walls. Another "Ceremony of the Keys" is ended. Another brief phrase has been written in the long, long history of the Tower.

Coast Fishermen Increase Catch

Seafish and Shellfish Takes This Year Top 1944 Figures

Toronto—(CP)—British Columbia and the three Maritime provinces produced some 38,400,000 pounds more of sea and shellfish in the first six months of 1945 than in the same six months of 1944. Return to the fisherfen in landed value increased by more than $2,600,000 for the same period.

In the first half of 1945 catch and landed value increased in Nova Scotia, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island over that of 1944. New Brunswick did not fare as well from January to June in 1945 as in the previous year in either catch or dollar return. Prince Edward Island's gains were smaller than those of the other two Maritime provinces both in pounds and dollars, but percentage of increase in landed value was greater there than anywhere else.

Radar Saves Seven Airmen

Halifax, Sept. 8. (CP) —Radar—once a closely-guarded war secret—has demonstrated one of itc peacetime uses, and as the result of the demonstration seven airmen were rescued by the Freighter Jamaica Produced a short time after their bomber had crashed into the waters of the Atlantic.

The Jamaica Producer was steaming towards Halifax when its radar picked up the path of the crashing plane. A few minutes later, while already racing to the scene, the freighter's radio operator picked up the bomber's S.O.S. the fliers were found adrift in their rubber boat, while a short distance away a dinghy, dropped by another aircraft, was picked up.

The airmen were transferred a few days later to the Britain-bound auxiliary Aircraft Carrier Puncher.

Quotes Jap Commander Saying He Expects To be Back in 20 Yrs.

Johore, Sept. 8. (AP)—The Sultan of Johore told correspondents today that the Japanese commander of Singapore, Lt.-Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, declared to him a few days ago that he expected to return to the British Naval base about twenty years hence.

"We hope the peace will last for 20 years and then we will be back here again", the Sultan quoted Gen Itagaki as saying.

Johore lies across a narrow strait from Singapore.

The Sultan said former Premier Tojo of Japan visited Singapore two years ago and asserted that Winston Churchill, then Britain's Prime Minister, "would have to come to him on bended knees".

Benefactor Gives Farm to Veterans

Paglesham, England,—(CP)—Arthur Davis Martin, 68, used to watch valiant Spitfires go out to battle with enemy bombers during the blitz and wonder what he could do to help men in the services after the war."

Then he decided to turn his farm in this fertile section of Essex over to the Crown as a gift for the benefit of servicemen. It is valued at $225,000 and includes a large farmhouse and 13 cottages on its 1,000 acres. The Ministry of Agriculture plans to establish an horticultural research centre on the property and ex-servicemen who want to work in agriculture will receive training there.

London—(CP)—Air Commodore Lord Stansgate, former director of public relations for the R.A.F., has retired from the air force to resume his parliamentary duties.

Food is Subject Of Conversation On Ocean Voyage

Civilians En Route to England Engrossed With Learning How They Will Fare Under Rationing

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London,—(CP)—Civilians on an ocean voyage today talk of food above all else.

On an east-bound voyage from Canada in the S. S. Strathеden, the 500 civilian passengers knew they were leaving a land of plenty to face leaner days in the United Kingdom. They asked anxious questions about how their children would fare under severe rationing.

They heard strange tales. For instance, they were told of queues. There was the story told by a sailor of his home town where they have had the custom of welcoming home veterans with huge chalked signs on the walls such as "Welcome Home, Johnny, five years in prison camp." Now he says, the signs read: "Welcome Home, Maggie, eight hours in the potato queue."

Canadians almost feel on the defensive in conversations with those who have experienced British rationing, and they explain the Dominion has rationing, too, even if not so severe.

Sailors say the Canadian rationing is not very noticeable when they go ashore at Halifax or Quebec but they agree there must have been some food control to allow Canada to make the immense food contribution she has. They all know that, lean as their ration has been, it would have been even less had it not been for Canada. Even so, they are surprised at figures showing what Canadian producers have provided for them.

The statistical record of Canadian food shipments has been prepared in brief form by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture as follows:

Exports in five years, 1939 to 1944 inclusive, and mainly to the United Kingdom — bacon and pork 2,500,000,000 pounds; beef (in 1944 and to June, 1945) 197,000,000 pounds, cheese 601,500,000 pounds; eggs 180,000,000 dozen; evaporated milk 189,000,000 pounds.

Of these, travellers said, the best known are dried or powdered eggs, an unmistakable product of Canada with a picture of a scarlet-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman on the package. This food has given sustenance in millions of homes and everyone knows where it comes from. Quite as nutritious as shell eggs, it has not been a favorite dish, although welcome in hard times. The lament still is heard that a good housewife can do anything with powdered eggs except like them. More Canadian eggs are being shipped in shell form as shipping space is easier.

Australians to Accept Japanese Surrender In Various Islands

Canberra, Sept. 8. (CP)—The Australian command, acting in behalf of the Southeast Asia Command of Aldmiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, will accept surrender of Japanese forces in Borneo, Dutch New Guinea, The Celebes, Halmahera, Timor, Ambon and adjacent islands, Defence Minister John Albert Beasley said Friday.

Arrangements already have been made to accept surrender of Japanese in Dutch Timor, while arrangements for capitulation in Portuguese Timor will be made in co-operation with the Portuguese government, he told the House of Representatives.

Australian forces have been dispatched to Nauru and Ocean Islands as representatives of Admiral Nimitz, to accept surrender of the Japanese garrisons there. United States sphere of responsibility, Mr. Beasley explained.

He said the Southeast Asia Command would take over, in progressive stages, control of the greater part of the area south of the Philippines which was assigned Sept. 2 to British Commonwealth control.

In the final phase, he explained, Australia's responsibility for occupation will be limited generally to Papau and Australian-mandated territory.

Rebel Duke Remembered

Lyme Regis, England,—(CP)—In June, 1685, the rebel Duke of Monmouth landed at this Dorset town to head a rising that led to the executioner's block—and he hasn't been entirely forgiven yet.

At a Lyme Regis Town Council meeting it was proposed that Western Beach be a renamed Monmouth Beach to commemorate the landing. Councillor Tattersall protested that if Hitler had landed he also would have been defeated but no one would have suggested calling the place Hitler Beach. Monmouth was a "thoroughly bad man." But the councillor's opinion did not prevail and the council by a majority vote decided it should be Monmouth Beach.

COULDN'T SLEEP COULDN'T WORK

What a relief to settle down to a real night's rest, and awake fully refreshed, ready for the day's duties. I was tortured by fretful nights—tossing, turning — never comfortable. Half awake days —over-tired, driving body and mind to work when they needed rest. "Try Dodd's Kidney Pills," said a friend — "it may be your kidneys". I'm glad I followed his advice as now I'm sleeping like a top—thanks to 111

Canadians Enjoy Every Comfort At Manila Camp

Former Jap Prisoners At Hong Kong Arrive by Air

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Manila, Sept. 10 —(CP Cable) —Refreshed by their first sleep between white sheets in more than 3½ years, the first Canadian prisoners recovered from camps in Japan were settled in a converted United States replacement depot on the edge of the Philippine capital today.

The men, taken when the Japanese captured Hong Kong Christmas Day, 1941, arrived by air from Japan yesterday and it became known that a list of recommendations for gallantry awards to Canadians who fought in the struggle against hopeless odds had been handed to the prisoners' commander for forwarding to Ottawa.

The list was submitted to Lt.-Col. W. J. Home of Quebec, who commanded the Royal Rifles of Canada in the Hong Kong battle where that battalion and the Winnipeg Grenadiers constituted the Canadian contingent.

Badges En Route.

However, it was thought unlikely the men would go home from here wearing the decorations but they will get other awards—the 1939-45 Star and the Canadian Overseas Medal. Moreover, regimental badges now are en route from Canada.

Every comfort and convenience that could be arranged awaited the men on their arrival at the depot.

The arrival coincided with that of hundreds of United States and other Allied recovered prisoners, who also came by air as well as on ships, including light anti-aircraft carriers. Allied prisoners who were stretcher cases were dri/en in ambulance convoys preceded by military police in jeeps who cleared their way through heavy traffic.

The men will be able to take cool showers and shave with razors supplied in Red Cross kits which also include towels, face cloths, tooth brushes, soap, cigarets, matches, chewing gum and chocolate bars.

The Canadians were clad in an odd assortment of old tropical uniforms, shoes and caps saved from the days of the Hong Kong battle. Immediately they were able to draw complete new outfits of American tropical wear which a few of them had seen in prison parcels from the Red Cross and which they call "glamor suits" because of their smart appearance.

As they got settled, the Canadians were given a pamphlet issued by the Inter-Service Committee on Prisoners of War, with one section written for military personnel and another for liberated merchant marine personnel. The pamphlet explains what the reception organization here is attempting to do for them, how their next-of-kin will be notified about their safe arrival and details about their pay and a brief lineup of the Canadian government's rehabilitation plans.

The men also were given copies o fa message from Lt.-Col. W. McAnulty, of Sherbrooke, Que., head of the Canadian repatriation liaison group working at the replacement depot, a large tented camp.

Col. McAnulty's message said: "We consider it is a privilege and an honor to have been selected to receive you on your release and despatch you on your way home. Our main purpose is to get you back to Canada to your loved ones and friends just as quickly as humanly possible.

First Step on Way Home.

"This is merely a staging camp, the first hop on your way home. eW have tried to organize it for you as a very temporary home. It can and naturally will be a poor substitute but we will provide for you some of the amenities and food of which you so long have been deprived."

Some of the prisoners were lucky enough to get mail from home. It is coming in daily to Canadian group headquarters.

Interrogation of prisoners will be carried out in three easy stages by special officers, first the prisoners will be queried as to their personal records, such as pay, particularly for administrative purposes and military files. Then they will be questioned by Allied specialists assembling war crimes information. The final interrogation will be carried out by Canadian personnel selection representatives for the person benefit of prisoners when they return home.

Information individuals have concerning the fate of comrades listed as missing, civilians or merchant seamen also will be gathered.

MACARTHUR HITS JAP MILITARISM A DEATH BLOW

Orders Imperial General Hdqts. Abolished And Clamps Censorship On Beaten Empire

Tokyo, Sept. 10. (AP)—Gen. MacArthur struck Japanese militarism a death blow today by ordering the Imperial General headquarters abolished and simultaneously clamped a press and radio censorship on the beaten Empire.

As Supreme Commander he issued a directive that the headquarters must dissolve by Sept. 13. General headquarters was set up in 1940 a few months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor to co-ordinate army and navy activity.

While the occupation of Japan moved smoothly, sparks flew in Korea over Gen. MacArthur's policy of retaining Japanese officials in office.

In a proclamation, Gen. MacArthur told th eKoreans the purpose of the occupation by the 7th Infantry Divisions units was "to enforce the instruments of surrender" and protect them in their personal and religious rights.

Until further orders, all public officers and persons engaged in essential services in Koreo were directed to perform their duties as usual, and from this country long dominated by the Japanese the general called for "active compliance".

Erase Last Semblance

The blow at the Japanese general staff will erase the last symbol of Japanese aggressiveness. It was the tactical organization of the entire military set-up.

Even as the order was issued, Japanese demobilization was already well under fay and trains loaded with hundreds of unarmed soldiers and naval personnel in the home island were on their way home.

The Korein proclamation pledged "your property rights will be respected". It was dated Friday and signed by Gen. MacArthur as Commander-in-Chief of United States Army forces in the Pacific, not as the Allied Supreme Commander.

New Time Table

The time table for the occupation of Japan disclosed that additional elements of one marine and nine army divisions would be in place by October 23.

The censorship for Japanese press and radio pledged there would be a minimum of restrictions on freedom of speech. It

UNION DELEGATES SEEK GOVT. HELP ON RECONVERSION

Labor Representatives Try to Lobby M.P.s' Of 200,000 Workers For Support

Ottawa, Sept. 10 (CP) — A parliamentary police sergeant said this morning he had been given orders to turn away members of the union caravan trying to lobby members of parliament for support in presenting their case on speedy and stable reconversion to the government.

The sergeant said he already had turned away several of the delegates who arrived here last night in a big automobile caravan that included both A.F.L. and C.I.O. representatives from as far west as Port Arthur and as far east as Amherst, N.S.

However, Percy Newman of Montreal, public relations officer of the Canadian Seaman's Union and in charge of publicity for the reconversion march on the capital, had no trouble finding his way to the parliamentary press gallery. He had not heard that the delegates were being turned away.

Have Long Memorandum.

He said that the steering committee of the delegation had drawn up a long memorandum which they would try to present to Prime Minister Mackenzie King and leaders of the opposition parties later today.

The memorandum, bearing a preface stating it was presented by representatives of "over 200,000 workers from approximately 20 unions" affiliated to both the Trades and Labor Congress and the Canadian Congress of Labor, was addressed to the "government of Canada."

It called upon the government to "meet its obligations" to those who contributed to the victory, and added:

"We are here to seek just treatment for the hundreds of thousands of displaced war workers for whom no adequate employment and income conditions have been provided despite general assurances from your government so to provide.

"Today, assembled in emergency session in Ottawa, coinciding with the first peace time session of parliament, the representatives of 200,000 workers reiterate the basic requests of labor as presented by the Trades and Labor Congress and the Canadian Congress of Labor and herewith urge your government to immediately enact appropriate legislation, emergency or otherwise, to guarantee the fruits of victory to veteran war worker, businessman and professional alike:—

King Not Approached.

Shortly before noon, the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he had not yet been approached by leaders of the delegation.

Notice was drawn to a series of telegrams last Friday in which the Prime Minister informed the union leaders that a meeting today—as requested by the unions—was out of the question but that a committee of the cabinet would be able to meet with a committee of the unions 'a't an

Jap Peace Envoy Denies Knowledge Of Sneak Attack Prior to Incident

Written for The Canadian Press
By GEORGE HAWKES
(Sydney Daily Mirror Correspondent)

Tokyo, Sept. 10 — (CP Cable)— Emphatically denying that he knew prior to Dec. 7, 1941, that Japan was going to make her sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, Saburo Kurusu, the envoy who discussed peace plans with Cordell Hull, U. S. State Secretary at the time, in Washington, said in a special interview today that it was not until a long coded message was received that he learned of the Japanese Empire's intentions.

He said he had an appointment with Mr. Hull, but that decoding of the message took so long, the attack on Pearl Harbor had taken place before the message was ready. Since his return to Japan, Hideki Tojo, warmaking Japanese Premier, has not had anything to do with him and is not even on speaking terms with him.

"The American charge that I'm a treacherous liar has been a dagger in my heart for four years," said Kurusu, who now is living in a humble home some distance from Yokohama. "Let no one think I like war, which has cost me my home, my son and my reputation."

"I swear that when I left Tokyo on my special mission to Washington, I knew nothing of any proposal to go to war in the Pacific; in fact, Tojo seemed more optimistic than I did about the prospects of peace, although I told him that our position in the Pacific was precarious and that a single spark could start war.

"I said the same thing to Mr. Roosevelt later.

"Cordell Hull was speaking with contempt and anger when I saw him, and he accused me of lying and treachery. I still believe that it was the intention of the Japanese government to have the note declaring war delivered before the attack, but it was delayed due to decoding.

"I believe Tojo waited until the last minute in the hope that it would be successful."

Kurusu's son, a captain in a fighter squadron shot down a Superfort over Honshu this year and his plane crashed in flames but he had baled out. Infuriated peasants, believing him an American pilot, hacked him to death. Kurusu has not yet recovered from the blow.

Youuke Matsuoko, the diplomat who was involved in the "peace talks" with Kurusu that fateful Dec. 7, is dying, a broken, disillusioned old man, from consumption in a country district far from his old home.

Yanks Broke Jap Code And Laid Clever Trap To Down Yamamoto

Washington, Sept. 10 — (AP)— United States Intelligence officers broke a Japanese code — and death resulted for Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, Commander in Chief of the Japanese Navy who once boasted he would dictate peace in the White House.

Yamamoto died in a flaming bomber over the Solomons in April, 1943, shot down by American airmen who knew in advance the course his aerial convoy was to follow, and ambushed him.

The enemy told of his death. What had not been disclosed was the adroit action of the U. S. Intelligence Section in reading details of the orders that destroyed the itinerary of the enemy leader, and the dashing attack as planned and daringly executed by American fliers.

The long unrevealed story of the trap cleverly laid for Yamamoto was written by J. Norman Lodge, veteran Associated Press man, then a correspondent in the South Pacific. His account related:

The enemy code was cracked in March or April, 1943. We knew the time Yamamoto would leave Truk, what time he would arrive at Buka, and leave Buka for Kahili or Ballale. Six Lightnings and some decoys were taken to the rendezvous.

Yamamoto arrived escorted by 20 Zeros. Six of our men volunteered to go down through the Zero escort and blast Yamamoto to oblivion. This was done.

The decoys, flying at about 18,000 feet, tried to lure the Zeros off, but it was no go. Their cargo was too precious.

But as the decoys occupied the attention of the escort, two American fliers peeled off at 24,000 feet and in a vertical dive went through their own decoy direct to two bombers, not knowing which one held Yamamoto.

One plane almost dashed into a collision, with the first bomber, gave it a long burst and pulled off just as the bomber exploded.

The Zeros were frantic. But as they took after the first attacker, his companion tore in, gave the second bomber a long burst, and it too exploded.

Then began one of the strangest hedge-hopping flights in history. The bomber-wreckers, flying almost on the water at about 10 feet, slipped, skidded, zoomed and did other acrobatics.

Neither was shot down, fortunately, but before they had not clear they had downed a couple of Zeros.

THREE BLUNDERS MADE BY JAPS SAYS HUN OFFICER

Naval Attache Warned Enemy to Invade Hawaii Instead of Attacking Pearl Harbor

Written for The Canadian Press
By GEORGE HAWKES
(Sydney Daily Mirror Correspondent)

Tokyo, Sept. 10 — (CP Cable)— Canada's imminent danger in December, 1941, was revealed today by Admiral Paul Wenniker, German naval attache to Japan. He disclosed in an interview that he had strongly warned Japan to invade Hawaii rather than attack Pearl Harbor, but that ultimately his plans were shelved.

The consequences to the west coast of North America, had Admiral Wenniker's suggestion been adopted, would have placed Canada in the most difficult position.

Wenniker also revealed that the Battle of the Coral Sea early in 1942, was a prelude to the invasion of Australia but that disaster to every ship in the Japanese convoy not only prevented the invasion, but caused the Japanese high command to lose confidence in the Japanese Navy.

Australia, Wenniker said, was to have been invaded at Townsville, a city of 30,000 population nearly 1,000 miles north of Brisbane, capital of Queensland.

Made Three Mistakes

Japan had made three great mistakes in the war, the German admiral said. They were Saipan, Leyte Gulf and Okinawa. He said the Japanese Navy had shown itself as stupid, hesitant, confused, helpless and slow-thinking. He repeatedly warned them of their errors — first of which was failure to invade Hawaii.

One hundred and fifty senior Japanese naval officers took three weeks to decide a question which any Allied destroyer captain could have initiated in three seconds, he said.

Singapore could have been a great naval base, Wenniker pointed out, but all the senior officers spent their time in the Raffles Hotel, glasses in hand and feet on tables. The Japanese were startled at the speed of the Allied advance, but it took the entire war to prove to them that operational speed was not luck but planning.

Cancelled Trip Three Times

Japan had never undertaken a decisive sea battle and three times had cancelled at the last minute orders for the entire fleet to proceed to sea and engage the United States navy. He said the latest German submarine plans were also pigeonholed.

Of 14 German undersea raiders plying the Pacific waters, 10 had been sunk, Wenniker disclosed.

He also revealed that the mines which sank ships on the Australian coast had been sown by the German raider Narvik, which after travelling half-way round the world went to Kobe where it was sunk at the harbor entrance.

NOT RECOGNIZED

Melbourne, Sept. 10 —(CP)— Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, Australian commander-in-chief, ?erp tralian Commander - in - Chief, bluntly told surrendering Japanese on the Island of Morotai yesterday "I don't recognize you as an honorable and gallant foe."

FIBREWOOD DISCS USED AS TOKENS FOR RATIONING

Unnecessary to Buy Full Value of a Coupon at One Time

Ottawa, Sept. 10 — (CP)—Blue fibrewood discs slightly larger than nickels — are being introduced to Canadians for the first time today when meat rationing returns to the Dominion after a lapse of more than a year.

To be used for making 'change' on coupons, eight of the tokens will be worth one of the brown "M" coupons in rationing book five which have been decided upon for use by ordinary consumers under the new rationing plan.

The tokens, similar to those already in use in the United States, will help conserve meat through making it unnecessary to buy the full value of a coupon at one time and by enabling families and persons living alone to make purchases appropriate to their needs.

In accepting tokens in change from a coupon after a meat purchase, no consumer may be given more than seven tokens at any one time and no tokens may be exchanged for meat ration coupons unless a sale of meat is involved. Tokens also may not be passed from one merchant to another.

The tokens will remain valid indefinitely and their value will be determined by the type of meat purchased. For instance, in group "A" which includes mostly pork, one token is worth two ounces, and in group "B", including beef, veal, lamb, mutton and pork, the value is three ounces. The token value ranges up to as much as six ounces in meat, group "E," which includes such meats as pork hocks and heart and tongue.

The token value for canned meat in sealed containers ranges from four tokens for a 14-ounce tin of sausage to one token for a three-ounce tin of meat sandwich spread.

DUKE LEAVES HOSPITAL

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 10 — (CP Cable)— The Duke of Gloucester, Australia's Governor-General, left hospital yesterday and returned to Admiralty House, his Sydney residence, after several weeks' treatment for an injured leg and an ulcer on the cornea of one eye. It was disclosed the Duke had to be treated with pinicilin.

TO FLY OVER LONDON

London, Sept. 10 —(CP)— Group Capt. Douglas Bader, famed R.A.F. legless fighter pilot, and 13 other survivors of "the few" credited with saving Britain in 1940 air battles will fly together over London next Saturday on the fifth anniversary of their epic struggle against the Nazi air force.

CORRESPONDENTS PROTEST

Tokyo, Sept. 10 —(AP)— Allied correspondents protested vigorously to the Public Relations Officer at Gen. MacArthur's headquarters yesterday that the Japanese Domei agency was scooping them on occupation news. They said it was unfair that they should be governed by censorship regulations while nobody checked up on what Domei was distributing.

VIDKUN QUISLING CONVICTED ON TREASON CHARGES

Death Sentence Will Be Executed by a Firing Squad of Ten Soldiers

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—The Oslo radio announced today that Vidkun Quisling had been convicted on charges of high treason and condemned to death.

The pronouncing of the sentence by the court that tried Quisling for co-operation with the Germans during the occupation of Norway was broadcast direct from the courtroom.

Under the new law making the death penalty in Norway, the sentence will be executed by a military firing squad composed of 10 soldiers firing 10 bullets.

Under the law Quisling can appeal to the Supreme Court which can commute the sentence but cannot reverse it.

The presiding judge at Quisling's trial, however, was Erik Solem who also is a Supreme Court Justice and thus one of the group which would pass on any appeal.

Unless Quisling is held for purpose of giving evidence in other War Crimes cases, it is likely the execution will be carried out within three weeks.

Former Defence Minister.

Quisling, 58, was a major in Norway's pre-war army and a former defence minister. The prosecution during the three weeks trial accused him of meeting Hitler, and Admiral Erich Raeder and other high German officials in December, 1939, and urging them to invade Norway.

He was charged with turning over Norwegian defence data to the Germans, and on the day of the invasion, April 9, 1940, it was charged he went to the government offices and personally telephoned certain garrisons and gave instructions not to resist the Nazis. It was through his agency that German troops were introduced into Norway's harbors in the holds of coal and freight ships, the prosecution asserted.

Undermined Norway.

Thus undermined Norway's defence quickly collapsed.

After Germany had taken possession of the country, Quisling co-operated with the Germans in a policy of deportation and oppression that resulted in the deaths of hundreds of Jews and patriots, it was charged.

Throughout, Quisling contended he co-operated with the Germans to avoid a worse fate for his country.

Damage From Atom Bomb Greater In Nagasaki Than in Hiroshima

By VERN HAUGLAND

Nagasaki, Japan, Sept. 10—(AP) —More than half of this city, comparable in size to Winnipeg, was wiped from the map with one fell explosion from an atomic bomb a month ago, the first Americans into the city of devastation found today.

Now it is clear what the War Department meant when it said that the second atomic bomb that hit Nagasaki made the first one dropped on Hiroshima obsolete, for the havoc wrought is far greater than that we saw at Hiroshima a few days ago.

In this city of 250,000 population, nothing remains of the municipal area three miles long and two miles wide save debris. Eighteen thousand buildings have vanished from the earth and everyone of the 32,000 that remain has been damaged.

Not even the protecting canyons and hills, offering far more shelter that Hiroshima's plain, could save buildings and people from a desolating blast or atomic energy.

Smoke Still Rising

It has been a month since that day of destruction, yet smoke still rises from some of the ruins and the smell of death is heavy over part of the city.

Nagasaki officials estimated 26,000 persons perished, 40,000 were wounded and claimed that an average of 10 to 20 victims still were dying daily. They expect the death toll to reach 40,000.

Now one can see how conservative were the first reconnaissance reports that one square mile had been destroyed.

A mile across the valley from where the bomb exploded wrecked buildings lean drunkenly, pushed out of line by the crushing force that mushroomed out.

Over the spot where the bomb exploded there is a patch of bare ground perhaps half a mile square which was swept almost entirely free of any object.

Contrary to some reports, the Japanese said the bomb did not hit the ground but exploded at an altitude of about 1,500 feet.

The bomb fell about 11 a.m. and exploded over the heart of the Nagasaki factory district, less than a mile from the giant Mutsubishi Steel Works.

Meat Rationing Again in Effect Across Canada

Coupons and Tokens Needed To Buy 1 1-3 Lbs. Weekly

Ottawa, Sept. 10 (CP)— Meat rationing returned to Canada today and in butcher shops across the nation ration coupons and tokens became necessary to purchase the allowances of approximately 1 1-3 pounds of actual meat Canadians can get each week under the plan.

The Prices Board made the announcement yesterday and disclosed at the same time that quotas on the slaughtering of cattle have been lifted temporarily and that the "freeze" order on all sales of canned meats has been rescinded. Canned meats will be included in the ration.

Last night K. W. Taylor, food stores co-ordinator for the Prices Board, told Canadians in a nation-wide CBC broadcast that meat rationing was being re-imposed not only to help feed starving Europe but so that Canada could rightfully expect her fair share of commodities supplied by other countries such as sugar, tea, and vegetable oils.

Still Threat of Death.

The fighting had stopped, he said, but there was still the threat of death in Europe from hunger, cold, sickness and misery. The foundations of permanent peace could not be built in such an atmosphere and in re-imposing meat rationing— which meant more meat for overseas—Canada was only doing her part to help the generally tight world food situation.

Effective today the Brown "M" coupons in ration book five became good for the purchase of meat and each has a value of from one to three pounds of meat per person per week, depending on the type of meat purchased.

New wrinkle in the rationing plan was introduction of blue fibre tokens each with a value of one-eighth of a coupon. They will be used in making "change" on ration coupons when a purchaser does not desire to buy meat to the whole value of a coupon at one time.

Tighter Than Last.

The new ration is "tighter" than the one Canadians experienced for more than a year before it was lifted in 1944 because of the shortage of shipping space to send meat abroad. Under the previous plan the consumer could use two coupons a week, each having various values depending on the type of meat purchased.

Processed and fancy meats were not included in the ration previously, but this time the only meat unrationed is beef, calf, pork and lamb brains and heads and beef, pork and lamb tails. Poultry, game and fish, canned or fresh, of course are ration-free.

Divided in Five Groups.

The new ration plan has divided meats and cuts into five groups for rationing purposes with values as follows:

GROUP "A" (One Pound a Coupon): Includes cured back pork sliced; back or side bacon, sliced and cooked pork and ham.

GROUP "B" (1 1-3 pounds a Coupon): Includes round beef steak; sirloin tip; veal cutlets; mutton front quarters; whole fresh ham; smoked pork centre slices;

GROUP "C" (Two pounds per coupon): Includes beef hindquarter shank; Sirloin steak; neck; veal loin; side pork fresh; dry salt lean backs, cured; jellied meats; liver, kidney, sweetbreads.

GROUP "D" (2 1-2 pounds a coupon); includes beef short ribs; fresh veal flank; pork sausage; mutton leg cut; fresh loin pork; smoke pork jowl.

GROUP "E" (Three pounds a coupon): Includes fresh pork jowl; cured pork hock; heart.

Prices Board Chairman Donald Gordon has given Canadian housewives assurance that they will always be able to get meat under the rationing plan, although perhaps not the kind they want.

Same as U.S.

The approximate ration of 1 1/3 pounds of actual meat per person per week is approximately the same as the ration in the United States when considered on a per capita basis.

To obtain starting stocks of meat under rationing, suppliers will be permitted to purchase meat, coupon free, for one week. During that week they will collect coupons for sales so that at its end they should have sufficient stock and coupon capital to carry on normal business, the Board said.

Dealers must make coupon payment for meat purchases at the time of payment in money, but not later than 10 days after delivery of the meat. C.O.D. shipments will be paid for in coupons at the time of delivery, and merchants must pay their supplier the exact number of coupons specified in the invoice. "Coupon credits" will not be allowed.

Meat quotas to industrial users will be issued coincident with the start of consumer rationing. They will be required to budget their purchases of meat to last over the period for which the quota has been allotted and meatless meals may have to be served to make quotas last. These will be in addition to the meatless days of Tuesday and Friday of each week already announced and made effective in public eating places.

Detailed Instructions

The Board said detailed instructions, together with the appropriate forms, have been issued to all retailers and all holders of slaughter permits.

Each permit holder now will be required to make weekly reports to the Board showing all animals killed. Quotas on the slaughter of hogs for the domestic market are in effect and with continual low marketings it may be necessary to further reduce them.

Quotas on the slaughter of cattle, however, are being temporarily suspended, in view of current heavy runs and to make full use of all slaughter facilities.

This is in line with previously-announced policy of establishing cattle quotas for local slaughterers which would permit them to kill as much as was required to meet the ration demand in each community.

Heretofore, it had been necessary for a local slaughterer to make application for any increase in his cattle quota if local demand for his product exceeded local supply.

The Board will reimpose cattle quotas either generally or in particular areas, if it appears that more cattle are being slaughtered than ration demand requires, or if otherwise needed for the effective operation of the ration system.

TORONTO FISHING PARTY GETS 38 BASS

According to some of the stories of the bass hauls from the Bay of Quinte hereabouts, this particular kind of fish is showing a marked appetite for fisherman's bait.

A Mr. Harding and party of six from Toronto who were weekending at Hill View Cottage, three miles east of Shannonville, owned by Norway Maracle, tried their luck in the bay and came home with 38 black beauties, some of which weighed between 4 and 4½ pounds.

Jack Hinchey, Don Osborne and party got themselves 19 bass on Sunday while other fishermen report good hauls.

Residents Asked to Decorate Homes, Leave Cars in Garage When H. & P. E. Regt. Parades

Sub-Committees to Welcome Famous Regiment in Belleville to be Formed at Special Meeting

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, general chairman of the District Reception Committee in charge of arrangements for welcoming the famous Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on their arrival here, is leaving no stones unturned to get his forces into action.

Weekend press despatches stated that the regiment with the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, and the Royal Canadian Regiment of London, have arrived in the United Kingdom en route to Canada.

Not to be caught unawares in view of the uncertainty of troop movements, Col. Donnan already has organization plans underway. A special meeting will be held either this afternoon or tonight at which the different sub-committees will be named and action taken immediately.

At the first meeting of the committee held on Friday, it was decided to request Mayor Frank Follwell to declared a Civic Holiday here.. Mayor Follwell who has been vacationing in New York is expected home today and the declaration will likely be forthcoming immediately.

Repats to March With Regt.

To provide a fitting welcome for the regiment which is reported to be 500 strong including 35 officers, a 25-piece bugle band is no small job. In addition, it is expected the regiment will be swelled by the large number of repatriated originals and those who serve with the unit, who will, it has been suggested, march along the route of parade with their old buddies. It has been estimated that the parade in general will number almost 800 of the men who made history for the district.

Asked to Co-Operate.

Representatives of othe communities of the district, and those of all city organizations who declared their whole-hearted co-operation would be available when the time came, are requested to go into action immediately on receipt of word from the general committee as to what is expected of them.

It is better, it is thought, to have plans completed and ready to be put into effect, rather than eleventh hour rush operations at which generally little if nothing is accomplished.

The day of arrival of the "Hasty Pees" will likely go down in civic history as one of the red-letter events of all time. Since the original personnel was recruited from the sister counties and districts bordering them, and many others who joined the colors later, have served with the regiment, it is felt that the city will be host to the largest influx of people since its incorporation. It has been estimated that upwards of 30,000 people will flock here to pay tribute to the gallant sons of the district.

This in turn presents a problem in itself. And one of the most important sub-problems will be traffic control. City residents can ease the work of a hard-pressed police force, by leaving their motors in the garage. Automobiles by the hundred will flock into the city and where to put them is a question—one that will tax the mental abilities of those of the committees in charge of this work. The Belleville City Police Force and the Ontario Provincial Police division here have promised 100 per co-operation. But this too can be helped greatly if residents comply with instructions which will be issued within a day or so.

Decorate Homes.

While nothing definite will be arrived at until today, it is expected that residents of the city, especially those along the route of parade, will decorate their houses with flags and bunting. Front Street merchants will be asked to do likewise. The route of parade is expected to be along Station Street from the point of detraining at the Canadian National Railways Station, to Front Street, to a point of general reception.

High ranking armed service officials and civic and municipal dignitaries from all parts of the district are expected to be here.

Something of a definite nature will be laid down at the special meeting being held today.

Campaign in Aid Of Blind Opens In This City

The Hastings County Advisory Board to The Canadian National Institute for the Blind opens this week its annual campaign for funds in Belleville. The Board is composed of public spirited citizens who are vitally interested in the welfare of the blind, and who are confident that the campaign this year will have the same unqualified success as that of last year. This campaign is under the direction of Mr. A. D. Archibald, Chairman of the Board; Mrs. Harry Rollins, First Vice Chairman, and Mr. C. L. Jewell, Campaign Treasurer.

The funds raised will be devoted to maintaining and extending the Institute's program of service to the blind and the prevention of blindness in this County. The Institute's home teachers, who are themselves blind, instruct blind persons in the reading of embossed type, handicrafts, typing, etc. Employable blind persons are trained and work is secured for them by Institute employment agents. Valuable concessions have been obtained for the blind, and these are administered by the Institute. In cases of need, supplementary assistance in cash or in kind is supplied, pending the establishment of responsibility. Under the Institute's prevention of blindness program, eye examinations, treatment, and glasses are provided for those who otherwise might lack these, thus helping to preserve the precious blessing of eye-sight. All of the 105 registered blind persons in Belleville, Trenton, and Hastings County are eligible for any of these services absolutely without charge.

In addition to these services to the civilian blind, the Institute has been entrusted by the Canadian Government with the rehabilitation training of our blinded service men. Many of these are already undergoing training in class-rooms at Head Office in Toronto. The Institute has the personnel and equipment for this specialized training.

During the next two weeks the citizens of Belleville will have an opportunity of sharing in this important humanitarian work of bringing a little sunshine into darkened lives. They are asked to express their gratitude for good eye-sight by making a contribution in support of Institute services.

Garden Owner Chases Woman Thief From Corn Patch

Early morning pedestrians on Coleman Street Sunday morning might have been surprised to see a man chasing a lady through backyards, across lots, and finally losing her when he came to unfamiliar scenery.

There was nothing romantic about the affair although it was after 2 a.m.

The gentleman in question had been awakened from his sleep by strange noises and hurriedly throwing on shirt and trousers had investigated the disturbance. He discovered a woman nonchalantly picking the choicest ears from the corn patch in his garden while a man, an apparent accomplice, stood nearby with a bicycle acting as lookout and hurried transportation.

The woman, perceiving the owner's approach, dropped the basket and fled through backyards with the owner in hot pursuit. In the meantime the gent with the bike made his getaway. The chase continued down Coleman Street, to Earl Street, and the fugitive finally disappeared somewhere along Gordon Street.

"Shucks," stated the owner, "if this lady wants the corn, and she will come back tomorrow morning at the same time, I shall be waiting for her with a large basket of choice ears. But I don't like the idea of sneak-thievery.

THREE SHIPLOADS VETERANS REACH THEIR HOMELAND

More Than 18,000 Dock at Quebec and Halifax to Receive Royal Welcome

(By The Canadian Press)

With the arrival at Quebec early today of the troopship Cameronia, carrying 3,568 Canadian servicemen, the total number of troops returning to Canada over the weekend came to more than 18,000.

Three shiploads of homeward-bound veterans reached Canadian ports Sunday: the Empress of Scotland docked at Quebec with 4,066 army and airforce personnel, while at Halifax the Duchess of Bedford, with 2,685, was followed six hours later by the liner Nieuw-Amsterdam, with 7,786.

At both ports the ships were greeted in the traditionally noisy manner. From the Plains of Abraham atop Quebec's lofty Cape Diamond, an artillery battery fired a thundering salute as ships in the harbor blew their whistles and small vessels escorted the Empress into her berth. At Halifax, gay, lilting music blared forth from loudspeakers on the motor vessel General Drury. The Nieuw-Amsterdam was given a rousing welcome by two RCAF aircraft which "buzzed" the ship, darting within a few feet of her bow one minute and then roaring high into the sky the next.

On arrival was Betty Munro, sister of Ross Munro, ace Canadian press writer. Miss Munro spent 11 months in England as correspondent for a chain of Ontario newspapers published by Roy Thomson.

The majority of the army officers and men returning to Canada had been overseas from four to five years either in the Mediterranean theatre or northwest Europe or both. RCAF members had varying lengths of service.

Troopships due shortly include the Scythia, with 1,989 aboard, due Sept. 15 at Quebec, and the Lady Nelson, with 520, due at Halifax Sept. 16. Four minesweepers will arrive at Halifax, on an undisclosed date, with 12 officers and 80 other ranks. Three baby flattops, each with 10 officers and 47 other ranks, are due at Montreal: Empire McKendrick, Sept. 12; Empire McDermott and Empire McAndrew, dates undisclosed.

Fishing Story Did'nt Stick

To paraphrase a well-known statement, "You can fool some of the wives some of the time, but you can't fool all the wives all the time".

That was realized a few days ago by two gentlemen of the city who took the day off to do a little fishing in well-known haunts of the district.

The two gentlemen in question, a butcher and a taxi-driver fished all day with nary a nibble. Digusted they came home with not a scale in the bags.

Now one of the gentlemen who had boasted of his fishing prowess to the better half thought of a scheme by which he would fool the missus.

Next morning, he smiled cheerfully while relating the day's sport.

"That was a beauty I caught. Did you see it, dear?" he smiled sweetly.

There was an ominous look on the better half's face.

"Oh yeah", she said, or the equivalent. "And since when have they been installing quick-freeze plants at the bottom of the Moira River. That fish you 'caught' was frozen solid. The next time you catch one of that kind let him lie in the sun on the bank and thaw out before you bring him home. Besides I went to the frigidaire box this morning and noticed one of my fish missing".

Police on Lookout For 3 Escaped POW

Royal Canadian Mounted Police and other police officials have been asked to be on the lookout for three escaped prisoners of war who made their getaway from farms where they had been working.

One is Joseph Siseaczet, 35, who escaped from the farm of D. C. Kendrick, at City View, Ont. He is five foot, six inches in height, blue eyes prominent nose and chin with light brown hair.

The other two are Seaman George H. Gross, of the German Merchant Navy and Carle Linke, army private, who are believed to have made their getaway on bicycles. Gross is of medium height and is dressed in blue trousers, checked shirt and maroon windbreaker. He was last seen on a bike on the morning of Apg. 31. Linke weighs about 160 pounds, has prominent nose and chin and is tall, thin and stooped. He speaks English, French and German. He is known to have had a bicycle when he called for Gross. The pair is thought headed for the United States border. Persons having information should contact the RCMP at Belleville.

Obituary

LATE REV. J. D. P. KNOX
(Contributed)

Friends from far and near assembled at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Saturday afternoon to pay their last tributes of respect to the memory of Rev. John D. P. Knox who had labored faithfully and long during the past half-century in the promotion of the work and welfare of the people, among whom he served in the Christian ministry.

The service was in charge of Rev. A. Poulter of Madoc and he was assisted by Rev. T. F. Townsend, of Stirling. Rev. Enos Farnsworth of Belleville, also a veteran in the work of the Church, and for many years a close personal friend of the departed clergyman, delivered the sermon and message for the occasion. He chose as the basis for his discourse several verses from the 7th chapter of Revelations but more especially the passage which says. "These are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Mr. Farnsworth referred to the many years of earnest, faithful and genuinely successful work that had been carried out on the many charges throughout the Bay of Quinte Conference by Mr. Knox since he was ordained into the ministry away back in 1895. He was then a young man but he had the courage of his convictions and never wavered in his support of what he considered the right. Even after he retired from the active work of the ministry, he still carried out duties where he felt he could still be of service. He made his home in Belleville after retirement and he became a familiar and welcome visitor to the General Hospital where he called almost daily and looked up scores and scores of patients, who were cheered by his kindly presence and friendly greetings.

Three of the grand old hymns of the church were sung during the service — "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Abide with Me."

William E. Colclough, of Belleville, an intimate friend of Mr. Knox, sang with fine expression the solo, "The Gentle Shepherd."

Miss Sarah Knox the last surviving member of the immediate family of Mr. Knox, was present at the service and though she has now reached the remarkable age of ninety-three years, she is still in full possession of her faculties and was able to hear the comforting words of Mr. Farnsworth's message.

Four nieces were also present at the funeral. They were the daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Alkenbrack of Huntingdon township, later of Stirling village. Mrs. Alkenbrack was an older sister of Mr. Knox. The four nieces were Ada, now of Trenton, Ella of River Valley, and Sarah and Bertha of Stirling.

Interment took place at Stirling cemetery.

The pallbearers were: Wm. E. Colclough, T. Colclough, John G. Shaw, Jas. N. Hudgins, G. W. Tucker and J. O. Herity.

Prior to removal of the body to Stirling, a brief service was held at the Martin Funeral Home at Belleville. The service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Dilts, pastor of Holloway Street United Church.

LATE CALVIN L. KELLETT

Kellett, 120 Chatham Street, took place on Saturday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, and was under the auspices of the Army and Navy Veterans, Branch No. 201. The following veterans acted as bearers: N.C. Reid, J. Maguire, L. Murphy, A. E. Randle, F. Turner and F. Symons.

The flower bearers were: A. R. Galbraith, F. Post, W. J. Holland, A. J. Randle, A. Dunnett and F. Clayton, all of whom are veterans.

Meanwhile, the joint chairmen of a 10-man steering committee interviewed Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, clerk of the house, as to the possibilities of obtaining a committee room in which the delegates could meet members of the house.

A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor:

"Things right now are in a state of flux. I have been conferring with some of the delegation but have nothing to say. My conferences are still going on."

Percy Bengough of the Trades and Labor Congress: "I have had no connection with the delegation."

"1. Jobs to all who need or wish to work.

"2. Incomes commensurate with our proven abilities to enhance and continue to extend our standard of living.

"The fulfillment of these two main responsibilities of government spell security."

Isaac M. Small, Boulter, Drowns In York River

Bancroft, Sept. 10—Mr. Isaac M. Small, 80-year-old sportsman, resident of Boulter was drowned in the York River near his home Sunday afternoon while fishing from his canoe. His son Robert Small and his wife were going berry picking about 1.30 and called to Mr. Small to go with them but the elderly gentleman was having good luck and declined the offer. The berry pickers returned at five and noticed Mr. Small still fishing but lower down the river near the eddy. A half hour later, George Scott, a neighbor came to the Small home reported seeing an over-turned beached canoe. The two sons, Robert and David proceeded to the spot in another boat finding the fish their father had been catching floating about as well as his coat. Soon they located the body at the bottom in three feet of water. The boys tried to revive their father by artificial respiration without avail. Coroner Dr. O. W. Anderson and P.C. Stanley Palmateer were called to the scene. There will be no inquest.

He leaves to mourn in his immediate family, his wife, three daughters and six sons.

FLIGHT OF BAT INSPIRES IDEA TO HELP BLIND

Ottawa Inventor's Machine Would Warn Sightless of Objects in Their Paths

Ottawa (CP) — In 1941 George Lefleur read an article on how bats get about and started work on an invention which, if it can be perfected, will tell blind persons of anything in their path up to 15 feet ahead.

"The machine will likely be like a 'walkie-talkie' and must not weigh more than 10 pounds," Lefleur said. It would be carried on the operator's back like a knapsack with a two-inch loud speaker on the shoulder.

Although enthusiastic about the project which he hopes may be completed by Spring, he warned against undue optimism about its effects in order to avoid disappointment.

"I believe it would be as well for the blind to wait until the machine is a reality and not anticipate it in any way—then they will not expect more than the machine can give them," he said.

Rev. W. V. Doran, then parish priest of Ottawa's Canadian Martyrs' Church, showed him the article on bats and suggested he do something along "bat" lines for the blind.

Lefleur is the inventor of the machine for the blind which identies the denomination of bank notes.

With the co-operation of engineers and other experts an experimental laboratory model of the machine has been set up. However, it is not battery operate dnor is it small enough to be carried by a blind person.

"Now my experiments have advanced past the scale where an individual can handle them," the inventor said. "The National Research Council is participating in further experiments with it. All efforts are being pooled and all those working on the machine have shared the benefit of their experience. Among them is Sir Ian Fraser, head of St. Dunstan's Institution for the Blind in England."

ATS Aid Neurotics Back to Normality

London (CP) — Men who became afraid of women during long periods as prisoners of war are being restrained to normality by Auxiliary Territorial Service girls in a re-settlement camp in Northern Ireland.

Officials said it had been found that the prisoners, during years in which they had only men for companions, developed an attitude not merely of shyness but of actual fear towards women.

The girls, 95 in all, are volunteers. In a restaurant where the men eat, small tables are laid out with white cloths and knives and forks to give the impression of home life and the "woman's touch."

The girls serve the meals and in their daily contacts with the men are expected to use their feminine intuition to make fear give place to friendliness. They are partners for the ex-prisoners at dances and this has been found to be one of the best means of bringing the men back to normality.

Appetite 'Drugs' for Liberated

Flying doctors are to take appetite-producing drugs to thousands of Allied prisoners and internees in Burma, Malaya, French Indo-China, Siam, Java, Sumatra, and Hong Kong. After their long captivity many of the prisoners are suffering from malnutrition, and the digestions of others have been greatly impaired by bad feeding. To begin with they will have to be bottle-fed with mashed foods like babies.

Large supplies of the "appetite" drug will be carried by the medical rescue teams who will parachute into prison camps. More than 30 teams of doctors and orderlies will be dropped; another 20 are standing by to go by sea. For urgent and special cases there are psychiatrists and surgical squads ready to be dropped by parachute wherever they are needed.

The teams consist of surgeons, anaesthetists, operating theatre assistants and orderlies, and sufficient equipment for each team to operate on 50 cases. More than 225,500 lbs of medical stores, including plasma-giving sets, will be parachuted in the first instalment—each medical pack weighs 140 lbs and is sufficient for treating over 500 persons for seven days. Large stocks of mepacrine and quinine have also been prepared, for it was known that Japanese malaria precautions, even when they existed, were inadequate.

Special hospitals and hospital ships are also in readiness. Once the hospitals are established in liberated areas Red Cross and welfare workers with tons of such comforts as books, gramaphones and sweets will augment the medical and nursing staffs.

This operation has no precedent. Its organizers had nothing on which to base their plans but pre-war health reports from the countries concerned, and the stories of escaped prisoners. Working on the assumption that the rescue teams will find the worst possible conditions they have prepared for all emergencies.

What Name for the War?

What's to be the name in history of the war just ended is bound to be discussed sooner or later or often. So far it has been mentioned as "Second World War" or casually as "this war" in contrast to the "First World War." Already the suggestion has been made that it might be called the "Six Years' War," because it began on September 1st, 1939, and ended at Tokyo with the surrender signing of the last surviving member of the Axis, on September 1st., 1945. The exactness of the length of the second war just happens to be six years. It would have been still the same war with the same significance if it had gone on for a year or less beyond that time. Or in other words, the name Six Year's War expresses nothing of the war's meaning to humanity. Of course history has its Seven Years' War, Thirty Years' War and Hundred Years' War, but for the people of this age, the United Nations, the number of years will hardly suffice to act as the name for the struggle.

Montreal Gazette points out that the war is not confined within so brief a period. "It was the second, fiercer act of continuing German aggression in Europe that really began on August 4th., 1914, when the Imperial German Army invaded Belgium." The war included the fatal step of Japan's long aggression which began away back in 1894.

History will find a name for it, fitting probably to the significance to mankind of the principles of freedom enunciated so clearly in this war against tyranny and aggression. The present day is no doubt too close for the judgment to set a name that will stand the test of the ages. Other wars did not have the significance of this late struggle to all mankind. Older wars covered a section of mankind though they mark in the progress of the periods of peace between wars stepping-stones down to the very state of the world today. It seems that some one in the perhaps not too near future will hit upon a name that will be accepted for all time. Meanwhile the name "World War II" or "Second World War" may pass currency until and if a more fitting name is chosen some time in the coming years.

In the late war there emerged so strong an Allied attitude on the criminality of enemy leaders who were associated with events leading up to and taking place within the war that there are to be war criminal trials, which will not only deal with atrocities against humanity but will deal with the great problems of responsibility of enemy leaders for their part in causing war and in its conduct. In the past there were wars of freedom which helped the world forward to democracy and liberty but no war with so deeply stressed an opinion upon the causes of war and on the effort to end war forever by concerted action and preparedness.

Today as never before mankind feels the need of peace for the good of all and the absolute urgency of its preservation for the sake of saving humanity from becoming destroyed by anyone or any group who would make war. This yearning and burning question of security against war may have something to do with the naming of the struggle.

The spirit of the enemy in the late struggle was unlike anything in the wars in the history books. The enemy were outlaws and rebels against the moral law. Hitlerism produced a terrible crop of gangsters and was an organized conspiracy under a government bludgeon to rob the world. The only other struggle of that kind was its faint shadow by the Germans in the First World War. But Hitlerism outdarkened every dark age and was the very principle of evil. So evil was his object that gangsters naturally gravitated to Berlin and mankind can still rightly wonder how so many evil-minded men could have been found to make up the regime under Adolf Hitler. Claims of Germany were but masked hold-ups and after a while Germany threw off the mask and appeared in all her infernal horror. The reported death of Hitler and the certain end of so many others in their fight-to-death to avoid capture was the natural retribution to such men. Other leaders taken prisoner are to face trial.

So in this sense this last war was more than a mere war such as those of history. It was the struggle of right and justice against inhuman brutes who invoked the powers of darkness and who could thrive only in a world of terror, with this fly in the ointment, that the judgment of humanity was certain to descend upon the enemy and their works.

This fight of humanity against the destroyers and the spiritual aspect of the struggle may give a name to this conflict so lately closed.

Radio in Schools

National school broadcasts by the CBC for the year 1945-46 will be in four courses, "Growth of Canadian Cities" in nine programs, "Message for Tomorrow" in five programs by noted Canadians, four student forums in "Citizens-to-be" and "Further Adventures in Canadian Painting," lives of seven well-known Canadian painters being dramatized. There will also be the weekly news review for schools and sports college.

Ontario Department of Education will present nine series of broadcasts including presentation of a full-length Shakespeare play and there will also be presented CBS "March of Science," Tales from Near and Far" and students' symphony concerts.

Radio is taking its place in education and departments of education are not slow in making use of the opportunities it offers.

War Ruins on This Continent

(Chicago Daily News)

Believe it or not, we've got ruins, too. All God's chillun got ruins! It was truly a world war.

Our ruins are not photogenic. So we see few pictures of them. Worn-out railroad engines and cars, senile blast furnaces and decrepit machines in factories and on farms do not register vividly on photographic film—not until they are retired to the junk pile, anyhow.

Exhausted coal seams, ripped-out ore beds and dried-up oil wells and tired fields do not make graphic pictures—but we've got 'em, and how!

SERVE-SELF

Earth is a serve-self sort of place
Where Life, the host, displays
Its offerings for the human race,
And hearts and minds are trays.
Man moves along and he may choose
What he will take and what refuse.

The counter shows the various wares
Of bitter and of sweet;
Of patience for man's daily cares,
Of courage for defeat.
And wisdom for his span of years
And faith for sorrow and its tears.

Life grants to all the right to make
Whatever choice they will,
Honor is there for them to take,
Courage and strength and skill.
And only Time, at last, will tell
Whether or not they've chosen well.

Insuring Students Against Accidents

(From Newsweek Magazine, New York)

During the 1945-46 school year approximately 16,000 Wisconsin pupils from kindergarten through high school will break their arms and legs, bash noses, chip teeth, or otherwise maim themselves. Ordinarily in repairing this havoc, parents' pocketbooks take a beating, but this year assistance is in sight.

The Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association, which since 1930 has been insuring high-school students against minor mayhem on the playing field, will broaden its program to include mishaps of all kinds on school property from kindergarten on. Athletic injuries to pupils in grades seven through twelve, however, will still be covered by the 1930 program. And, to the confusion of all actuaries, the rate per pupil will be a mere 10 cents annually.

The WIAA predicts success for its low-premium project chiefly because it will insure schools as units and enlist principals as agents in reporting injuries and handling payments. California, the onl yother state offering overall pupil insurance charges 50c for comparable, individual insurance.

Wisconsin's fifteen-year-old athletic insurance program, financed by annual premium of $1 (only 50 cents is football is eschewer), now covers fourteen sports. In 87 per cent of settlements to date medical fees have not exceeded benefits paid. Of Wisconsin's 464 high schools 425 are currenatly enrolled and the plan has spread to 27 other states.

In the new, complete coverage program, benefits will be:

Loss of sight one eye)	$200
Fractured pelvis	100
Leg fracture, above knee	75
Cerebral hemorrhage	75
Fractured skull	50
Leg fracture, below knee	45
Fractured collarbone	30
Loss of tooth	20
Broken nose	15

Besides contributing to medical costs, the new program will anticipate a period of stepped-up physical education and (it is hooed) induce timid parents to allow their children to go in for healthful sports.

Avowedly experimental, the plan will be self-sustaining, according to the WIAA, if 400,000 of the state's eligible school children can be ultimately enrolled. An athletic-insurance surplus of $33,000 will be used to make up an anticipated deficit the first year, in which enrollment will probably not exceed 75,000.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

WHY EVERYBODY IS DOWN IN THE MOUTH

More dentists per thousand population in the United States than in any other country in the world. Scale of living higher in the United States of America than in any other country. More soap (dentifrice) and toothbrushes in the U.S.A. per thousand population than anywhere else in the world. Presumably the people who buy the merchandise brush their teeth more carefully and more frequently than do people elsewhere. And finally we North Americans (inhabitants of the entire continent) or 99.9 per cent of us at least have poorer teeth than the civilized inhabitants of any other continent.

The dentists have a word for it, pyorrhea. Pyorrhea alveolaris is chronic suppurative (pus-forming) inflammation of the paradontium, that is, the alveolar process of the jaw bone, the lining of tooth sockets and the gum. Other names for it are chronic atrophic alveolitis (long-enduring inflammation of tooth socket or sockets with wasting and shrinking of the structures involved), Riggs's disease.

Patients frequently complain that Dentist A diagnoses pyorrhea and Dentist B finds no sign of pyorrhea. Such hair-splitting merely goes to show that pyorrhea (to use the most familiar name), like arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and chronic arthritis (rheumatism), is not a disease with a definite onset but a condition one may regard as degeneration which begins insidiously and progresses gradually, so that no dentist or physician can give more than his individual opinion that an individual hasn't the trouble today but has it next week.

Degeneration in this sense means deterioration in which function is impaired or lost and the living tissue cells are replaced with inert fibrous material, scar tissue. The retrogressive process is commonly known as atrophy, which means wasting. In fact dentists apply the term atrophic gingivitis (gingival), pronounced jinjival, (means pertaining to the gums) to chronic recession of the gum tissue. Some dentists, such as Louis I. Grossman, D.D.S., D.M.D., in a chapter on mouth disease in Cyclopedia of Medicine, Surgery and the Specialties, Vol. 10, '43, even attribute this extreme thinness and recession of the gums to "overbrushing of the teeth." Now that, I submit indicates how sadly muddled and confused most dentists and physicians are about pyorrhea or whatever you prefer to call the degeneration process in jaws, gums, teeth.

I hope no reader will infer that I think I know more about the question than run-of-the-mill doctors and dentists do.

All I know about pyorrhea is what I read in the letters I get from patients, doctors and dentists and in the medical and dental magazines and books and, of course, what I dream up out of thin air.

So I hope dentists, physicians and people will take what I say in these talks about pyorrhea as nothing more than one man's views, and accept, reject or try to refute them, as you please. At any rate it can do you no harm to read these little squibbs when there is nothing better within convenient reach.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is the Pope's palace called the Vatican?

The Vatican received its name from an older name of the site on which it stands.

In ancient times a low, level region on the right or western bank of the Tiber was known as "Ager Vaticanus," meaning "Vatican Field."

This name is believed to be derived from "Vaticum," the name of an Etruscan settlement there that had vanished centuries before the earliest authentic history of Rome began.

The origin and meaning of "Vaticum" is not known for certain.

In Latin "vates" means "prophet," and "vaticinatio" means "prophecy." Some authorities suppose that Vaticum, which was outside the limits of ancient Rome, was so called because a legendary priestly king revealed oracles to his peoples there.

In process of time "Vatican" came to be attached specifically to a near-by eminence rather than to the low land near the river.

The Popes acquired possession of large parts of Vatican Hill by purchase during the Middle Ages. A papal residence was built on the site, near the ancient Basilica of St. Peter, already in the time of Symachus, who was Pope from 498 to 514 A.D.

The residence of the pontiff is the largest palace in the world. It is not the work of any one architect, but a great pile of a thousand rooms that it took many centuries to build.

The State of Vatican City ("Stato della Citta del Vaticano" in Italian), which was created in 1929, has an area of about 109 acres, and comprises, not only the Vatican proper, but also St. Peter's, the largest church in the world, and many other buildings.

Pretty Partisans Escorted Canucks Around the Town

Tireless Volunteer Guides in Platform Soles Outwalk Booted Canadian Sightseers

Paris—(CP)—It was to be a walking-shopping tour of Paris and the two Canadian airmen grinned at the Canada Corner leave centre. The mademoiselles obviously knew Paris but apparently didn't know much about marching, for they wore gay "wedgies" with platform soles—but the tour started on schedule.

Several hours and 10 miles later the quartet returned to Canada Corner and two exhausted airmen slumped into chairs, while the chipper French girls arranged to take two soldiers on another tour.

"The Parisians are very proud of their city and these girls enjoy showing the lads the sights, but I don't know how they keep going," said supervisor Frank J. Flanagan, (75A London St.,) Toronto, who solves the leave problems for nearly 1,000 Canadians each week, with the help of 294 volunteer assistants from Paris families.

Information desk statistics for a month indicate the work involved in helping airmen and soldiers spend a profitable week's leave; more than 11,000 enquiries were received, 8,021 Canadians toured Paris by bus, 1,700 visited Versailles and 3,000 boarded the small "Hospitality Jane" to see Paris from the Seine.

Super Escort Service

An example of the enquiries received at the information desk was the matter-of-fact request from Sgt. Robert Martin, (1596 Clive Drive), Victoria on leave from the Essex Scottish at Amsterdam:

"I see by the Maple Leaf (Canadian Army Newspaper) one of the Canadians had tea with a countess—how about my meeting a princess or something?"

Within two minutes he was introduced to Baroness de Seroux and the two were discussing a tea engagement. The Baroness represents Canada Corner at a hotel where Canadian officers are billeted while on leave.

"The escort service," supervisor Flanagan said, "started with half a dozen volunteers to introduce the men to French families and then to assist them to shop for souvenirs."

Now the service has a unique filing system with a string of code letters after the name of each feminine guide. They tell clerk the color of her hair, her preference in sports and music, whether she speaks English, height, ability to dance and other information which might be needed by a potential companion.

"I think the Canadians are half way between the English and the Americans—all the fun of the Americans and the good education of the English," commented Mme. Beatrice Piorson, pretty brunette graduate of the guides who now arranges such introductions.

Language Is a Problem To Explorers

The Part of East Africa where Stanley started his safari is called Tanganyika Territory. Today it is one of the most enterprising colonies, excelling in climate, fertility, and an industrious and interesting population. It is divided into many small kingdoms and already fairly well known at the time when Stanley traveled. Roads criss-crossed the whole region, and there were frequent Arabian settlements. But what does "known" mean? The Arabian traders who had traveled in the country mentioned a town, Tabora, and the farthest point, Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika. But that was about all. The traveler had to find out himself how to ford a river, or where detours had to be made; in short, had to find his own way. The climate was supposed to be healthy. Stanley hoped to find guides, but that presented a new problem: languages.

Stanley was told that Swahili was understood all over the country, but that was true only at the coast. In the hinterland every tribe had its own language, and Swahili was as foreign as English. Stanley never tired of studying languages; constantly he asked his men, "What is this?" "What is that?" and jotted down their answers. But when he used the words he had learned, no one knew what he meant. "What is this?" he asked and tapped on his chair. "Chapa," answered the boy. But the next day, when proudly he ordered his chapa, the boy just stared at him. Chapa means tapping, as he found out much later. He got a nice word for moon; it turned out to be index finger. And when he ordered someone to make a fire, he ordered "to work miracles." Because when he had struck one of his precious matches and asked, "What is this?" the boys (who had never seen a match struck) had yelled, "Ajabu! jabu!" But ajabu means "to work miracles." Stanley had a hard time learning Bantu; Swahili was bad enough but Bantu was far worse. Some had told him that African languages were simple, but Stanley found by experience that those languages had most intricate forms and devilish grammar.

As the commander of an expedition, Stanley couldn't rely on the services of an interpreter alone; he had to give orders directly, otherwise obedience would fail. Even for an experienced traveler it is a thrill to lead a big caravan. Stanley had one hundred and ninety men under his command; that means he had to master one hundred and ninety different temperaments.

The relations between master and servant became harmonious only after severe tests. Not before every single one of the hired men had found out for himself that the young white man knew what he was after, would he willingly submit to his orders. One tried to argue about the weight of his load; others pretended to be afraid of inland tribes; . . in short, they proffered all kinds of excuses for not obeying. All this had to be overcome, sometimes with severity, sometimes with long speeches, sometimes with a joke. But it is difficult to be ironic if one just stammers a language; nor will a joke sound very pointed if grammar fails.

It might be a good idea to acquaint the reader with a few Bantu words. Most of the countries begin with a U and names of tribes with Wa or Ba. These are prefixes. Bantu is composed of many prefixes. U means Land, Wa means People, Jjiji is simply Jijiland, the people there are Wajiji, M is one man, therefore a native of Ujiji is called a M'jiji, their language, finally, is the Kijiji, Ki meaning language. If from now on the form Kiswahile should be used, all will know that this means the talk of the Waswahilis. But this is enough Bantu for our needs.—From "Stanley's Africa," by Rafaello Busoni. Gala Gowns Of Peace Lead In Fall Fashions

New York (CP) — The most brilliant winter season since the war is tuning up in America's metropolitan centres, as civilians and returning service men step out in their best bib and tucker to celebrate peace.

After more than three years of sober wartime garb, the lid is off, and glittering formal clothes lead the fall style parade.

Designers, anticipating a gala winter, have fall collections already in the stores from which women may choose glitter and glamor to their heart's content.

More evening and cocktail gowns are on hand than at any time since the war, sequins and richly bejewelled trimmings are all over the place, fur coats and accessories are lavish and dazzling.

Since yardage restrictions are still in effect, the silhouette is still slim and streamlined for the most part, but the trimming is terrific. Designers have proved that it's possible to make a breath-taking formal gown from a mere scrap of fabric, provided it's cut and draped in the right places, and loaded with glitter.

Returning service women who have been saving up a clothes splurge ever since they put on uniforms, will increase the demand for dress-up fashions.

Mrs. America is dressing up, and she's ready to go to town.

Magic that turns METALS into liquids ..

and gives you better paints

The most durable surface finishes in use today are made from lead, iron, zinc, copper and aluminum. In Glidden plants located all over this continent, we take these metals and turn them into liquids which can be applied with a brush.

Glidden white lead, for instance, as perfected by Glidden research, is famous throughout the paint industry for its uniform quality, whiteness and covering ability. Glidden zinc white is used in many of our quality paints. Glidden aluminum paints are widely used in the home and in industrial plants.

From copper, we produce vast quantities of cuprous oxide for use in anti-fouling paints for ship bottoms. From cadmium we make a full line of cadmium colors covering a wide range of reds, maroons and yellows.

Our research in metals has led to the development of many other metal products such as Glidden red lead and antimonial lead for storage batteries, and iron powder and copper powder used in making intricate gears and parts.

Because of intensive research with metals and all other paint ingredients, Glidden protective coatings are durable and satisfactory in every way. When you need paint, varnish, enamel or other finishes, look for the name "Glidden".

The Kidneys Filter the Blood

Any poisonous waste materials, which the liver has failed to eliminate from the digested food before it is taken up by the blood stream, must be looked after by the kidneys if the blood is to be rid of dangerous poisions.

When the kidneys fail there comes a poisoning of the system with headaches, tired feelings, loss of sleep and such painful ailments as backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago and other ills.

The use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills is suggested because they help in three ways to get rid of this condition.

(1) By arousing the action of the liver which prevents certain poisons from getting into the blood stream.
(2) By stimulating the activity of the kidneys in their work of filtering poisons from the blood.
(3) By ensuring activity of the bowels in eliminating the poisonous waste materials from the body.

Surely this must be a thorough system of protecting the body against the poisons which result from the digestion of food. Such treatment is required by almost everybody at one time or another.

Using Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills once or twice a week, will help to keep you regular and well and free from unnecessary pains and discomforts. 35 cts., a box.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Myers Honored By Tabernacle U. C. Congregation; Good Companions Conduct Service

Rev. Dr. A. J. Wm. Myers who has been in charge of the Tabernacle United Church for the past two years, and Mrs. Myers, were honored by the congregation on Sunday morning. The Good Companions Club took charge of the service, President Morley Hancock conducting while Mr. George Wright read a tribute to the minister and Mrs. Myers. Mr. Wright said:

"We the Good Companions feel very deeply toward Dr. and Mrs. Myers, as, I am sure do also all the groups and individuals in the church who have worked with them and known them intimately.

"To many of us in the Tabernacle, these gracious people have unfolded a new meaning to life and a new and vital interpretation to religion.

"When they first came to us, it was natural that we might have a divided opinion as to how successful their work might be, since we had been accustomed to younger ministers lately. And it was natural that some might have strong attachment to the pastor on active service.

"But before many weeks had passed their quiet, kindly and courteous ways had established with the people of the congregation bonds of beautiful friendship.

Travel and Culture.

"We knew from the beginning that Dr. and Mrs. Myers were what are called highly educated people who had travelled in many countries. They were people who were accustomed to university cities. But we also found from the beginning that in Dr. and Mrs. Myers this travel and culture had deepened in them the qualities of the true Christian—a great love for God's universe and for their fellow-men, and these they showed in innumerable little ways.

"Many a stranger to our city received his first and warmest welcome from Dr. Myers, who extolled the personal touch, which with him extended to the things of nature. Never a week goes by but we hear afresh of Christian acts of chivalry.

"Early he found that the Tabernacle, far from being a flourishing institution, was really at the crossroads. Grave thoughts were held by many concerning the possible closing of the church, a tragic ending for this pioneer church of the Bay of Quinte.

Study of Tabernacle's Problems.

"Dr. Myers forthwith, set himself the task of compiling a detailed historical sketch of the Tabernacle Church from its inception. He then called together people to form the organizations such as the Men's Club and the Good Companions. To these he spoke of the great shame of surrendering even one church in defeat, in the midst of a social order which needed it as no order ever did before. Knowing himself to be but an interim minister, nevertheless he impressed upon these people the fact of their duty toward their pastor on active service,—that the church must be kept alive for his return, and that great things must be done in the Tabernacle and done right quickly for the whole community's sake.

"Dr. Myers directed a thorough investigation into the physical condition of the Tabernacle building and found it in the same solid condition of the superstructure as when the proud builders finished it a couple of generations ago. So great an impetus did Dr. Myers give the people of the church that a large fund was subscribed for an up-to-date heating equipment and other improvements. And now we have the excellent prospect of having our dreams of a revitalized church come true.

Work of the Church.

"Right on the heels of the canvass for the repair fund came the Easter thank offering, which was better than usual, as have also been the current givings. All through the church organizations new life can be seen. The impact of the inspiration of Dr. and Mrs. Myers on the young people and older young people is a living tribute to these lives so beautifully patterned on the Christian principle. The fact of so much having been accomplished in a short two years, without friction and with a right goodwill is a glorious commendation of the principles instilled in the hearts of the people. The greatest Teacher of all warned us of the narrowness and bigotry characteristic of the organized church from time immemorial. Only seldom in His lifetime did He go to the temple,—once to talk to the few great doctors there, and again to whip from the House of God those who had made it a house of merchandise. Thus in giving His Great message to the world He preferred the pure air of the byways, the lakeshore and the mountainside, to the quibbling creeds and ecclesiasticisms of the organized church.

"To Dr. Myers, the church of the Christian ideal should be the last place to have friction and narrowness and negative behaviour.

"Since the raising of sons and daughters of their own never became a reality, it became a passion with Dr. and Mrs. Myers to be father and mother to troubled people they met day by day, and their gallant and cheery words and friendly pats will always be remembered.

Tribute to Mrs. Myers.

"It has been an extremely trying time, recently, for our good Dr. Myers, and many lonely hours he has known. Our hearts go out to Mrs. Myers, who for many days has been tossed between life and death and has suffered much, and to Dr. Myers when the one most dear to him is hovering on the crest of the great divide. But Mrs. Myers will always be with him, for to these people our souls are fragments of the great Indestructible—our spirits are parts of the Spirit-God of the universe, which nothing can destroy, except as perhaps we debase them with a lifetime of shame.

"And here we pause to pay tribute to Miss Margaret Myers through whose loving and efficient service the efforts of Dr. and Mrs. Myers were strengthened.

"The spirit of the Tabernacle has risen again from the shadows. A great trust is ours to work together to make this church a place of Christian service,—a place where our young people are fitted to meet the problems of a changing world. And now that we have been given an interpretation through which we can work out our problems, let us receive our returning pastor, and go forward with greater zeal than this church has ever known."

Kinsmen Entertain 150 Children, Wards of C.A.S.

Approximately 150 children, wards of the Children's Aid Society located in the Belleville and Tweed districts were guests of the Belleville and Tweed Kinsmen Club at a highly successful picnic held in Tweed on Sunday.

Thirty members of the Belleville Club augmented by the Tweed Kinsmen and their collective wives gave the kiddies an outdoor treat that should live long in their memories.

They enjoyed a full sports program, ate two delicious picnic meals and all-in-all had the time of their young lives.

Kinsmen and their wives and children took sufficient food for their proteges of the day besides a large quantity of soft drinks and ice cream. To give an idea of the amount consumed the youngsters absorbed 480 bottles of soft drinks, 524 bottles of milk and 500 ice cream rolls.

Many Family Reunions.

There was a touch of human interest in the affair at that. Some of the children who were brothers and sisters and who are located in various sections of the districts recognized each other and many former family reunions were held.

The Kinsmen who travelled in cars toured the district in search of the various homes and took their little guests with them returning them in the same manner.

The affair was productive of a lot of work and effort on the part of the clubmen and their wives, but their efforts were well repaid by the shining faces of appreciative kiddies, many of whom had not had such an outing for some time.

The picnic is said by Kinsmen to be an annual affair and a similar function will be held for the children next year.

DAMAGE FROM

The tangled, twisted steel ribs of this quarter-mile long factory lean outward, award from the blast force.

Gen. Shiro Mizogoshi, prefectural police superintendent, said the centre of the blast was little more than two miles from the water front.

Little Left in Valley

Nagasaki is built along two valleys that form a "V" with about half the city in each valley.

The bomb struck the industrial half, which also contains most of the usiness buildings, wiping out nearly every store, hotel and office building.

There is little left in that valley now, although hundreds of people still thread their way thru the debric.

In the other valley guarded by the hills, hundreds of buildings were wrecked, the scorching blast killed off great areas of trees on the surrounding wooded hills, which now stand brown and dry.

In the lesser damaged half of Nagasaki where the municipal and prefectural offices and the like are located, streetcars and busses run and water and electric power are available.

In this valley of death a few families have begun to move back and are putting up rusted tin shacks where their homes once stood.

But most of the survivors just put up signs where they used to live, telling relatives and friends where they now can be found.

These signs look like headstones in this cemetery of a valley that once was Nagasaki.

REFINED AND SEALED BY B-A
PEERLESS MOTOR OIL "It's Alloyed"
SERVICE B-A PRODUCTS

5 REASONS why B-A PEERLESS MOTOR OIL means longer life, lower repair costs for your car

1 It protects better. The first job of any motor oil is to lubricate . . . that is, protect moving parts against friction. Because it is refined from specially selected lubricating crudes, by the famous 5-point process which preserves to the full its lubricating qualities, Peerless protects moving parts better!

2 It keeps engines cleaner. Oils—all oils—have a natural tendency to oxidize under heat and pressure forming harmful deposits in the engine of your car. Peerless is specially protected against this tendency; therefore it keeps engines cleaner.

3 It keeps engines cool and efficient. Excessive heat is the enemy of efficiency in your car's engine. Peerless—a true "heart-cut" oil—has an exceptionally high V.I. (Viscosity Index) which means, among other things, that it keeps the right consistency for cooling, sealing and lubricating at all engine temperatures.

4 It stays on the job longer. Thousands of Canadian motorists, from fleet-owners to private drivers, testify that, with Peerless Motor Oil, they require less oil added between changes.

5 "It's Alloyed." After B-A have refined the highest quality oil it is scientifically possible to make . . . "it's alloyed!" That is to say a special ingredient is added which inhibits oxidation—principal cause of oil failure. Give your car Peerless Motor Oil today!

Dick Fowler, Toronto Hurler, Enters Hall of Fame by Throwing No-Hitter For A's

Major League Races Enter Home Stretch With Tigers Only Game in Front of Senators; Cubs Have 3-Game Lead

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

The stirring big league pennant races were forced to share the spotlight today with a 21-year-old Canadian Army dischargee who returned to the baseball front only two days ago.

The former soldier, Dick Fowler of Toronto, righthanded hurler of Philadelphia Athletics, celebrated his first 1945 starting assignment for the Mackmen yesterday by hurling the season's first no-hitter to whip St. Louis Browns 1-0 in the second game of a double-header. The A's also won the opener 6-2.

In spinning his masterpiece, Fowler allowed only five balls to be hit out of the infield and walked four, but two of these were erased by double plays. The Toronto hurler had made two brief appearances in relief earlier in the month.

The last previous no hitter in the majors was pitched by Clyde Shoun for Cincinnati against Boston May 15, 1944. Bobby Feller of Cleveland was the last American Leaguer to accomplish the feat, against Chicago White Sox on the opening day in 1940.

Only One Game Ahead

The hectic American League flag race entered the final three weeks of the season with the 1st-place Detroit Tigers only one game ahead of Washington Senators following yesterday's double triumph by the Nats and a victory and tie by the Bengals.

Mickey Haefner had little trouble annexing his 16th victory in a 4-2 opening game triumph for Washington over the White Sox. But Santiago Ullrich had to come to the rescue of his fellow Latin elbower, Alex Carrasquel in the nightcap to eke out a 5-4 decision for Ossie Bluege's men.

The Tigers also were forced to stage late inning rallies to vanquish Boston Red Sox 6-3 in the first and obtain a 3-3 11-inning tie in the second. Catcher Paul Richards was the whole show for the Bengals in the opener. His three doubles socked in five of the six runs including three in the ninth, and he scored the other himself.

Bruins Still in Front

The feverish National League title chase remained at a stalemate when the top-perched Chicago Cubs and the second-rung St. Louis Cards each swept their twin bill leaving the Bruins still 3½ games in front.

The Cubs made short work of the Braves as Ray Prim and Claude Passeau, in rare form, prostrated the Hubmen 9-1 and 4-0. Prim's five-hitter was his 12th triumph while Passeau registered his 16th with a superb three-hit shutout.

The Redbirds had to win theirs the hard way. After coming from behind to sneak in with the opener 5-4, they made it two successive one-run decisions over New York Giants by winning the second 3-2. Red Barrett, with only two days rest, racked up his 21st success in the afterpiece.

Season's Record

The season's record crowd of 72,152, 65,534 paid, saw Bob Feller outpitch Spud Chandler to pave the way for a Cleveland 10-4 and 4-3 double win over New York Yankees at the Yankee Stadium, and practically eliminate the Bronxites from any flag consideration.

In the other twin bills, Cincinnati came from behind twice to win both contests from Brooklyn 6-5 and 6-4, needing 10 innings to take the first. Al Lakeman drove in the winning runs in both contests. The Phils and Pirates split, Pittsburgh winning 4-3 in the opener. Philadelphia then jumped on three Buc hurlers for 24 hits and a 14-3 decision in the nightcap.

SELL UNLINED COATS.

London (CP) — Large stocks of women's coats probably will be sold in the United Kingdom this year without linings. Manufacturers say they have no materials for linings and thousands of otherwise finished coats are hanging on rails. The board of trade recently gave permission for half-lined coats to be sold and now the sale of unlined garments is planned.

DAVE CASTILLOUX DEFENDS TITLE

Sorel, Que., Sept. 10. (CP)—Dave Castilloux Sunday successfully defended his Canadian welterweight boxing title when he won a fourth round technical knockout from a fellow, Montrealer, Ralph Walton, before 5,000 fans. Castilloux weighed 136 to the colored Walton's 137.

The decision was given to Castilloux by Referee Al Decarie when Walton, on the advice of Dr. Roger Fiset of Sorel, failed to resume the match in the fourth round after an alleged low blow.

The bout started with both fighters feeling each other out but Castilloux had a wide margin on the first round. Walton roughed Castilloux in the second and third rounds and was strong at the finish.

In the fourth, the two were exchanging blows in the middle of the ring when Walton went down allegedly struck in the left groin. The negro boxer was taken to his dressing room in a collapsed state and was examined by Dr. Fiset. The doctor said there was no outward sign of injury but advised Walton not to proceed with the fight.

Referee Decarie consulted with the judges, then awarded the fight to Castilloux.

It was believed to be the first Canadian championship bout fought on a Sunday.

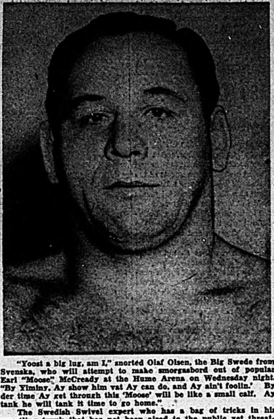
"THE SWIVELLING SWEDE"



"Yoost a big lug, am I," snorted Olaf Olsen, the Big Swede from Svenska, who will attempt to make smorgasbord out of popular Earl "Moose" McCready at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night. "By Yiminy, Ay show him vat Ay can do, and Ay ain't foolin.' By der time Ay get through this 'Moose' will be like a small calf. Ay tank he will tank it time to go home."

The Swedish Swivel expert who has a bag of tricks in his wrestling trunk that has not been aired to the public yet threatens all kinds of mayhem, and whatnot to the nice boy from Aurora. And he means what he says. For the Swede doesn't fool as was evident in the last bout between the two when the Moose was given the nod.

And McCready is ready. He gave the British Empire champion, Whipper Billy Watson, a real go for his title last Wednesday, and he is not afraid of anything the Swede might have tucked up his sleeve or around the edge of his trunks. So it looks like a big time in the old town that night. On the same card is that high-flying pair, Al Bunny Dunlop and PO. Pat Flanagan, who gave the crowd a merry mix-up last week. Curtain raising the card will be Irish Tom Collins and Jumping Jim Bennett. The advance ticket sale is at Cook's Tobacco Store. Doors open 8.15 p.m. First Bout 8.45 p.m.

MOUNTAIN VIEW LASSIES LOSE TO PETERBORO

Bomberettes Are Eliminated From Provincial Playdowns in Second Game by 17-9 Count

Mountain View Bomberettes, diamond-weary from six games played in seven days, three of them in one day, bowed to the smart Peterboro Westclox ladies squad in Peterboro on Saturday afternoon by a 17-9 score and were eliminated from the first round of the WPSU playdowns. The airgals lost the first game of the series on the home diamond on Wednesday.

Casualties were fairly heavy in the tussle. Yvonne Mills, popular captain and third baseman for Bomberettes suffered a severe cut over the right eye when she collided with her catcher when going for a fly ball. Her eyeglasses were broken in the collision. Marg Bradfield, catcher, suffered a wrenched finger, when she tried to spear one of Vicky Hillier's fast ones, while another member of the squad had to be treated for effects of the sun.

Marj. Watson started on the mound for the Westcloxers and gave way to Withers in the seventh after her mates had pounded out thirteen runs and a six run lead. Withers held the airgals down to three runs and two hits for the remainder of the session.

Burden Takes Toll

Vicky Hillier the airgals' "iron woman" pitched a stout game against the classy Westcloxers but the week's chores on the mound had taken its toll. The homesters nicked her for seventeen hits, 3 of them home runs. Cloxers ticked off two runs in the first, five in the 2nd, four in the third, two each in the fourth and fifth and two more in the seventh.

Bomberettes got one each in the first and third, and 2 in the second. They came back with 3 in the 6th and two more in the 9th, but the rally came too late.

Yvonne Mills and Webster connected for home runs for the Bomberettes while N. Whetung, and Isabel "Tommy" Bullock poled out round trippers for the winners.

The score:

Bomberettes	121	003	002	9	12	5
Westclox	254	220	20x	17	16	2

Windsor committed six errors afield, the shaky support enabling Stratford to drive Alf Dumouchelle from the mound with a three-run barrage in the eighth innings.

Senior hockey will return to pre-war footing in Western Canada, it was decided Saturday at a meeting in Calgary of the newly-formed Western Canada Senior Amateur Hockey League.

Calgary, Edmonton, Regina and Saskatoon will begin a 72 - game schedule Nov. 10, league officials said. Lethbridge and Moose Jaw are being considered possible additions to the league.

President of the new loop is D. P. MacDonald of Calgary, former president of Alberta senior loops.

Arne Andersson of Sweden defeated Sydney Wooderson of England in a special mile race run yesterday at Goeteborg, Sweden. Andersson's time was four minutes, 3.6 seconds, Wooderson's 4 minutes 4.2 seconds.

In broiling weather, a R.A.F. Transport Command eleven from Montreal played the New York Americans to a 2-2 draw at the Starlight Stadium at New York Sunday in an amateur international peace celebration soccer game. The home team was mainly composed of Brookhattan players, the triple American League and state and national cup champions. It was the most powerful soccer combination fielded in the United States since the start of the war. The R.A.F. was also at top strength, having the services of several players formerly with English and Scottish first league teams who had returned to Montreal at the weekend from overseas flights.

Regina Caps won the Western Canada Senior Women's Fastball Championship at Saskatoon Saturday when they defeated Edmonton Walk-Rites 2-1 in 11 innings to take the best-of-seven series in straight games.

Teams representing Peterboro and Belleville will enter an Ontario Rugby Football Union junior series this fall, it was decided at a meeting in Cobourg this weekend.

Trenton Moose softball team Saturday took the deciding game from Kingston Heights 6-1 to win the Eastern Ontario Intermediate B softball championship. The game was played at Napanee.

Yesterday's Stars

Dick Fowler, Athletics: Hurled American League's first no-hitter since Bobby Feller in 1940 with a 1-0 whitewashing of St. Louis Browns.

Paul Richards and Rudy York, Tigers: Richards drove in five of the Tigers six runs with three doubles and scored the other run himself as Detroit beat Boston 6-3 in the opener; York caused a 3-3 deadlock in the second game by hitting a homer with one on in the eighth.

Jeff Heath and Les Fleming, Indians: Heath tripled and homered to account for five runs as the Indians won the opener from Yankees 10-4; Fleming's two-run homer trimmed the Yanks in the second 4-3.

Ray Prim and Claude Passeau, Cubs: Prim hurled a five-hitter to beat Braves 9-1 in the first game; Passeau blanked Braves with three hits, 4-0, in nightcap.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

It was Belleville's day on Saturday in softball circles with Oshawa on the receiving end of a couple of losses. In Peterborough the Columbian Squires finally settled the "blackout" series by eliminating the Oshawa Aces 7-2 in the fourth game of the junior series. At Point Anne the Ox Pointers eked out a sensational win over the Oshawa Mayfairs by a 2-1 score after one of the most thrilling softball jousts seen here in many a moon.

Mueleneester for Oshawa and Maracle hooked up in one of those pitchers duels you read about but seldom see. Both chuckers allowed three hits over the nine inning route and it was one of those breaks that finally settled the issue for Point Anne. Mueleneester lost his own game with an error that was a heartbreaker for the Mayfairs. It happened with the score 1 - 1 in the top of the ninth after Bradshaw had strolled and Loft singled to put two on the sacks. Whalen rolled a bunt down the first base line. The Mayfair pitcher fielded the ball and heaved it far out into left field in an effort to force Bradshaw at third. It was a tough game for the visitors to lose and a dilly for the Ox Pointers to chalk up in the win column. Both teams dished out a brand of defensive ball that was pretty to look at, and that return game in Oshawa should bring out the Motor City fans in droves.

Up in Peterborough, more trouble for the Squires appears to loom up. The manager of the Oshawa Aces protested the game on the ground that the Belleville management could not produce the players' certificates. It was learned that the certificates have been posted with the O.A.S.A. and what will happen over such a technicality is not yet known. Tsk tsk, some people take their defeats the hard way.

• • • •

Generally Speaking.

Vern Goyer sparked the Squires to their win with not only his hitting and fielding but a lot of generalship and patter. The big boy was in his glory especially after one of those very rare things occurred, that of deliberately walking a batter in a softball game. The Oshawa mentor decided that discretion was the better part of softball valor and ordered Crawford, his hurler, to pass Goyer intentionally at his first time at bat. He might better have waited until the eighth when the big fella poled one far out of sight among parked cars beyond left field.

Don Boyle hurled effectively for seven chuckers and had the Oshawans well under control. In the eighth after walking one batter he asked to be taken out of the game. Perhaps it was as well, for Adams came in and stifled the enemy bats for the remainder of the game. The game was a fine sample of the pastime with the Squires ability to hit when hits meant runs deciding the final issue.

A Great Team.

Mountain View Bomberettes wound up their 1945 softball activities in the Liftlock City on Saturday going down to defeat in the second game of the W.P.S.U. first round series to the smart Peterborough Westclox aggregation. This corner does not intend to depreciate the Westclockers ability, they won two clear cut victories and should go well along the playdown trail, but the airgals, who had tucked away six other games during the past six days were physically weary. The Peterborough fans realized this and generously gave them big rounds of applause, even in defeat.

At that the service girls have a softball record to be proud of. They won the Belleville City title; The Interstation Softball championship and the No. 1 Air Training Command title for Ontario by playing three games on Thursday against Toronto, Ottawa and Trenton. They have proved themselves to be a grand sportsmanslike aggregation, a team that can take defeat with a smile and celebrate victory with palms for the losers. They were entertained in Peterborough by the Cloxers after Saturday's game and none were louder in their wishes for ultimate success for the Petes gals than were the Bomberettes.

To Manager Vic Bagnato and Flight Officer Joy Bristol go orchids for the production of a fine bevy of lady athletes; for good management and excellent supervision. To the Bomberettes, good luck and may that piece of paper come soon.

Splinters. . . .

Peterborough sports authorities have shown foresight in having representatives of the St. John Ambulance Brigade present at sports fixtures. The gentlemen in blue and white were much in demand at the Petes' softball bowl on Saturday. Yvonne Mills, Bomberettes' third baseman and captain, suffered a painful cut over the eye after having her eyeglasses smashed following a collision with her catcher when both went after an infield fly. Marg Bradfield, the catcher, injured a finger and a leg — pardon — limb, while another airgal suffered from the heat. The first-aid laddies did a good job, and were Johnnies-on-the-spot when their services were needed. . . . Hear that Speedy St. Louis' Juniors are scheduled to meet Meaford in the second round Junior O.B.A. playdowns. . . . Columbian Squires were forced to pay twenty bucks for a taxi-cab to take part of the team to Peterborough. . . . For the luvamike can't these boys get some support? . . . They form one of the smartest junior softball aggregations ever turned out in this man's town, and at full strength should cop the provincial title . . . and they have to hire taxis to travel. . . . And by the same token the baseball juniors are urgently in need of some simoleons. It's a long hop to Meaford, and it will be a black eye for local sportsdom if these lads have to default through lack of funds for transportation. . . . How about it? . . . Napanee Moose eliminated Kingston Heights in the Intermediate "B" playdowns 6-1 in the third game at Napanee on Saturday. . . . Latta tangles with Bata in the third and deciding game of the C and D semi-final tonight at the Alemite Field. . . . By virtue of their 5-5 ten innings tie here on Saturday the Juniors-SWACOS series will likely be extended another game. . . . No score card was left re the Juniors-SWACO game, and everyone was away on Saturday from this sports department, hence no information. . . . It may come around as usual, one day late. . . . Olaf Olsen, the Swivelling Swede, is disgusted with the refereeing in these parts and states he not only will take McCready apart here on Wednesday night, but the "umps" as well. . . . Nice playboy, eh?

TORONTO PLAYS NEWARK BEARS IN PLAYDOWNS

Leafs Finish Third Winning Final Game of Schedule From Montreal

By The Associated Press

Interest in the International League shifted today to the annual playoffs after one of the circuit's better seasons. The semi-finals open tomorrow with Baltimore at Montreal and Toronto at Newark.

A. B. (Happy) Chandler, baseball's new commissioner, is expected to attend the Toronto-Newark game.

Montreal finished in first place with a record of 95 victories against 58 defeats, although taking a 7-6 licking from Toronto in the last game yesterday. The second game was rained out. The Royals established a new Montreal paid attendance record for the season of 303,438.

Syracuse's Wally Cazen set a new stolen base record for the 154-game schedule as the Chiefs split with Jersey City. He stole four bases to boost his total to 74, one more than the old mark set by George Stirnweiss, then with Newark, in 1942. Syracuse won the opener, 7-1, as Bob Katz won his 20th game (against 20 defeats). Jersey City took the nightcap, 2-1.

Newark split with Baltimore, winning the second game, 4-0, on John Maldovan's two-hit pitching after the Orioles had won the opener, 2-1, behind Al Barillari's five-hitter.

Rochester swept a doubleheader from Buffalo, 5-1 and 8-0, but still finished in the cellar, half game behind the Bisons and Syracuse who tied for sixth.

SENATORS HAVE CHANCE TO CROW

By BUS HAM

Washington, Sept. 10. (AP) — Washington Sentors have shown so far in their 19-game final home stand that they aren't fooling about hanging on in the heated American League pennant race.

Only one game out of the lead today, the Senators hope they can maintain their present pace until the first-place Detroit Tigers come to town for the pay-off series, Sept. 15, 16 and 17.

This is what the Senators have to crow about in their current stand:

Seven victories in eight games.

Tying the League records for doubleheaders won in one season, 14.

George Case's rebound into the thick of the base-stealing championship race.

Knocking St. Louis Browns, last year's champions, out of the 1945 title picture by beating the Missourians five out of six games.

When the Senators beat Chicago White Sox twice yesterday they tied the record set by New York Yankees in 1943 for the most doubleheaders won in a season.

Point Anne Defeats Oshawa Mayfair Lanes 2-1 First Game Of Int. "A" Softball Playdowns

Won Game in Ninth When Oshawa Hurler Threw Wide Over Third Base

One of the best softball games played in this district in some years was staged at Point Anne on Saturday afternoon, when the Ox Pointers defeated Oshawa Mayfair Lanes 2-1 in the first game of the Intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. playdowns. The second game will be played in Oshawa on Friday and if the teams continue the same good work it may be the finest series of the season. The Pointers won the game when they took advantage of the breaks and the team deserved to win because they made their own breaks.

It was a pitchers' duel between Maracle and Mueleneester with the Oshawa hurler being the more brilliant but Pat Maracle was the steadiest in the pinches and he was backed by almost perfect support. Mueleneester struck out twelve and walked two with Maracle whiffing but two and walking the same number. The difference was in the fielding of the two hurlers. Maracle handled five chances with precesion, while Mueleneester when he had to make a play to win threw the ball wild and the game was over. Oshawa went to the front in the fourth when Reigle singled but was run down between first and second. Gilbert came through with a rousing triple down the left field foul line and came home shortly after on a passed ball.

Scored in Eighth.

Point Anne did not get that one back until the eighth frame, when Art Genereaux slashed a single to centre. Whitehead walked and both advanced on a passed ball. A play was made at third and Genereaux sneaked home. The fireworks occurred in the ninth and before a man had been retired the Pointers were home free. Bradshaw opened the frame by strolling and Loft promptly singled to left. Whalen elected to advance the runners and poked the ball to the pitcher's side instead of at the third baseman. Mueleneester pounced on the ball and heaved wildly over the baseman's head to allow Bradshaw score the winning run. It was a nice one to win and a tough one to lose. The pitchers were always on top of the batter each team securing three hits and only one extra base blow in the contest. Genereaux possible won the game in the eighth, when he knocked the ball out of Gilbert's hands, when that player had the fleet-footed outfielder beaten at the bag.

Fielding Perfect.

The fielding of both teams was perfect when the chips were down and by the contest the teams are most evenly matched. The Pointers are confident they can win the Eastern Ontario title and go into the semi-final round but they will have to play back to their game of Saturday to beat the Oshawa crew. The crowd, which was the largest of the season, saw a most interesting and close contest and many will journey with the team to George Campbell's bailiwick on Friday.

LESSON NO. 777
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

If you like an occasional squeeze (and who doesn't), here is one of the inverted type. That does not mean while standing on your head. It is where you squeeze the one who plays last.

South found himself in a seven club contract in this deal:

NORTH
♠A 5 2
♥10 9 7 4
♦K 6 3 2
♣A 6

WEST
♠J 10 9 6 4
♥J 8 6 5 2
♦5 4
♣10

EAST
♠K 8 7
♥A K Q 3
♦Q 10 9 8
♣9 2

SOUTH
♠Q 3
♥None
♦A J 7
♣K Q J 8 7 5 4 3

When west flung the spade jack as his opening lead, one look at dummy told declarer there was work to do. Too many holes were there for an easy sweep of all the tricks.

The lead indicates that east has the spade king. So, it looked as if a spade trick may be lost. There was also danger in diamonds.

Hopping right up with the dummy spade ace, declarer took a trump trick with his club jack and another trump with dummy club ace. His worry now started over the next move.

There was no way to avoid it, so he led a dummy diamond and when east played the eightspot, the jack was played for a finesse. To his relief, it stood up and his only remaining worry was a spade.

In an effort to save a loss in spades, he might continue taking diamonds. If each opponent has three diamonds, the fourth diamond in dummy would be good. On it, he could dump his south queen of spades.

But there was time for that. He could first try a squeeze on east. If east held long diamonds with the spade king, dummy's fourth diamond would not be good without a squeeze.

So, south took a trick with his diamond ace and five more trumps. It left him a trump, a small diamond, the spade queen. Dummy kept K 6 of diamonds and a heart. East saved spade king and Q 10 of diamonds.

South then led his last trump and sluffed dummy heart. If east gives up spade king, the spade queen and diamond king are good. If east prefers to drop a diamond, both dummy diamonds come home.

The one who is squeezed not always is pleased.

'Pretty Lucky' To Hurl No-Hitter Says Dick Fowler

Philadelphia, Sept. 10. (AP)—Dick Fowler, first American Leaguer in more than five years to pitch a no-hit, no-run game, says he's "a pretty lucky guy".

The 21-year-old athletic hurler who hails from Toronto, just 24 days out of the Canadian army, crashed baseball's elite yesterday when he blanked St. Louis Browns 1-0 in the windup of a doubleheader here.

He struck out six. Only five Brownies reached base—four on walks and the fifth on a fielder's choice.

Fowler said he knew he was close to every pitcher's dream as early as the sixth inning.

His most anxious moments came in the first half of the ninth with the score still tied 0-0. Milton Byrnes walked and Lou Finney slammed the ball to deep right field. It was foul.

In the A's half, Hal Peck tripled and Irv Hall singled him home with the winning run.

"It was a wonderful feeling when we got that one run", said Fowler.

"What did you think?" he was asked.

"You don't think, you just sort of get a thrill all over".

Fowler said he was feeding the Brownies "anything they couldn't hit".

"I wouldn't have got a good foul if I had been batting against him", said Buddy Rosar, who caught Fowler.

Fowler's teammates hugged him. Even the venerable Connie Mack left his seat to drop an affectionate arm over his shoulders.

"I didn't have much of a chance to congratulate him yesterday", said Mr. Mack, "but I'll have a lot of nice words for him today".

Fowler landed with the A's in 1941.

He pitched his best pre-war major league game in 1942 when he lost 1-0 to Browns in 15 innings.

His biggest regret is that his wife, Joyce, and their two-year-old son, Tommy, didn't see him. They were at home in Oneonta, New York.

STOLE THE STARS

Darwin, Australia (CP) — A strange flag floated over Sadau Island off Borneo after Australian commandos had landed. They discovered they were without an Australian flag. Some silk was provided by an American parachute unit. This same unit also provided the stars—but it didn't know that until the next morning, when it was discovered that there were holes in its ceremonial flag where stars should have been.

Ivan Miller Wins at Golf For Sports Writers

Hamilton, Sept. 10 (CP)—Ivan Miller, sports editor of the Hamilton Spectator, posted a 79 yesterday to win the St. Andrew's trophy, emblematic of the championship of the Ontario sports writers annual golf tournament.

Miller, who also won the event last year, was out in 39 and home in 40 to capture low gross honors in a field that included strong representation from Western Ontario and Toronto centres.

Second low gross went to Fred Thompson, Kitchener, with Tommy Moore, Hamilton, third, and Laurie Brain, Galt, fourth. Gerry Kesselring, Kitchener, newly-crowned Ontario Junior Champion, toured the course in 78 to win the first prize for visitors. Special prizes were awarded to Rex Stimers, St. Catharines, C. Woofley, Kitchener, and Rudy Polius, Buffalo.

A vote was taken that the 1946 championship be held in St. Catharines.

Columbian Squires Beat Aces In 4th Game at Peterborough And Play Toronto Next Round

Score is 7-2 and Don Boyle Allowed Only Six Hits up Till Eighth When He Retired

Columbian Squires, back at full strength eliminated the Oshawa Aces at Peterborough on Saturday in the fourth game of the first round Junior O.A.S.A. playdowns by a 7-2 score. Both squads had a victory to their credit and third game in Oshawa was tied. Squires will meet a Toronto team in the second round.

The game was a brilliant hurling duel between Don Boyle of Squires and Crawford, Aces ace until the eighth when Boyle gave way to Adams, and Crawford weakened sufficiently to allow four hits for three runs to cinch the game for Jack Doran's charges.

Pitched Fine Game.

Boyle pitched a fine game until the eighth when he complained of a sore arm and took himself out of the game. He struck out six and walked four, but was good in the pinches. In the third and fifth innings Oshawa filled the sacks but the slim youngster bore down and retired the side with no damage done. He scattered six blows, all of them singles. Don Adams came from first to take over the pitching chore with none out in the seventh. He walked the first batter then steadied and retired the next five in order.

Crawford hurled fine ball throughout but was inclined to be wild at times walking eight all told. He weakened in the eighth when successive singles by Spafford and D. Adams put two on the board. Red Culkin poled out a two base hit for a marker, and Goyer's mighty smash, that would have been a home run in any other park but was held to two bases by ground rules, brought in Culkin and Wardhaugh who was on base through a fielder's choice.

Rollins Gets Homer.

Rollins started the scoring in the third, when he drove out a ringing liner that landed within the limits of the groundrule and rolled through cars near the outfield for a home run. In the 5th Wardhaugh singled and came home on Goyer's hot liner through second, for the second run. Boyle and D. Adams walked in the sixth and Rollins and Donovan smashed out two baggers for two more runs. And that was that until the eighth.

Aces counted the first marker in the sixth, when Crowdis who had walked went to third on Czerewaty's single. The umpire ruled interference at the plate and allowed the Ace third baseman to score. In the eighth with the Oshawans yelling for the innings rally Boyle walked Denny, who stole second. Adams threw the ball through second base to the outfield and the Aces second run came in.

Rollins was topflight with the cudgel for the Squires with a homer and two-bagger, Goyer got a double and a single as did Culkin. McNabney led the Aces with two singles. Both teams fielded flawless ball the only error of the game being Adams' wild throw to second base.

On to Toronto.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 10. (AP) — You probably have heard and read a lot of predictions about the effects of air travel and soldier athletics on the post-war sports scene. . . Let's turn the subject over to a man who can speak with considerable authority. . . Howard Hobson has taken Oregon basketball teams on some long trips and he spent last summer teaching the cage game in Europe —travelling by air.

High Fliers.

"Faculty Groups", Hobby points out, "usually feel that more than a few days from school is undesirable . . . In our basketball trips to New York, it has been necessary to take nearly three weeks for the trip, as we need to break it up by playing several games en route. . . .by air, we could play a game in New York Saturday night and the boys could be back in the classroom on Monday morning. . . .It seems to me that this is definitely the answer for team travel in all sports".

League of Nations.

While in Italy, Hobson, taught basketball to Italian coaches and spent a week at the British Sports school at Bennevento. . . .Italy already has hundreds of teams and got a look at some of the 1,200 service teams that played last season. . . .Guido Graziani, coach of the 1936 Italian Olympic cage team, told Hobson he thinks basketball will replace soccer as Italy's leading sport within a few years and he favors importing American teams to help the game's development . . . Maj. Geoffrey Dyson, peacetime coach at Loughborough College, has similar ideas about basketball in Britain—including the invitations by American team. . . .and Hobby adds that air travel would make playing in Europe as easy as it now is for a western team to play in the east.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 10

Susan's mother, who had a reputation for introducing interesting people to local society met the count on her last trip to New York. She had proffered the hospitality of her home if he would come west, but although he accepted her suggestion, he had refused to take advantage of her kindness.

"It is better that I have my own apartment," he had replied.

No Competition for Susan.

Mrs. Whitcomb had helped him find one not too far away so that she could invite him to what she called informal little gatherings. He told Folly he had been in San Francisco since the first of the year save for a brief trip to Los Angeles. If during that time he resented Mrs. Whitcomb's prior claim on him he gave no sign of it.

Suave, well-bred, distinguished he made a charming guest even when he concentrated on the prettiest girl present as he was doing tonight.

Mrs. Whitcomb knew Folly and did not consider her serious competition to her own brown-haired Susan. Europeans looked at marriage so differently, she confided to her sister. "He is not going to marry any girl without an income of her own and a definite social position."

She felt pleased when he did not accompany Folly home. She did not realize that Folly had refused his offer in favor of the boy who had been asked to call for her. Not because she was grateful to Tom Waterbury nor because she hoped by her reluctance to rouse more interest on the part of the count.

It was solely because she remembered Bruce Potter mistaking her home for a rooming house and she didn't want Count Eric Gustavus Lindstrom to see it.

"May I take you home?" Count Eric Gustavus Lindstrom had murmured.

Folly shook her head. "Thank you, no! I came with one of Susan's friends. It wouldn't be very nice of me to run out on him."

Her refusal did not discourage him.

Phone Next Day.

"When will I see you then? Will you give me your telephone number so that I can call?"

Folly had caught Mrs. Whitcomb's regal eye upon them. She said hactily, "It's in the telephone book. The name is Wainwright. On Washington Street."

"You will hear from me tomorrow," he promised.

Swiftly lowered lids concealed the triumph in Folly's eyes. Instinctively she knew she dared not confide in any of her friends. Sweetly but not too enthusiastically she thanked Susan's mother for a lovely evening. Her glance at her socially prominent, callow young escort was gracious and kind.

"It is so kind of Tom to look after me," Folly admitted, without a trace of regret. "Goodnight, Sue darling! We must have lunch together soon."

Susan suspected nothing. Susan's mother, smiling with relief, thought, "His attentions didn't mean anything. He will have forgotten about her tomorrow. But I'll invite him to a family dinner just to be sure."

Count Calls Folly

It was the first call on her telephone list the following day and Eric's gracious acceptance calmed her fears. She would have been furious if she had seen him fifteen minutes later searching for the number on Washington Street.

Or if she could have heard his charming, slightly foreign voice asking for Miss Folly Wainwright. Chan had answered. Although as a rule Folly preferred doint it herself on this occasion she wished the count to realize that she was not too easily available. All morning she said, "You answer it, Chan, and be sure to ask whose calling."

"Me very busy," Chan had protested.

"Oh, I know you are, Chan. But you'll do it for me today, won't you please? As a very special favor?"

A "Joke" to Chan

She knew he could not resist her when she put it like this and had not long to wait. Before time for Chan's trip to the market the count had called and been requested to give his name. Chan did not even blink at the unaccustomed title.

"One moment please," he replied. To Folly waiting in the drawing room he said, "Some one making joke with you. Call himself Count Somebody with very long name."

"It's no joke," Folly assured him. "He really is a count. I hope you were polite to him."

"Always polite," the old man insisted, but they both knew it was not true.

Missee Folly was becoming a problem, he thought shaking his head. They had all indulged her too much but who could refuse her when she looked at you with her lovely eyes brimming with laughter and pleading.

To Meet at Hotel

He did not wait to hear the end of the conversation which followed but it was brief. Eric suggested that he call for her and take her to tea.

"Tonight I have to attend a stupid dinner," he said. "But there is dancing at some of the hotels this afternoon. No? Perhaps at the Saint Francis. May I call for you at four?"

Polly was thinking rapidly.

"How nice of you to suggest it but I'm lunching down town today. Why not meet in the Saint Francis lobby?"

"Under the clock?" he cried eagerly.

Folly smiled as she said yes.

She told herself that the danger of having him see the old house had been averted for the second time. Yet she would be with him again. They were having tea, maybe dancing together.

Salute to "Grandpa."

And he was older and even more exciting than Hilton. To say nothing of being a count, Folly reminded herself rapturously. So that for you, Grandpa!

She turned to give a gay salute to the closed door of Hilton's empty room.

In some dimly understood fashion she felt she was repaying Hilton for the kiss he had given her and then apologized for. Just let him try to kiss her again. From now on she intended to be much too busy to waste her time flirting with Hilton Wood.

The same instinct which prevented her from confiding in her friends made her refrain from telling her sisters. She knew they would insist that he call for her at home and she was determined that Count Eric Gustavus Lindstrom should not see this desiccated old house until after romance had been definitely established.

With unerring taste she selected the most becoming suit in her wardrobe. It was blurred blue and gray wool with a beret and topcoat to match. Long, soft, gray gloves wrinkled extravagantly about her slender wrists. Her shoes, borrowed from Hazel's closet, were gray suede to match the gloves.

Hazel would tear her hair if she discovered it but there was a good chance she wouldn't since she had already left on another case. A heavy silver chain swung carelessly about Folly's neck. She wore no other jewelry.

"You are like a piece of exquisite porcelain," Eric said rising from his chair beneath the clock. "Or perhaps I should say a bit of priceless tapestry with your strange green eyes and soft dark curls."

Flattery? No, No.

"You are flattering me," Folly said, delighted.

"Scandinavians are not given to flattery. You wear your clothes as if you were royalty. I have never seen such self possession as you American girls seem to have."

Well, he was certainly the smoothest, most attractive man she had ever seen. Folly was proud of being with him. Proud of the glances, envious or admiring, from other tables. Several people were there who had met him at the Whitcombs. There were nods and smiles but no one disturbed their solitude.

Drifting in his arms — he danced delightfully—Folly wondered how she had endured those long evenings at Hospitality house. Soldiers and sailors were all right, of course, and it was one's patriotic duty to see that they weren't lonely, but there were plenty of other girls who had no opportunity to associate with a man like this. It was simply too much of a contrast.

Even Bruce, who was above the average, was just a freckle-faced, inexperienced boy compared to Eric Gustavus. She hoped he would suggest breaking his dinner engagement but although they stayed until she was sure he would be late he admitted he would have to keep it.

Marta, Hilton Gone

"Much as I prefer being with you," he said gracefully. "But I shall call you tomorrow if I may and now I must take you home."

Again Folly refused. "You're already late," she reminded him. "If you'll just put me in a taxi it will save time for both of us."

She had just time to reach home and replace Hazel's shoes before her sister came home. To her surprise neither Hilton nor Marta was there.

"But where are they?" she demanded of Chan, whose dinner had been ruined by waiting.

"They not say," he replied. "Missee Marta come into kitchen and tell me they neither one here for dinner. They go out together."

Folly was no more surprised than Marta had been by Hilton Wood's invitation. He had been waiting for Marta when she came home. Opening his door as she stood outside searching for her key to the main entrance he said, "I've a yen to go places tonight. How about joining me?"

"But Chan will have dinner ready," she answered practically.

"Does that matter this once? I haven't been out for weeks and you have been working too hard. Let's celebrate!"

Eager to Go Out.

Marta knew this was true. She was so tired that even the idea of celebrating did not appeal to her. Routine had her in its deadly clutches. So that all she really wanted was her dinner and bed. But "grandpa" looked so eager.

"I should think you'd ask someone you don't have to see every night," she smiled. "If you really want to get away from it all."

"I've seen very little of you," he reminded her. "The minute dinner is over you've been dashing off. You will go won't you, Marta? That's swell. I'll wait for you to dress if you like. Just give me a ring on the phone when you're ready."

A bath and a change of costume had done wonders, Marta admitted. It had been a long time since she had worn anything but business clothes. It was fun to change into something more feminine.

A New Experience.

It lifted her spirits to see that in spite of over work and fatigus and worry her face could still look fresh and young. Although she was under no illusion as to Hilton's reason for inviting her—she told herself he was trying to repay her for the trouble he had caused when he was ill—she began to look forward to it. Her voice over the telephone sounded remarkably gay as she said, "All ready, Grandpa? How about you?"

"I'll see you in the front hall," Hilton replied.

Not even the thought of Chan's disapproval could dampen their spirits as they drove away in Hilton's car. Marta wondered if the reason she enjoyed it so much was because so much of the time she had gone out with Jim they had been quarreling.

Looking back on it she could see where they had not been really happy together for months. This was a brand new experiece with no memories to darken it. And Hilton danced better than Jim because he liked to dance. Jim had preferred places with elaborate food or unusual floor shows. But Hilton wanted good music. Nothing else mattered.

A Man of Faith.

Between dances he told her things about his life in the east his mother and the sister of whom he was sometimes reminded of by Folly. He also talked to her about his work nd hopes for the future. There was a vitality about him, a positive way of thinking which appealed to Marta. Here was no weakling who believed that because of war his generation was doomed but a man of faith and force as well as intelligence.

Labor Cavalcade Pauses in City On Way to Ottawa

Approximately 200 members of the C.I.O. and affiliated organizations comprising a 40-car motor cavalcade from Toronto and other points paused in the city for lunch on Sunday while en route to Ottawa.

The delegation, according to a spokesman of the cavalcade, will present demands to Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Government requesting a 40-hour week with 48-hour pay and immediate reconversion of industrial plants from wartime production to that of peace.

"We are going to ask that jobs be provided for labor and the returning service men and women," he said.

Organized labor, he added, "is not going to be kicked around at the whims of politicians who in the hour of need for labor spared no horses as to promises."

Asked if Labor realized that a certain period of readjustment, due to cessation of manufacture of war material, and the readying of the wheels of industry for peace manufacture, was inevitable, the spokesman stated that "this country turned to the production of war materials overnight. The Government promised Labor immediate reconversion, but it is making no effort thus far. Labor is being laid off all over the country, and with the boys coming back from overseas the situation is getting worse."

The automobiles were decorated with signs bearing the names and numbers of the various organizations. Others carried messages and slogans in big letters on signs attached to the cars.

Some of them read, "We want a 40-hour week with 48-hour pay." "You promised jobs for all, Mr. King. Where are they?" "No more Pogie" (reneging) "Veterans, unite yourselves with Labor." "We demand immediate reconversion." "Keep your promises, Mr. King." "Pay-off, not lay-off."

The cavalcade proceeded on its way after its members had dined at various hotels and restaurants.

The Bank That Was Saved

(By John Kobler in The Saturday Evening Post)

Early last September, shortly after the liberation of Paris, an ageing bank employee named Moccand set out on a treasure hunt. The first cache lay some 500 miles southeast, in the remote Alpine region known as the Vercors, a grassy plateau which had been mauled by two years' skirmishing between German border patrols and the French Maquis. Mocacnd rode trains where train wheels still turned, hitchhiked where there were no train, and, where no transport passed, walked. He stumbled over roads blasted down to bedrock by shelling, crossed country which here concealed a German straggler or two, there an FFI detachment in a mood to shoot strangers first and ask questions after.

Not until the end of September did Moccand, dusty and bone-tired, reach his goal—a small farmhouse on the rim of the plateau. The sixties and at one time a teller in the same bank, gripped his hand warmly. Then, before Moccand could voice the question, he announced with quiet pride, "Yes, it's all here and intact, down to the last centime. Come see for yourself."

Moccand followed the old man down to the cellar beneath the farmhouse, down into a kind of subcellar which the farmer had excavated himself. It held a collection of iron chests. Inside the chests were packets of confidential industrial records, private archives, property titles and 50,000,000 francs in negotiable securities.

Moccand struck his hands together. "Good job! Boche patrols practically in your back yard! Lord knows how you managed it!"

"They came often enough," the farmer explained, "but all they ever found was food."

"I'll be back for them later," Moccand promised.

After a day's rest, Moccand resumed the treasure hunt. It led next to a seaside villa near Marseille, where a young Parisian and his wife had been living in discreet obscurity since the armistice. They disclosed to their visitor an artesian well in the rear of the property, and from its depths, long since run dry, they hauled up a tin box fastened to a chain. It contained another eight-figure fortune in bearer's stocks and bonds.

"We had a close shave last year," the man recounted. "The Fritzes meant to dynamite the place and install some gun emplacements. Lucky thing, they changed their plans at the last minute."

"Lucky thing," echoed Moccand. "I'll be back for them later."

Heading back, he verified two more caches—one maintained by a retired insurance salesman in the department of Dordogne, the second by a shopkeeper in the province of Auvergne. From beneath loose planks in kitchen floors, from holes drilled into walls, from attics and cellars emerged sheaves of delectable paper, bringing the combined value of the four caches to more than half a billion francs, a truckful.

It took three weeks to find the truck, a gozogene-driven museum piece on its last tires, and a driver undaunted by the prospect of transporting such cargo across a country in chaos. For the second time, Moccand swung clear around France, picking up securities as he went. Every few miles of the 1000-mile Odyssey the moribund truck faltered. But before autumn faded it was limping into Paris.

Meanwhile, on receipt of correspondence from Paris, more subtle caches disgorged their treasure. Approximately fifty accounts belonging to Jews or persons otherwise offensive to Vichy had been opened by dummy depositors in small banks scattered throughout France. These were restored to their rightful owners. Finally, two holding companies in Lyon and a third in Marseille, which had been created solely as a repository for imperiled securities, dissolved themselves.

Within six months, the homeward flight of this errant capital had been completed. Back into the vaults whence they had been slyly withdrawn under the noses of Germany's financial Gauleiters went the last security back into the austere, grey-faced building at No. 21 Rue Lafitte, where for a century the French branch of the Rothschild dynasty had operated the most powerful private-banking partnership in Europe. Not a single stock or bond had been lost or misappropriated by the chain of hands through which it had passed. Of the 500-ood clients active in 1940—clients traditionally limited to members of the family, their friends, employees and a few top corporations—less than 12 per cent failed to reopen their accounts. The House of Rothschild was saved from the Germans.

Labor Caravan Reaches Ottawa For Conference

Ottawa, Sept. 10 — (CP) — Members of a labor caravan seeking speedy and stable reconversion invaded the lobbies of the parliament buildings today urging members to get them an early appointment with the government to present their case.

They held an early morning meeting at which the joint chairman — Robert Haddow of Montreal, representing the A.F.L. and Malcolm Murdoch of Toronto, representing the C.I.D. — distributed the names of Members of Parliament.

Then the more than 250 delegates from points as far east as Amherst, N.S., and as far west as Port Arthur, Ont., drove to Parliament Hill with their lists and started interviewing members.

They had heard Mr. Haddow tell them at an organization meeting last night that if this didn't succeed then they would have to march to the government themselves.

Won't See Delegation

The government has announced they can't see the delegation today but are willing to meet them at a later date to be jointly agreed upon. The delegates want the meeting today.

The great majority arrived by car last night and drove through streets which are usually quiet on the Sabbath. But led by a big white Canadian seaman's union car blaring martial music from the amplifiers, the caravan of more than 60 cars tooted noisily to the mid-town Labor Hall where they registered for the convention — and also for scarce sleeping accommodation.

The big white machine carried such slogans as "Heroes can't eat medals," "We can't deliver exports at 29 cents per hour," and "Help with the peace with a 300 ship merchant fleet."

One on Howe

One placard carried the sign "Howe's 'in the rough' on reconversion" — apparently a reference to the recent meeting at a Toronto golf club between Reconstruction Minister Howe and Labor delegates.

Others said: "Unemployment insurance of $25 weekly," "Equal pay for women," "Don't torpedo seamen's homes," and "Jobs at union rates."

The concentration of labor representatives at the capital was the result of a mass meeting of aircraft workers last Wednesday in Toronto where it was decided to take the reconversion problem to the government. Speakers last night described the convention as a movement "from the bottom" and expressed the hope that leading Labor officials would add support.

Meat Dealers May Halt Sale In Halifax Area

Halifax, Sept. 10 (CP)—Meat dealers in the Halifax-Dartmouth area may halt the sale of meats within a few days, in protest against the resumption of meat rationing the Halifax Chronicle said today.

(It was announced at Ottawa last night that meat rationing in Canada will be resumed today.

Some 300 grocers and butchers from the two neighboring communities will meet in Halifax tonight and they are expected to make strong representations to government heads to have rationing lifted at once.

The butchers assert that according to government regulations it would be necessary to cut meats to an accuracy of two ounces and they claim such a feat is impossible. Moreover, they say, a rise in price might be nessitated by the wastage involved in recutting two-ounce pieces.

Large chain stores, say the butchers, might be able to cope with the amount of paper-work needed in the new system, but for small establishments this would be impossible.

CANADIANS AT JAP SURRENDER

Canadian-Born Jap Cruelest Of Camp Officials Captured

By CMDR. PETER MacRITCHIE, R.C.N.V.R.

Kowloon, China, Sept. 11 — (CP)— A Canadian-born Japanese, known as Inouye, a native of Kamloops, B.C., and described by Canadian Hong Kong prisoners as the most sadistic of all camp officials, has been captured.

Inouye, an interpreter at the Samshuipo Camp here, where Canadians were confined following Hong Kong's surrender Christmas Day, 1941, was picked up yesterday after disappearing several weeks ago when Japan's surrender was imminent.

Invariably prisoners' stories of cruelties and indignities at the camp came around to the same subject—Inouye. The Japanese, whose parents still live in Kamloops, used to boast his father served as a corporal in the Canadian Army in the First Great War and won a decoration.

(Canadians, however, doubted Inouye's claims of his father's war service, William Stewart, Canadian Press correspondent cabled from Manila Saturday. Stewart said the Canadians "have it in" for Inouye.)

Spy in Canada.

Inouye went to school in Kamloops and lived there until he was 24, from all evidence acting as an agent for the Japanese espionage system. He went to Japan in 1938 and came to Samshuipo as interpreter coincident with arrival of the Canadians.

Following his disappearance when Japan was about to fold up, Canadians spotted him in Kowloon several times and finally he was picked up yesterday. He will be in captivity along with the camp commandant, Col. Takunada, Lt.-Col. Kanasawa, who commanded the gendarmerie—most brutal of all Japanese forces—Capt. Saito, medical officer in charge of the camp, who prescribed the water treatment for uncommunicative prisoners, and two other interpreters.

All were lodged in Victoria jail pending investigations into cruelty and ill-treatment evidence now in the hands of military authorities.

Takunada, known to Canadians as "the fat pig," had charge of all prison camps in the area for three years. I saw him at Samshuipo a few days ago after the Marine guard had brought him for interrogation.

Sweated and Hissed

He looked like a fat pig as he sweated and hissed under questioning about the conduct of the camp. He admitted four Canadians were shot recently, but claimed they had tried to escape while under escort outside the camp. Takunada said all his acts were dictated by superior officers in Tokyo.

Lt.-Cmdr. Goodwin of London, who escaped from the camp last year, was present, and before he walked out told Takunada he was tired of listening to him lie.

Another just arrested is Capt. Sakamoto, under whose "tender mercies" came the men, including Canadians at Samshuipo, who were placed on forcel labor at Kaitak airdrome. If at morning roll call Sakamoto demanded 800 Allied prisoners for airdrome work, and that number of fit men could not be found, he insisted a complement be made and stretcher cases were brought from huts and lined up. Now the shoe is on the other foot.

When the bubble burst, Sakamoto attempted a disguise. Discarding his uniform and moustache, he sported civilian clothes, but his former "slave laborers" recognized him and he joined his confreres at Victoria.

Fiendish But Funny

But, to the Canadians, Inouye was the "daddy of 'em all." Despite his fiendishness he amused them. They called him "Slaphappy Joe," and he knew it. At dusk sometimes, according to one Canadian officer, he would appear at the door of a hut and whisper, "Where is Slaphappy?"

"If we fell for the ruse, he would take us outside and beat us," the officer said.

Major F. T. Atkinson of Toronto and Capt. Jack Norris of Winnipeg were two who suffered especially at his hands.

"One morning," said Major Atkinson, "four of our men were late for a work party. Inouye asked for an explanation, then kicked me on the knee and hit Norris over the head with a board. We had to be carried into a hut. He will have a lot to answer for."

ITALY FIRST TOPIC FOR MEETING OF 'THE BIG FIVE'

James F. Brynes Says Atomic Bomb Not On Agenda For The Foreign Ministers

By FLORA LEWIS

London, Sept. 11 (AP) — James F. Brynes, United States Secretary of State, told a press conference today that Italy would be the first topic for the conference of foreign ministers of five Allied countries meeting this afternoon and that the atom bomb was not on the agenda.

The foreign secretaries of Great Britain, Russia, France and China are here with Mr. Byrnes, starting peace machinery provided by the Potsdam conference.

Mr. Byrnes himself did not say so, but it was understood that the United States would ask that the bulk of Italy's colonies be left under Italian control as trusteeships, with United Nations supervision.

Islands to go to Greece

It is expected that the Dodecanese Islands, off Turkey's west coast, will go to Greece. At the narrows of the Mediterranean—Pantelleria—the first island conquered by air power alone—probably will become either a British or international base. Italian Eritrea will be claimed by Ethiopia.

Britain is expected to ask that a strip of Eastern Cyrenaica, Libya, be taken from Italy and placed either under international or Egyptian rule. The territory is inhabited by the Senussi tribe of Arabs, whom Britain has promised freedom from Italian rule.

Talked with Bevin.

Mr. Byrnes talked with the British foreign secretary, Ernest Bevin, early today.

Mr. Byrnes said the future of Germany was not on the agenda for the meeting of foreign ministers, as drawn up at Potsdam.

He said the main task of the foreign ministers is to reconcile various points of view.

Mother of Three Strangled in Home

Winnipeg, Sept. 11 — (CP) — Cpl. Frederick D. McCallum, 27-year-old R. C. A. F. policeman, was charged with the murder of his wife, Eileen May, 30, when he appeared in city police court Monday. He was remanded until Sept. 18.

Mrs. McCallum, the mother of three children, was strangled to death in her suburban Weston home last Saturday night.

McCallum was turned over to civic police Saturday night after he went to Air Force Service Police and told them he believed he had "finished" his wife.

McCallum, stationed at No. 13 "X" Depot at Angus, Ont., was scheduled to return there today, Police said. He arrived home on leave Aug. 30 to discuss divorce proceedings with his wife. Police said she had requested a divorce so she could marry a soldier whose name they would not reveal.

Escaped Prisoners Tell of "Forgotten Camp" Run by Fanatical Japanese

(Written for The Canadian Press)
By GEORGE HAWKES
(Sydney Daily Mirror Correspondent)

Tokyo, Sept. 11 — (CP Cable)—Locked behind mountains so steep that they cannot climb them in their weakened condition, and forcibly held there by Japanese still willing to die for the Emperor, is a large number of starving Canadian and British prisoners of war in what escapees describe as the "forgotten camp."

Stories of indescribable horror were told today by a Canadian soldier, who, with several British soldiers, survived the rigors of the exhausting mountain climb followed by a 400-mile hitch-hike to Tokyo.

(This dispatch did not name any of the men involved in the escape.)

When they reached this city they saw a row of jeeps lined up in front of a large hotel and they invaded the hotel, filled with important personages, and ate their first real meal in nearly four years.

The camp is known as Ohasi and is near Kamiishi, a coastal town which was shelled recently by the United States fleet. Obviously the site was not known to the Allies, thus lending color to the story that it is a forgotten camp. It is set among a huge steel works and lead mines.

The escaped prisoners said hundreds of tons of shells crashed in their area and 30 prisoners were killed and many shell-shocked so badly that they were taken away from the camp.

"We were so sick of everything in that camp that we'd have welcomed an atomic bomb which, while it would have exterminated us, would have accounted for thousands of Japanese," said one weary Canadian.

The Canadians were forced to work in the lead mine. Two hundred of them were awakened at 4 a.m. every morning and driven by civilian guards with sticks and stones on a 12-mile route march to the place where they were compelled to work. Then they were flogged back to camp each afternoon, arriving exhausted and beaten at 7 p.m.

Labor Group Told Govt. Anxious to Maintain High Level Employment

Ottawa, Sept. 11 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King today told a committee claiming to represent more than 200,000 labor union members that his government was "anxious to do all possible to maintain in peacetime the high levels of employment and income" that prevailed during the war.

He said it was not possible for "any government on earth to guarantee a solution to this problem" of reconversion but promised "we will do our utmost."

The Prime Minister was quoted by a labor spokesman at the end of a 90-minute meeting attended by five other members of the cabinet and by a delegation of 13 men representing roughly 250 who lobbied on Parliament Hill yesterday for a hearing on problems brought on by the end of the war.

At the outset, the Prime Minister said he wished it known that was "no discourtesy" on the part of the government in not meeting the delegation yesterday.

Mr. Haddow, introducing the delegation, protested at the "abrogation of democratic rights of the delegation" when its members were refused entry into the Houses of Parliament "to see their members."

Mr. King asked: "Do you know who gave that order?"

Mr. Haddow replied: "I am not aware of who gave it."

Mr. King: "There were no instructions given by the government to prevent the entry of your delegates."

He added later, "You can rest assured no member of the government had anything to do with the prevention of your delegates entering parliament."

(When the 250 delegates appeared before the parliament buildings yesterday, they were not permitted to enter until members of parliament guaranteed them.)

Mr. King told the delegation — "We want to be helpful to labor but there has to be co-operation on both sides." Referring to the Department of Reconstruction, he said he "resented" labor attacks on the minister, Hon. C. D. Howe.

"My attitude towards labor was not begotten at this moment. I don't intend to cease to press forward for those things that make the lot of the working peoples easier."

Mr. Haddow told the cabinet there was "great disquietude" among the workers about reconversion.

"We feel the manufacturers are trying to use this period to try to break the Trade Unions, to lower wages and force men out of war industry into lower-paid jobs. . . There is grave doubt in the minds of the workers that the government is not meeting the problems of reconversion adequately."

The delegation was here "to support the proposals put forward by the two Labor Congresses," which they had found the government "doing little to put into effect."

C. S. Jackson of Toronto, Canadian President of the International Electrical Workers Union (C.C.L.), said the government's white paper on reconversion contained "a fairly well-rounded policy but in checking into government moves we question whether it has any meat on its bones."

In leaving the meeting the Prime Minister stressed that "no person can control the current situation."

"It is related to conditions in other countries. Whether we get full employment in Canada depends largely on what we get in the way of orders from Europe and Asia. The government is trying to create a demand for our products in other parts of the world.

"We are giving or lending—if not giving—money to create this demand so that employment can be kept up."

One development expected in the wake of the delegation is a statement in the House of Commons as to the "authority and direction" behind police action in barring members of the delegation temporarily from the House.

SUGAR RATION OFFICIALS "WELL AHEAD OF GAME"

136,000 Counterfeit Ration Coupons Seized by Police at Amos, Quebec

Montreal, Sept. 11 —(CP)— The view that Canada's sugar ration administrators "are well ahead of the game" with regard to black market activities, was expressed last night by H. J. Hobbins, deputy sugar administrator, shortly after an announcement by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police of the seizure at Amos, Que., of 136,000 counterfeit sugar ration coupons during the weekend.

Mr. Hobbins said that wherever there is rationing, there are inevitably black market activities, he added that in general illegal trafficking has been relatively small and the loss is "perhaps one ounce per head per annum."

R.C.M.P. officials said that with the arrest af a man in Amos and the recovery of 136,000 counterfeit coupons, the illegal traffic of black market which threatened to flood the nation by organized distribution had been halted and the racket sliced to one-sixth.

One of Series of Raids.

The latest raid was one of a series in the Province of Quebec during the last several weeks. Three weeks ago in Montreal, the federal police seized 500,000 counterfeit coupons in a private garage in Montreal. Police said the haul was part of an issue of 1,000,000 coupons but "we have accounted for most of the missing half-million and a very small quantity is still at large."

R.C.M.P. officials at Toronto reported later that a few of the counterfeit coupons were circulating in Toronto and other Ontario centres.

In Quebec City, during the trial of a city merchant charged with black market sales, Maurice Boisvert, Prices Board prosecutor, said the sugar black market had reached "alarming" proportions in the Quebec district and said a number of arrests would be made shortly in connection with the distribution of counterfeit coupons.

Had Licence Cancelled.

A Montreal candy manufacturer had his licence cancelled by the Prices Board in August on the third conviction in obtaining sugar illegally. A statement issued by the board said the manufacturer had in recent months secured "at least 220,000 pounds of sugar in a series of deals involving illegal sugar transactions."

BRITISH BORNEO AND NEW GUINEA JAPS SURRENDER

Commanders Sign Papers and Turn Swords Over to Australian Officers

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 11 — (CP) — Lt.-Gen. Baba, commander of Japanese in British Borneo, and Rear Admiral Saburo Sato, commander of Nipponese naval forces on New Guinea, have surrendered to the Australians, it was announced today.

Maj.-Gen. G. F. Wootten, commander of the Australian 9th Division, accepted the surrender of Baba and his staff in the presence of senior Australian and United States officers. Baba and his staff declined luncheon, turned over their swords and signed the surrender.

Sato reluctantly turned over his sword to Maj.-Gen. H. C. H. Robertson, commander of the Australian division, muttering prayers for forgiveness to his ancestors all the while.

The New Guinea surrender documents were signed aboard the Australian patrol vessel Fairmile anchored in the ruins of the former Japanese seaplane base at Kairiru Island.

Surrender instructions to Japanese commanders in Dutch Borneo are being issued now by the Australian 7th Division.

Order Rescinded On Anti-Freeze

Ottawa, Sept. 11. (CP)—The Prices Board today announced the rescinding of the order that anti-freeze must be labelled to show its chief ingredient, invoked in 1942 when it became necessary to use various substitutes in anti-freeze because of a shortage of ethylene glycol.

The order also provided that sales promotional material must also contain the name of the chief ingredient.

All controls over ethylene glycol anti-freeze were recently removed by the controller of chemicals of the department of Munitions and Supply.

BRACKEN AND LOW WANT REDUCTION WARTIME TAXES

Conservative Leader Asks For Speed in Transition Plan in First Major Speech

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 11—(CP)—Gravity of the problems, domestic and external, confronting Canada in the post-war period is a theme running through speeches delivered in the Throne Speech debate in the House of Commons which today enters its second day.

It received special emphasis yesterday as all party leaders, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Progressive Conservative leader John Bracken, C.C.F. leader M. J. Coldwell and Social Credit leader Solon Low, made their initial offerings of the session.

Both Mr. Bracken and Mr. Coldwell proposed amendments to the address in reply to the Throne Speech which have the effect of want of confidence motions. But there was less of political argument, less re-threshing the issues of the election, than is usual when party leaders speak first in a newly-elected parliament.

Mr. Bracken and Mr. Low both called for reductions in wartime taxes in the firthcoming budget. There was no indication from the taxes in the forthcoming budget. would contain but Finance Minister Ilsley interrupted Mr. Bracken to say his recent prediction that tax cuts would be disappointing, had reference to specific proposals for tax reduction.

Mr. Bracken's amendment condemned the government for alleged failure:

1. To mobilize manpower on a fair basis and prevent disadvantage to overseas personnel.
2. To provide a speedy and effective plan for reconversion with jobs at fair wages for ex-servicemen and war workers.
3. To take effective action on housing.

Campbellford Boy Tells of Japanese Attacking Patients in Hospital

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

Manila, Sept. 11 — (CP Cable)—For many a Canadian released from Japanese prison camps after being captured at Hong Kong Christmas Day, 1941, there's a job here they'd like — bossing a Japanese working party.

One of the first things noted by the prisoners after arriving here yesterday from camps in Japan, where food was slim and work tough, was the healthy-looking Japanese working party which was treated leniently. These Canadians assured their officers they wouldn't ill-treat or shoot the Japanese but they would make sure they "put in a good day's work."

This first group of Canadians to reach Manila appeared in the best of health — but it was due solely to their ability and ingenuity in building illicit kitchen "stills" at the Sumidagawa camp, northeast of Tokyo, they had by theft and construction of ingenious cooking devices provided themselves with more cooked food than issued by the authorized kitchen.

Jap Bestiality

From two others of the men who arrived here came the story of Japanese bestiality in Hong Kong the day of surrender. Rfmn. Don Dainard of Campbellford, Ont., and Bob Durdle of Bonavista, Nfld., are two of the men who were in Stanley Village hospital when wild-eyed, unshaven Japanese burst in, attacked the patients and raped some of the nurses.

Both men, members of the Royal Rifles of Canada, had been wounded shortly before and taken into the hospital. Japanese servicemen broke into the hospital about 5.30 a.m. Christmas day. They searched all servicemen and took their wallets, watches, rings and cigarets.

Durdle still bears two scars from a Japanese bullet which entered his body and emerged from the back of his left shoulder dangerously close to the spine. Dainard, who fell off a cliff during the fighting, was in hospital with a broken ankle.

The Japanese soldiers had no regard for the condition of the patients as they separated officers from other ranks and isolated the nurses. Many patients were beaten with rifle butts and Japanese helmets.

Forty-two Japanese, brandishing revolvers, told the patients they would shoot them or blow them up with grenades if the resistance on the island did not end.

A Canadian transport driver in hospital with a serious wound, was permitted to keep only the top half of his pyjamas when he was made to mount a truck which took him and others to Bowen Road hospital.

Both Heard Screams

While neither Dainard nor Durdle witnessed the rapes which they said lasted all night, both heard screams reaching from other parts of the hospital to the room in which they were locked. Dainard recognized the screams of a British major. He saw the major next day with his face smashed by a rifle butt. A Chinese woman and her child also were dead next day.

One British nurse told the Canadian and Newfoundlander she escaped the fate of her companions merely because she was older. She described the treatment of the other nurses as "terrible torture." Three nurses are believed to have been killed.

Some Japanese officers were present during the atrocities which went on for hours as one Japanese after another trooped in.

Both Dainard and Durdle now have recovered from their wounds but Durdle is suffering eye trouble as a result of the long period he spent in Japanese hands.

Tojo is Critically Wounded in Death Attempt at Home

Shot Himself Before U.S. Officers Could Arrest Him

Tokyo, Sept. 11 — (AP) — Hideki Tojo, Japanese militarist premier who ordered the sneak attack on American forces at Pearl Harbor, shot and critically wounded himself in a suicide attempt today when American officers went to his home to take him to headquarters for questioning.

A Japanese doctor who was called said the bullet wound near the heart was bound to prove fatal — that the former premier's life could not be saved.

An American Army doctor, Capt. James Johnson, who later gave Tojo a blood transfusion, said, however, he had about a 50-50 chance to survive.

Tojo shot himself through the chest with a .32-calibre pistol after identifying himself through a window to the officers and a group of correspondents who went to his home 20 miles from downtown Tokyo.

Refused to Treat Him

The Japanese doctor who was summoned refused to treat Tojo, saying he had no instruments with him and asking why he was called. Tojo, in a stupor, also refused treatment from the Japanese doctor.

Tojo has been portrayed as the most hated man in Japan since the loss of the war, although he once was immensely popular.

The American doctor then was called in.

Capt. Johnson said that the Japanese warmaker's chances for recovery depended on whether the bullet had passed through the lining of the heart or had just missed it. Tojo was in such critical condition that this could not be determined.

He has what Capt. Johnson described as a "sucking chest wound". He bled profusely. Johnson gave him morphine in addition to the transfusion and prepared to move him as soon as possible to an United States Army Evacuation hospital.

Plasma Used.

Plasma, not whole blood, was used, but Johnson said whole blood would be needed to save Tojo's life.

Tojo was sufficiently conscious to wince as the transfusion needle was thrust into his arm and the chest wound was sewed.

Tojo was moved from an easy chair in a sitting room to his bed.

In bed, he muttered until he was placed so he faced a large oil painting of himself overlooking a battlefield, with his staff in the background as he stood on a small bluff.

In the painting, Japanese armored cars were moving down the hill, and in the foreground was a Chinese flag pressed into the mud.

Wanted to Die.

It was about 35 minutes after the shooting that Tojo began speaking as Domei correspondents and other Japanese crowded around him taking down his words.

At one time he muttered "Banzai", the Japanese suicidal-charge order given when battles already are lost. Then he added the Japanese word for "Emperor".

When the Japanese doctor and nurse arrived, Tojo, who was still conscious, exclaimed to them:

"I want to die".

Tojo shot himself just after Gen. MacArthur, Supreme Allied Commander, had ordered both Japanese and American police to arrest him.

Only yesterday he had told two Associated Press correspondents, "You won't see me again."

At the time, the two, Murlin Spencer and Russell Brines, took it that he meant he would give no more interviews.

Officers Seal Rooms.

The American officers immediately after the shooting sealed the rooms in Tojo's fine new country home and impounded his papers.

They expressed regret that he had shot himself, saying that they merely had intended to take him to headquarters for questioning.

When officers and correspondents crowded in, they found the shaven-headed, brown little man sprawled back in a deep chair.

There was a bullet wound in his left chest just below the heart. Tojo was dressed in a white shirt, open at the neck, a pair of olive-green trousers and shiny brown boots with tiny spurs.

On a table near the front of the room lay two sharp knives wrapped in a snow-white hara kiri cloth.

Did Not Have Time.

Apparently Tojo had not had time to use his traditional form of suicide.

Tojo lay in the easy chair and groaned. His eyes were half-closed.

The slight figure shook and he muttered in Japanese. Apparently he was attempting to say that he had written out a statement, but a quick search failed to disclose it.

Former Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, known to the Japanese as the "Razor Blade," headed the government which ordered the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941—an act which President Roosevelt said would "live in infamy."

Tojo took office as Premier when the cabinet of Premier Prince Rumimaro Konoye fell Oct. 17, 1941.

Retained Military Rank

The 61-year-old, scowling bespectacled Tojo was the first Japanese premier to retain his military rank — authorized to do so by a special act of the Emperor.

In his first broadcast as head of the ambitious military government he announced that "Japan was determined to fulfill her ultimate object and to contribute to world peace." But Tojo's firm belief, expressed before that time, belied such an aim. Often he had stated publicly that Japan should have "a government established on military economy."

LIEUT. JEAN WHYTOCK, MADOC, IN ARMY OF OCCUPATION

Lieutenant (N.S.) Jean Whytock daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whytock, Madoc, has written a letter to her parents informing them that she has joined the army of occupation in Germany and it may be some time before she is home again. Miss Whytock has been overseas for the past twenty months and in that time has collected a number of medals, that she may wear on her tunic. She is now the possessor of the 1939-45 star for six months service in a theatre of war, the France-Germany star for being on the continent between D-Day and VE-Day, the Volunteer Service Medal and the clasp for twenty months of overseas duty. Miss Whytock volunteered for Pacific duty but when that was cancelled she joined the army of occupation.

BOY HURT IN FALL FROM MOVING CAR

A ten-year-old child suffered facial and body injuries on the Trent Road a few miles west of the city on Sunday when he accidentally fell out of his father's automobile while it was under motion.

A city resident who is camping near the spot where the accident occurred, said that the boy had been told by his father to open one of the car's rear windows. The boy who was riding in the back seat seized the handle of the door instead of the window and was precipitated to the ground.

Nearby people secured pillows and first aid was rendered. The boy's injuries, however, were found to be not as serious as expected and his father continued on his way to Trenton where he secured medical aid.

The driver of the car was not identified.

ILLICIT PURCHASE PROVES EXPENSIVE

A resident of the northern section of the county thought he had a bargain when he bought a "Mickey Mouse" for four dollars down an alleyway. But it proved to be much more expensive. Police picked him up and in police court today he was fined $100 and costs or three months in jail. He will be a guest of the county for the next twelve weeks.

TIRES ARE STOLEN FROM PARKED CAR

The tire thieving fraternity is at it again.

Saturday night Mrs. John Haley, 375 Front Street parked the family car in a vacant lot at the upper end of Front Street 6 p. m. Saturday night and when she went to get it on Sunday morning, she discovered the vehicle was minus its spare tire and rim, also a front wheel and tire.

The light-fingered members, apparently using their own jack left the car propped up on piles of stones. Police are investigating.

Wesleyan Methodists Mark 4th Anniversary

Wesleyan Methodists marked their fourth Anniversary in this city on Sunday with large congregations in attendance at both the morning and evening services. Rev. Stanley W. Blanchard, president of the Wesleyan Methodist Connection (or Church) of America in Canada, was the special speaker of the day. He was assisted by Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, minister of the Church.

Preaching from Proverbs 29:18, "Where there is no vision the people perish," Rev. Mr. Blanchard impressed upon the minds of his hearers at the morning service the great need in this twentieth century of a spiritual vision. "Too many," said the speaker, "are concerned vastly more about this world's goods, personal ease and physical comforts than they are in the building up of the Church."

Speaking at the evening service from Hosea 10:12, "It is time to see the Lord," the preacher touched on world conditions, the lateness of the hour according to the heavenly timepiece, stressing the great and important need of seeking Christ as a personal Saviour while He may be found.

A special feature of the days services was the singing of the Sunnyside Ladies Quartet who are heard frequently over radio station C.K.C.O. Ottawa. The quartet sang many sacred songs interpreting as many phases and moods of the spiritual life.

The services at the Weslyan Methodist Church are continuing over the next two Sundays in the form of evangelistic meetings with Rev. H. Kielty of Shawville, Quebec, as guest speaker.

War-Scarred Battle Colors Of H. & P. E. Regt. on Display

Emblem of courage, valor, determination and Victory, the war-scarred battle colors of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, expected to arrive home shortly is now on display in the windows of the Hydro Shop on Front Street.

Enemy machine-guns have marked the colors with the scars of war. It was carried in the van of the fighting by those gallant sons of Hastings and Prince Edward counties and neighboring district through the hell of Sicily, Italy, Holland Germany. It has never been lowered nor have enemy hands polluted it.

Carried at the head of the regiment, whose outstanding valor and heroism has marked it as one of the finest fighting infantry units to leave the shores of Canada, the flag has never "bitten the dust."

It has flaunted defiance at the common enemy when the days were dark, and waved gloriously in the many days of triumph.

In its "finest hour" it flew at the head of the regiment as it marched as conquerors out of war-torn Europe, with the arrogant Nazi grovelling in the depths of defeat.

Now it is back in Canada. Residents of the city should pay tribute to this symbol of devotion to duty, of courage in the bitter days and of triumph in victory. It is emblematic of the finest service ever rendered by man to his country, and of those heroic youths who left farm and fireside, school, shop, factory and office to serve as "farmer soldiers" and who have brought undimming fame to not only themselves as gallant soldiers but to the cities, towns, villages and hamlets of this district from whence they came.

History of the Colors.

The former cloth flag flown by the regiment at all points captured had become much the worse for wear, and at the suggestion of Regimental Sergeant Major Angus Duffy, Lieut. Col. A. A. Kennedy, D.S.O., then commanding officer, commissioned the adjutant Captain J. A. Bird to purchase a new flag.

When, in Nov. 1943 the regiment moved into reserve at Castro Pignano, a small town in central Italy, the adjutant and signals officer went to Campobasso. Here the town mayor told them that flags were unobtainable but the Sisters at a nearby convent might be able to assist them.

Calling at the convent the officers were informed by the Mother Superior that it would be impossible to make a flag as material was unobtainable.

Fully determined to get a flag for return to Canada as the battle colors of the regiment, the officers secured a requisition for silk and purchased it at a store. Then they visited the Sisters of Mercy, this time with the local police chief as interpreter.

The Mother Superior finally consented to make the flag within three weeks. A price was agreed upon a case of soap and 1,500 lira to be given the orphanage. The soap was saved from rations and the money ($15) donated by prisoners.

At a concert held in Castro Pignano, the comanding officer formally presented the new flag to the R.S.M. with instructions that he would be responsible for seeing that the battle flag flew in every engagement of the unit. Shortly after, the regiment moved to the Adriatic sector and the colors had its baptism of fire.

With its handsome blue background with the proud emblem of the regiment in gold, the flag has flown at the following battles in which the gallant "Hasty Pees" made history: The bridgehead across the Moro River, San Leonardo; the Ortona Crossroads; the high ground North of Ortona; Villa San Nicola; Villa San Tommasso the Tollo Road; Hill 137; the breakthrough of the Adolf Hitler Line; Pachino; Ragusa; Valquarnera; Cammichele; Assora, Agira; Adrano; Regalberto; Catanzano; Foggia; Crotone; Campobasso; San Stefano; Molise; Frosinene, Castro Pignano.

The battle colors were forwarded by Major Frank Hammond, M.C., of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment to Major Colin Hepburn, Belleville, former officer commanding the regimental wing of the H. and P.E. at Kingston, to be held in trust until the return of the regiment.

On the day of arrival of the unit the battle colors will fly at the head of the unit as it swings along the route of march here.

It will be presented back to the regiment at the regimental dinner to be held in Picton on November 12th.

Three of Smith Quads Have Good Chance to Live

Dunnville, Sept. 11 —(CP)— The Haldimand War Memorial Hospital here reported today that two of the quadruplets born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Smith of Caistor township "are very good" and "we are optimistic about the third, who is a boy." One of the four, a girl, died yesterday afternoon.

Weights of the three surviving babies are three pounds, 15 ounces; three pounds, 7¼ ounces, and three pounds, one ounce. The girl who died weighed three pounds, 10½ ounces.

"The mother is fine and not quite so shocked today," the hospital said.

The 35-year-old mother, wife of a farmer, still is unaware of the death of her tiny daughter. The news was kept from her last night, and photographers were barred from her room in the War Memorial Hospital.

Dr. E. L. McInnis of Dunnville, the attending physician, said late yesterday that the remaining babies—a girl and two boys—were normal and healthy in every respect and had a good chance to live. He said the births were about two weeks premature.

The Smiths have three other children, who are staying at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Esger, Cambro, seven miles from their Caistor centre home. They are Bruce, 5½ years; Ruth, aged four, and Tommy aged 2½ years.

Dr. McInnis said the quadruplets started to arrive at 3 a.m. The girls first and then the boys. The last one was born shortly after six o'clock. He had anticipated a multiple birth, but not more than twins.

He said last night that the mother is "doing nicely."

Fish Hawk Shot By Unknown Man

Police are looking for an individual who shot and killed and took away the large fishhawk that has been making its home in a large tree for the past ten days near the Upper Bridge.

The bird which had been the centre of attraction of crowds of people, met its death when a car pulled up near the tree and, it is reported a man got out, aimed a .22 rifle at the hawk, and brought it down. He then seized his victim placed it in the car and sped away.

Police stated today that they will punish the "killer" to the limit when he is apprehended. The hawk was doing no more harm than catching itself a few fish, and providing a point of interest to residents.

ITALY FIRST TOPIC

Urgent questions were before U. S. Secretary James F. Byrnes, Britain's Ernest Bevin, France's Georges Bidault, the Soviet Union's Vyacheslav M. Molotov and China's Wang Shih-Chieh.

As the meeting opened, diplomats here expressed fear that unrest in Greece might touch off a general strike there and add to the formidable list of knotty questions facing the foreign ministers. This situation was considered especially serious since it comes precisely at the time Regent Archbishop Damaskinos is in London intent upon placing his country's views before the foreign ministers. The Greek attitude on the forthcoming Italian peace treaty is important, since the treaty is the first subject on the agenda of the meeting.

Any flare-up in Greece could easily become the storm centre of an already tense Balkan situation.

How Big Five Will Stand

As the meeting gets under way, this is how the Big Five probably will stand:

Britain: For an Italian peace stripping Italy of war gains, paving the way for Italy's re-entrance into the family of nations; for establishment of more representative government in the Balkans.

The United States: For internationalization of Europe's waterways to assure free commerce across the continent; for general discussion of Pacific area problems dealing with assurance against possible recurrence of aggression.

China: Silent thus far on her views, but believed concerned primarily with Pacific area problems such as Hong Kong. Expected to make clear her intention to remain a first class Pacific power.

Russia: Appears anxious to conclude treaties of peace with former Axis satellites; likely to press for foreign recognition or Romanian, Bulgarian, Hungarian and Austrian governments, and to ask for increased control over the Dardanelles.

France: Reported seeking internationalization of Ruhr industries; interested in settlement of the problem of the Levant; favors internationalization of European waterways.

ESCAPED

Many of the prisoners now are in a pitiable condition. On Aug. 14 food was dropped by American planes but it was badly damaged owing to a parachute failure. Since then they have received none and they are starving and uncared for in the hands of the brutal captors.

Japanese officers at the camp still have their swords bound in white silk, indicating that they would die for the Emperor in any circumstances.

Driven to desperation and maddened by fear and hunger when they were disappointed at not being rescued, scores of prisoners burst out of the camp and started to travel southwards hoping to reach Tokyo. The Japanese however intercepted them with swords and rifles and forced them to march back to the camp, shutting the gates on them.

Food there is unbelievably scarce and unable to bear the shocking conditions any longer, a group of 20 decided to organize an escape party. Risking everything, they escaped by climbing the bitterly cold mountains and ultimately reaching a railway station where they started hitch hiking.

The first man they saw was Maj. C. C. M. McDougall of the Canadian army around whom they danced and sang when they met him on a street in Tokyo.

"Something must be done for those other fellows," their leader said. "Even if they escaped, in their condition they couldn't possibly survive that mountain journey. They'd die one by one as they tried to make it."

When the group's report was presented to army officials, arrangements were made to rescue the forgotten—or unknown—legion immediately. Troops now are on their way to rescue them and it is anticipated that the do-or-die Japanese will submit quietly when confronted by American arms.

Those who escaped were delighted to hear that Wing Cmdr. Leonard Birchill of St. Catharines, Ont., is well and safe. They praised him highly for his splendid work on behalf of the other men while he was a prisoner. He was their commanding officer at one camp and they agreed he was the best commander they had had during their long stay.

"If ever a man earned a decoration for what he did while a prisoner, it was Birchill," said one of the men.

(Wing Cmdr. Birchill, R.C.A.F., won the D.F.C. May 13, 1943, for warning Ceylon authorities of the approach of the Japanese fleet. The warning enabled the defenders to fight off the invaders.

(His warning came while he was flying over the sea and it was the last word heard from him until it was learned he had been taken prisoner. His wife lives at Saint John, N.B.)

Sgt. Routledge Given Water Torture For Refusal to Answer Questions

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War-Correspondent

Manila, Sept. 11 —(CP Cable) — Sgt. R. J. Routledge of Regina, who was among the Canadians taken prisoner at Hong Kong on Christmas Day, 1941, was submitted to torture by Japanese Gendarmerie before he was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment by a court martial. He had served two years of his sentence before being liberated.

Although Sgt. Routledge, a signaller, was wounded by bomb shrapnel in the battle of Hong Kong, he is physically intact and looks fine. He now is in an American military hospital here. He credits his condition to the fact that his long prison term was spent in Stanley Prison at Hong Kong, and in the Canton jail.

He was transferred from the jail at Canton to Samshuipo about two weeks ago. He said he had received only two Red Cross parcels while in Japanese hands. No mail reached him since December, 1941.

The 25-year-old sergeant was arrested on Dominion Day, 1943, some months after he was rereleased from hospital where he had been treated for dysentery and malaria. He had spent time in the hospital previously while leg and arm shrapnel wounds were healing.

At the present it is not possible to explain the circumstances under which Sgt. Routledge was summoned from a Dominion Day sports meet at Samshuipo and was turned over to the infamous Gendarmerie and their Gestapo-like methods, but the full story will be told as soon as possible.

Subjected to Water Torture.

The Regina sergeant was taken to the Gendarmes, who have earned the hate and contempt of every prisoner, and was handcuffed, tied and subjected to the water torture because he refused to answer their questions.

This Japanese method of extracting information consisted of putting the bound victim on his back, placing a towel across his face and pouring water on it from a bucket.

Sgt. Routledge said the Japanese kept putting water on the towel and he was swallowing it against his will until he was on the verge of fainting. Then they'd revive him, ask him if he wanted to change his mind about talking, and repeat the performance.

Four or five Chinese collaborators helped the Gendarmes in the third degree questioning and water treatment which lasted about 1 1-2 hours.

Jumped Upon.

When Sgt. Routledge still refused to talk, a board was placed on his stomach and one of the Gendarmes jumped up and down on it until Routledge said he felt "everything was going to pop." Between periods of questioning, the Gendarmes kept this up until Routledge was on the point of collapse.

Finally the Canadian soldier gave the Japanese information they already knew and in the company of two British prisoners, who also had been tortured and beaten, he was taken to Hong Kong by ferry and locked up in Stanley Prison near the civilian internment camp. He was imprisoned with Chinese convicts at first and the Japanese prisoners later.

Redistribution Postponed Until Next Session

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 11 —(CP)— The government will postpone, at least until next session, any redistribution of the federal electoral districts, the boundaries of which have not been altered since 1933.

Under the British North America Act redistribution should have followed the 1941 census but was postponed because of the war. The result has been that the last three general elections have been fought on the same distribution of constituencies based on the 1931 census. A number of members of parliament interviewed over the weekend were agreed that there were too many urgent matters to look after during the present session and redistribution might well wait.

The basis of redistribution is that Quebec gets 65 members in the House of Commons and the other provinces get representation in proportion to their population in relation to Quebec. Under the 1941 census, Saskatchewan will lose four members dropping from 21 to 17 and Manitoba will lose three dropping from 17 to 14.

Unusual Position.

Ontario occupies an unusual position. Under the constitution no province shall have its representation reduced unless its population as compared with the total population of Canada has decreased "by one twentieth or upwards." This provision saved Ontario from losing representation in the House of Commons in 1933 and will again this time so that it will continue to have 82 members. On the actual population basis the 1941 census figures would give it only 74.

Saskatchewan and Manitoba members may be expected to protest vigorously having their representation in the Commons reduced, on the ground the 1941 census was taken when large numbers of their young people were temporarily out of those provinces in the fighting forces or at war work.

In the past, redistribution committee meetings have been often described as "dog fights." They were held behind closed doors with each party seeking political advantage. Ever since confederation the two old parties have locked in battle every 10 years trying to work out constituencies that would help their candidates.

2nd Canadian Div. Starts to Leave Holland on Wed.

By WILLIAM BOSS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Amsterdam, Holland, Sept. 11 —(CP Cable)—The first step in repatriation of the 2nd Canadian Division— movement from Holland to Britain—will begin on Wednesday and the division is scheduled to leave Holland in roughly half the time taken by the 1st division.

Movement of the 2nd division will overlap that of the 1st from Sept. 12 until Sept. 15, when the final personnel from divisional and brigade headquarters of the Red Patch division will leave.

Men of the 2nd, Dark Blue Patch, division will move through the Nijmegen repatriation camp operated by Lt. Col. Louis Flynn of Ottawa and Kingston, Ont., at the rate of nearly 2,000 daily. The operation is scheduled to be completed by Sept. 25. Upwards of 16,000 men will figure in the move, including three regiments of the former 1st Canadian Armored Brigade — the Ontario Regiment, of Oshawa, and Whitby, Ont.; the Three Rivers Regiment of Three Rivers, Que., and the Calgary Regiment.

Schedule for Leaving.

The schedule under which units are leaving Holland for Britain, en route back to Canada, is as follows:

AS OLD AS YOU FEEL

Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, England — (CP) — Three army veterans whose average age is 80, along with recruits of 1945, took part in the march past when the colors of the 1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment—oldest colors in the British Army—were paraded.

Gen. Hideki Tojo Roundly Hated By The Japanese

By RUSSELL BRINES
(Copyright 1945 by The Associated Press)

Tokyo, Sept. 10 — (AP) —Gen. Hideki Tojo, who as Japan's war-making premier launched the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, declared in an exclusive interview today that the Allied victory now could fix responsibility for starting the war but that history might disagree.

The shaven-headed one-time terror of Asia, who now is living quietly on his comfortable farm outside Tokyo, refused flatly to discuss such questions as whether he expected to be tried as a war criminal and what defence he was preparing, but was willing to talk of many things, in moods ranging from steely-eyed impassivity to hearty laughter.

A little earlier, a formerly high-placed Japanese politician had said Tojo expected to be tried as a war criminal and hoped to accuse the late President Roosevelt of being the world's top war criminal, then commit suicide in traditional hara kiri fashion. Of this Tojo himself sharply refused to speak.

Attitude Expressed

His whole attitude he expressed in this statement:

"Real soldiers fight to the finish in the field. War ends when peace is declared. Each respects an enemy who fights hard and cleanly and so MacArthur has the respect of myself as well as the Japanese people."

Asked who was responsible for starting the war, the man who was premier and virtual dictator of Japan from before Pearl Harbor until the Americans took Saipan, replied:

"You are the victors and you are able to name him now. But historians 500 or 1,000 years from now may judge differently."

Changing the subject, he said that he himself had narrowly escaped death May 25 when a Superfortress fire raid ringed his house with flames.

Roundly Hated

The politician who told of Tojo's plan to accuse Roosevelt of war-responsibility, insisted that the former premier was roundly hated by the Japanese public because he had thus far failed to commit suicide.

The informant begged that he remain anonymous, saying, "If the people knew I visited him they would kill me."

Other sources reported that Tojo had amassed a fortune of millions of yen during his tenure of office, most of its coming from the illicit opium trade in China.

WILL PLAY AT SALZBURG FESTIVAL

Pte. Gilbert Winkler, 20, of Washington, N. J., has the distinction of being the only American ever to play at the Salzburg music festival in Germany. He is pictured at the piano in the hall in Salzburg where he played. He was a member of the 106th U. S. Cavalry group and fought as an infantryman in France and Germany. He was invited by the heads of the festival to play after they had given him an audition. It will be his first formal concert.

With Canada's Naturalists

Toronto, Sept. 11—(CP)—American wood warblers, peculiar to the Americans, lend their vivid paint-dot color to Canada's woodlands. The tiny birds, numerous as sparrows, are at their brightest and best in the spring, their superb plumage giving them the appearance of sporting jewelled wings.

The sharply striped black and white warbler is a common visitor to gardens and has a pleasing song.

The orange-breasted bird with black on top and white beneath is the Blackburnian warbler.

Olive-brown and white warblers are distinguished by their constant call of "Teacher, teacher, teacher.". They build an oven-shaped nest with a door in the side.

The Prothonotary or golden-yellow warbler is not widely known. Seen only in the lower Great Lakes region, it has a golden head, neck and breast, with greyish wings and tail and frequents drowned lands and bushes standing in dead water.

Green-backed, golden faced warblers; sky blue and white ones, chestnut-sided, green, yellow, buff and grey warblers all grace the palette of our Sanadian woodland.

Some rodents ,including the Canadian chipmunk or "Swiss" squirrel are equipped with cheek pouches for carrying acorns, beechnuts or other food to their holes for future consumption.

The capacity of these pouches, however, is insignificant compared to those possessed by the Palestine Hamster whose pouches are capable of expansion sideways and also downwards to the thorax. With pouch filled, the rodent assumes a comical, bloated appearance.

In an X-ray film taken by Dr. A. R. Potvin, radiologist at the Hotel Dieu, Que., a fed rodent was shown with both cheeks distended almost to bursting point extending its mouth to approximately half the length of its body.

Meadow mouse population reached plague proportions this year in the Credit Valley and Niagara districts of Ontario, destroying fruit trees, flowering cherry and crab, spirea, forsythia aand lilac bushes and even fair-sized mountain ash trees.

It is significant that an organized fox hunt was held in the Credit Valley where most damage was done by field mice. Fifteen foxes were killed to save the pheasants for the annual shoot.

The depletion of foxes, hawks and owls who are natural mousers has resulted in the vast increase of rabbits and meadow mice and in turn, the destruction of orchards and garden shrubbery.

One nurseryman near Streetsville, Ont., was immune to mice and rabbits this year and pays tribute to his cat, an excellent mouser. He also thanks two red foxes for keeping the pests away from his stock. The foxes visited his nursery acres throughout the winter hunting rabbits and mice.

Survival of the Fittest

THE TREADMARK OF SAFETY FOR 37 CONSECUTIVE YEARS

It's your safety we mean, when we speak of the Treadmark of Safety. The basic pattern of the Goodyear diamond tread has remained the same year after year . . . unchanged for 37 years. Other tread designs are always changing . . . always "startling", always "marvellous" . . . but never quite good enough to survive.

The simple truth is that no tire maker . . . not even Goodyear . . . has been able to improve the non-skid safety and traction efficiency of that basic diamond-block pattern. The diamond tread continues through the law of "Survival of the Fittest".

Of course, there have been changes in detail to meet progressive changes in motoring conditions; but the basic diamond-block design survives . . . and wherever you have seen it, you have seen the mark of a Goodyear tire.

The diamond tread is only one of many reasons why now, as for 30 years, "More People Ride on Goodyear Tires Than On Any Other Kind".

THE DIAMOND TREAD GRIPS MORE SECURELY IN ALL DIRECTIONS

FORWARD EDGES "brake" against road for quick stops on slippery pavements.

SIDE EDGES check side-slip on crowned roads and soft shoulders.

SIDE EDGES resist fan-tail skids when you brake in emergencies.

REAR EDGES act like cleats for quicker starting; help to prevent spinning in mud and snow.

Your Goodyear dealer not only will keep your present tires in service . . . he also will advise you promptly when you become eligible for new tires. See him . . . regularly.

Next Week the Fair

Next week Belleville's annual fair—this year a Victory Exhibition—will be held.

The outlook is the best in its history. Registration of entries is most encouraging and forecasts not only the largest entry list but the best exhibits and the keenest competition in every branch of the exhibition, livestock, grain, and other produce of the farm.

This will be the first fair since the victory over the Germans and Japanese. Thousands of returned servicemen and women are back home in Canada now and great numbers of these will help to swell the attendance and add to the attraction and pleasures of the annual district fair.

Comment on the progressive spirit of the agricultural society shows the appreciation of the people for the achievements of the fair board. This is recognized by the public and that goes far to assure wholehearted participation in the annual institution of this great late summer and early autumn festival.

Back to Meat Rationing

Once again Canadians are receiving rationed meats. The first time the system was imposed was for the purpose of equality of distribution to the various parts of the Dominion but now the primary purpose is to bring about a diminution of the amount of meat consumed in Canada so that the Dominion may be able to help supply the needs of European peoples who have long known what shortage of meat means. It has also been pointed out that rationing will serve to show that Canada can rightly expect her full share of the commodities which other nations furnish, among them, sugar, tea and vegetable oils.

The newest thing is the token, eight of such being equivalent to one coupon, the token serving as part of a coupon. By providing the token, there is seen an incentive to order only what one needs, as the token will take the place of the unused portion of a coupon.

The brown coupon "M" in Coupon Book No. 5 now comes into service.

Meat rationing is the most complicated of all rationings, of course. There are reasons for this. Every cut of meat differs in weight, each having to be weighed, hence the use of tokens to guarantee the consumer his or her just share of meat products. Meat is a perishable commodity, it is not like tea which can be saved for any length of time, but has accordingly to be bought more often than anything else except such food as bread and milk which are of course not rationed.

Hong Kong

Within less than a hundred years, Hong Kong, the British Crown Colony off the southeast China coast, was built up from the headquarters of a few pirates and fishermen to a great centre of international trade. Its prosperity was based upon geography, free trade and the security of British rule, and it was undoubtedly of great value both to China and to the cultural centre, with students from all over Western nations. In addition it became a China and other foreign countries studying at its university.

Hong Kong comprises Hong Kong Island at the mouth of the Canton river and, on the mainland opposite, the Kowloon peninsula and the New Territories.

Hong Kong Island was ceded to Britain by China under the Treaty of Nanking in 1842 in order that British merchants might have some port in which to refit their ships and establish trading houses. Since the beginning of the century China has been pursuing a rigidly isolationist policy and such external trade as was permitted was confined to the single port of Canton. Other important conditions of the Nanking Treaty provided for the opening to foreign trade of the ports of Canton, Amoy, Foochow, Ningpoo and Shanghai, for the appointment of consular officers on an equal footing with Chinese officials, and for a uniform export and import tariff.

Kowloon was ceded in 1861 for military purposes, Hong Kong being separated from the mainland by only a narrow channel. But by 1898 the increased range of artillery rendered this security inadequate and, following the seizure of Kiaochao by the Germans and of Port Arthur by the Russians, a 99 years' lease was obtained of a larger strip of mainland, since known as the New Territories.

The status of Hong Kong as a Crown Colony was unaltered by the recent treaty relinquishing British extra-territorial rights in China.

In 1937 the total population was just over 1,000,000 of whom all but 22,500 were Chinese. By 1941 the figures had risen, at a rough estimate, to 1,639,327, owing to the great influx of refugees from China. Although the Chinese population was always largely migratory, the number of those settled in Hong Kong was steadily increasing.

The port was the entrepot for a great part of the trade of South China and, except for light duties on alcoholic beverages, tobacco and petroleum, was always a free port. At the height of its prosperity in 1921 672,680 vessels, totalling 43½ million tons, cleared the port. In 1919 imports and exports totalled approximately $625,000,000 but fell in 1938 to approximately $279,600,000 owing chiefly to the war and the insecurity of life and property in China.

The development of Hong Kong did much to open up China's foreign relations. But the influence of Hong Kong on progress in China was perhaps best expressed by the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen when he visited the University in 1923: "I wonder how it is that foreigners can do so much . . . with the barren rock of Hong Kong within seventy or eighty years, while in four thousand years China has no place like Hong Kong . . . Without good government the people can do nothing . . . My fellow students, you and I have studied in this English Colony, and in an English University . . . We must carry this English example of good government to every part of China."

Even More Cordial

(London Daily Telegraph)

As the post-war European situation begins to clarify a little, as the dust of war settles and the shape of the world we are now to live in is seen, it becomes more than ever clear that an essential requisite for stability, at any rate in Western Europe, is unity of purpose on the part of France and Great Britain. The Entente Cordiale needs to be revived, and to be more of an entente and more cordial than it has ever been. As the war has amply demonstrated, in present circumstances no Power, especially if it has an Empire, can stand alone; militarily and economically its resources are insufficient, politically the current of thought and enthusiasm flows too quickly, for self-sufficiency on the old basis of sovereignty to be possible. Grouping has become necessary; and in that France and Great Britain have a common civilization; derived from the same origins, productive of the same culture; in that they have common strategic and imperial interests, they must move together.

Two Wars Compared

(Manchester Guardian)

Instead of great masses of infantry struggling to gain yards under machine-gun fire we have used tanks to gain miles, learning at last—though after perilous neglect—the lesson first taught at Cambrai on November 20, 1917. The change from trench to mobile warfare will possibly account for the different ratio between killed and wounded. In the last war there were rather more than two wounded for each man killed; in this the numbers of killed and wounded are far nearer equality. Perhaps the most striking difference of all between the two wars is the rise in civilian casualties from air attack. We had more civilian casualties here in the United Kingdom than were suffered by the armed forces of any one Dominion; in fact, their numbers—146,760—make one-tenth of the whole Empire's casualties throughout the war. War in all its horror is now beginning to reach far behind the front line.

BEST THINGS

When all things are understood
What is fortune's greatest good?
Wealt hand fame which come and go,
Championships which all must lose?
What when truly men can know,
Would they for their labors choose?
Most of us, through smiles and tears:
Peace and faith throughout the years.

Not the prizes of the few
For the utmost men can do,
But a place with laughter gay,
Time for music, mirth and song,
Childhood — undisturbed at play,
Courage when a plan goes wrong,
Family circle, brave and fine,
Unto these all hearts incline.

Life, from cradle to its close,
Little more than these bestows:
Strength for burdens large or small,
Friends to share what has to be,
Faith in God when sorrows fall,
Laughter when the mind is free,
Life is best with these allowed.
Home, with love and pride endowed,

BRACKEN AND LOW

King Welcomes Bracken.

Mr. King drew a laugh from the House when he extended a welcome to Mr. Bracken and said he had looked forward to making the greeting for 2 1-2 years. Mr. Bracken was elected Progressive Conservative leader in 1942.

Mr. Bracken drew a laugh in turn when he interrupted the Prime Minister and welcomed him as junior member of the House. Mr. King said he took two or three weeks to get back into parliament but Mr. Bracken had taken 2 1-2 years.

Mr. King said much of what the opposition leader said was an echo of what the Progressive Conservative party had been saying "ad nauseam" for a month or two.

Mr. King's speech one of the shortest he has ever made in an important debate, chided Mr. Bracken for what he termed "something in the nature of impetuous party criticism" in the Progressive Conservative amendment. He said the people had recently voted after hearing most of the arguments Mr. Bracken put forward, the war was scarcely ended and no government could satisfy everyone in the transition period.

Going to be More Difficult.

"These problems now facing our country are, in some respects, going to be even more difficult of solition than were the great problems connected with the winning of the war," he said.

"During wartime there was a wealth of patriotism which exhibited itself and for which we cannot be too thankful. But now that the war is over and the world is laboring through a great sea of unrest, following the storm through which it has passed, it is to be expected that many questions will be difficult of solution.

"May I add that those who lend their voices to unnecessary and unjustified agitations help to create a situation which will be much more difficult to meet than they have reason to believe."

Mr. Bracken had mentioned a number of things the Canadian people did not want.

"I do think that the Canadian people made it very clear that they do not want the Tory party—and that, by whatever name it may wish to call itself," said Mr. King.

Mr. King chided the opposition leader for comparing peace-time expenditures with wartime expenditures. The money Canada spent on the war had made Canada great in the world.

No Controversy.

Earlier, after commending Mr. Bracken for calling attention to the need of developing a "will to peace" in all peoples, Mr. King spoke of the legacies of distrust and dissension left by the war and said he was alarmed at signs of attempts to intensify controversy in domestic affairs.

The Progressive Conservative leader, making his first speech in the House, promised constructive criticism from the opposition but called for an end to dictatorial methods and refusal on the part of the government to give the House essential information.

On taxation he said there would be widespread resentment if there were not substantial reductions. The Government, however, was embarking on a great spending program and it was no wonder Finance Minister Ilsley was seeking a way to excuse the government from making the cuts which should be made.

Denies Making Excuses.

Mr. Ilsley rose to deny he was making excuses. He understood Mr. Bracken as referring to election promises but Mr. Bracken said he made no reference to election promises. The Finance Minister said he had used the word "disappointed" in respect to proposals from a delegation that exemptions on income tax be raised and similar demands.

"I want to say with respect to pre-election promises by the government on taxation that those promises were made by me", he added. "When the Budget is introduced I shall be content to leave it to the judgment of the country as to whether they have been carried out".

Welcome Release

"The spontaneous rejoicing of the nation was a welcome release from the discipline of war. But beneath the surface of it all, there lies a sombre undertone of seriousness. Men and women are counting the price of victory, measuring the sorrow and personal loss that all too often visited their homes, and laying plans to try to make the new day a better one....

"The answer of this House to the men who fought and to the men and women who made the equipment with which to fight, as well as to all others, cannot be made in words and high-sounding phrases or in tablets and monuments of bronze and stone. Comprehensive measures to make possible opportunity, useful jobs, needed production and assured security, particularly for those who return from war, for the wounded, and for the dependents of the fallen, is the only answer this parliament can give to those but for whose sacrifice we would not be here. It is needless to add that the same general objective must be our ambition for all others.

Criticises Speech

"And a second answer we must give if we are to be worthy of these days. We must build an economy in which our people will have faith; a democracy in which we can all have confidence and a program for Canada in which, on its fundamentals, we can all be united . . .

"Traditionally," said Mr. Bracken, "the speech from the Throne is supposed to give an outline of the government's policy. The speech before us today is longer, more vague, and has less substance than usual. I have seldom seen a government document which takes up so much space to say so little in so many words . . .

"Belated notice is taken of the acute problem of housing. But the fact is the government's housing program is a flop. The words 'too little and too late' fit the situation perfectly. There has been too much talk and propaganda and too little reality.

Shouldn't be Used as Excuse

"The veterans are to have a charter . . . leaving the program the same and calling it a charter in no way eliminates red tape or humanizes the administration of veterans' affairs, or makes rehabilitation measures more efficient.

"The service and sacrifice of Canadians in the war are to be commemorated by the planned development and beautification, some time in the future, of the national capital. I think the parliament of Canada ought to develop the national capital and its surrounding area so as to worthily represent Canada, without using the excuse of a national war memorial to do it . . .

"The right kind of a memorial to commemorate the service and sacrifice of the men and women who fought is a Canada of tomorrow with jobs, security and opportunity for all . . .

Socialism Not Wanted.

"I come now to another question—that of controls.

"This nation has made clear it does not want socialism. The people are opposed to regimentation. They do not want to have bureaucratic controls in operation any longer than necessary. It is important, however, that the road from control to de-control be an orderly retreat and not a disorderly rout. . . .

"While on the subject of controls, let me deal with one very controversial one. The government yesterday announced the introduction of meat rationing in Canada. I ask the government a simple question, which is being asked by both producers and consumers of meat all over this Dominion: Is meat rationing necessary?

"All will agree that food must be provided for the people of Britain and other countries whose populations have suffered so much in the war we fought together. Let us have no misunderstanding on that point.

"If the government can show the necessity of meat rationing at this time when controls of this kind should normally be removed then we must inquire why such a condition arose and who is responsible for it.

Blame Laid on Govt

"If, to provide meat to Britain, there is need for rationing meat in Canada today, the blame can largely be laid at the door of the government, for its failure to maintain hog production at higher levels. There is being produced in Canada this year much less bacon than a year ago. This is chiefly due to the government's policy of keeping hog prices so far out of line with feed prices as to discourage hog production. . .

"We must not let this immediate problem obscure entirely the long-range picture of livestock marketing. Cattlemen are fearful of the future of their market in the United States. What consideration has the government given to permitting at least token shipments to that country, for the purpose of safeguarding that market for the future. As it is, are we not in danger of losing that export market?

"There is no matter on which there is greater unanimity in Canada than the feeling that there must be some reduction in the rates of income tax. With that view this party is in entire accord. Substantial tax relief is indicated from both Washington and Canberra. . . ."

Coldwell Makes Amendment

Mr. Coldwell's amendment, closely in line with C.C.F. motions at previous sessions, complained of what it said was the government's failure to propose "the fundamental social and economic changes which alone can meet the needs of the peacetime era."

Mr. Coldwell said the government's plans for providing full employment and a high national income were inadequate. Pending the adoption of compensative plans, he urged that lay-off or severance pay of at least $25 a week be provided to displaced workers until they are re-employed and that a similar amount be paid to discharged veterans until they are re-established.

Mr. Coldwell endorsed demands from labor organizations for reconversion pay at the rate of $25 per week and said discharged service personnel should receive the equivalent until they are established in employment. He also urged a raising of wages frozen at sub-standard levels and large-scale public housing projects at low rental.

Wants Further Grants

Mr. Low commended the government for its new proposals on old age pensions but said they should go further. Pensions of $50 a month should be paid to all persons over the age of 60.

After speeches by several private members, State Secretary Paul Martin wound up debate for the night with an elaboration of the government's post-war plans. He said that planning in the complete sense of providing for every contingency as advocated by the C.C.F. could not be effected without loss of liberty.

ADEQUATE BREAKFAST

Everybody except Class B neurotics would like to enjoy the pep, efficiency, resiliency, good posture, good complexion and, if I may mention it without boring you, the good health that depends so much on nutrition.

Good nutrition, depends largely upon the breakfast you eat. If there is sufficient reason to warrant skimping, skipping or wolfing in a hurry any meal that meal should be the mid-day lunch, and then one can coast along on a little or no lunch only if one has started the day with a real breakfast.

A real breakfast for any reasonably healthy youth or adult should invariably include either eggs cooked as you prefer, or ham and eggs, or bacon and eggs, or sausage, or other meat or fish.

It must include a cereal dish or item made of cereal—toast, cornpone, muffin, pancake, waffle, oatmeal, wheat, whatever cereal or "breakfast food" you prefer, but not two such items, as many badly planned for breakfast menus do—for instance a dish of cereal gruel with milk or cream or sugar or fruit or honey and then toast, waffle or roll.

A good breakfast must include not less than a glassful (8 ounces, one-half pint) of milk.

Breakfast should invariably begin with some fresh fruit if fruit is in season or in lieu of fresh fruit or the juice freshly expressed (not overnight refrigerated), fresh or commercially (vacuum process) canned tomato juice, not less than four ounces. Home canned tomato or tomato juice may retain a little of the vitamin C of the fresh tomato, but not enough to depend on, when fresh fruit and fresh vegetables are not available. In lieu of fresh fruit or its juice, fresh or canned tomato or its juice, breakfast should begin with stewed prunes or other dried fruit or canned fruit—supplemented with a vitamin C (ascorbic acid) tablet.

Tea, chocolate, cocoa, coffee? I'm asking you. I must know about that before I accept your invitation to breakfast. What, no coffee? I'm sorry, but I have an important engagement elsewhere. Breakfast without coffee, coffee brewed, not cooked, would be like hell without blazes—cheerless sort of thing, don't you think? Tea, chocolate, cocoa, coffee or other beverage, no matter, you must take your milk first. If you can't or won't drink your half pint of milk first, then at least take some calcium and vitamin D in lieu of the milk.

I have left the choice of cereal or item made of cereal open, but in my opinion the very best breakfast cereal is plain wheat, which you buy by the pound, peck or bushel, from the farmer who grows it, from any miller, feed store, seed store, and crack or grind yourself in your coffee mill or similar household mill. Recipes for preparing it are given in the pamphlet "Wheat to Eat," available on written request (clipping will not do) if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope. Use plain wheat in your everyday dietary and you and your family will enjoy better nutrition.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Too Much Vitamin

Is there any danger in taking, say, five times the amount of vitamin A a person requires for health daily? Can one suffer any ill effect from taking too much of any vitamin? (N.J.)

Answer—No.

Neurotic

Have 20-20 vision in both eyes and wear glasses for eyestrain. Can eye muscles be strengthened by exercises? (J.L.L.)

Answer—I do not understand why you wear glasses at all, with normal vision. Eye exercise is so much hokum, aside from the natural exercise the eyes get in viewing distant and close scenery or objects.

Trench Mouth

Trench mouth (by the way, still prevalent in this community) is an infectious condition which, unlike pyorrhea, will respond to treatment in a few days and be permanently eradicated.

(T. W., D.D.S.)

Answer—Thank you, Doctor. I'd like to present every dentist copies of "Save Your Teeth" (64 page booklet) and "Not All That Gingivitis is Pyorrhea" (12-page pamphlet), provided the dentist sends a stamped envelope bearing his address.

And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days. They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days; but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings."

Next Week the Fair

Next week Belleville's annual fair—this year a Victory Exhibition—will be held.

The outlook is the best in its history. Registration of entries is most encouraging and forecasts not only the largest entry list but the best exhibits and the keenest competition in every branch of the exhibition, livestock, grain, and other produce of the farm.

This will be the first fair since the victory over the Germans and Japanese. Thousands of returned servicemen and women are back home in Canada now and great numbers of these will help to swell the attendance and add to the attraction and pleasures of the annual district fair.

Comment on the progressive spirit of the agricultural society shows the appreciation of the people for the achievements of the fair board. This is recognized by the public and that goes far to assure wholehearted participation in the annual institution of this great late summer and early autumn festival.

Back to Meat Rationing

Once again Canadians are receiving rationed meats. The first time the system was imposed was for the purpose of equality of distribution to the various parts of the Dominion but now the primary purpose is to bring about a diminution of the amount of meat consumed in Canada so that the Dominion may be able to help supply the needs of European peoples who have long known what shortage of meat means. It has also been pointed out that rationing will serve to show that Canada can rightly expect her full share of the commodities which other nations furnish, among them, sugar, tea and vegetable oils.

The newest thing is the token, eight of such being equivalent to one coupon, the token serving as part of a coupon. By providing the token, there is seen an incentive to order only what one needs, as the token will take the place of the unused portion of a coupon.

The brown coupon "M" in Coupon Book No. 5 now comes into service.

Meat rationing is the most complicated of all rationings, of course. There are reasons for this. Every cut of meat differs in weight, each having to be weighed, hence the use of tokens to guarantee the consumer his or her just share of meat products. Meat is a perishable commodity, it is not like tea which can be saved for any length of time, but has accordingly to be bought more often than anything else except such food as bread and milk which are of course not rationed.

Hong Kong

Within less than a hundred years, Hong Kong, the British Crown Colony off the southeast China coast, was built up from the headquarters of a few pirates and fishermen to a great centre of international trade. Its prosperity was based upon geography, free trade and the security of British rule, and it was undoubtedly of great value both to China and to the cultural centre, with students from all over Western nations. In addition it became a China and other foreign countries studying at its university.

Hong Kong comprises Hong Kong Island at the mouth of the Canton river and, on the mainland opposite, the Kowloon peninsula and the New Territories.

Hong Kong Island was ceded to Britain by China under the Treaty of Nanking in 1842 in order that British merchants might have some port in which to refit their ships and establish trading houses. Since the beginning of the century China has been pursuing a rigidly isolationist policy and such external trade as was permitted was confined to the single port of Canton. Other important conditions of the Nanking Treaty provided for the opening to foreign trade of the ports of Canton, Amoy, Foochow, Ningpoo and Shanghai, for the appointment of consular officers on an equal footing with Chinese officials, and for a uniform export and import tariff.

Kowloon was ceded in 1861 for military purposes, Hong Kong being separated from the mainland by only a narrow channel. But by 1898 the increased range of artillery rendered this security inadequate and, following the seizure of Kiaochao by the Germans and of Port Arthur by the Russians, a 99 years' lease was obtained of a larger strip of mainland, since known as the New Territories.

The status of Hong Kong as a Crown Colony was unaltered by the recent treaty relinquishing British extra-territorial rights in China.

In 1937 the total population was just over 1,000,000 of whom all but 22,500 were Chinese. By 1941 the figures had risen, at a rough estimate, to 1,639,327, owing to the great influx of refugees from China. Although the Chinese population was always largely migratory, the number of those settled in Hong Kong was steadily increasing.

The port was the entrepot for a great part of the trade of South China and, except for light duties on alcoholic beverages, tobacco and petroleum, was always a free port. At the height of its prosperity in 1921 672,680 vessels, totalling 43½ million tons, cleared the port. In 1919 imports and exports totalled approximately $625,000,000 but fell in 1938 to approximately $279,600,000 owing chiefly to the war and the insecurity of life and property in China.

The development of Hong Kong did much to open up China's foreign relations. But the influence of Hong Kong on progress in China was perhaps best expressed by the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen when he visited the University in 1923: "I wonder how it is that foreigners can do so much . . . with the barren rock of Hong Kong within seventy or eighty years, while in four thousand years China has no place like Hong Kong . . . Without good government the people can do nothing . . . My fellow students, you and I have studied in this English Colony, and in an English University . . . We must carry this English example of good government to every part of China."

Even More Cordial

(London Daily Telegraph)

As the post-war European situation begins to clarify a little, as the dust of war settles and the shape of the world we are now to live in is seen, it becomes more than ever clear that an essential requisite for stability, at any rate in Western Europe, is unity of purpose on the part of France and Great Britain. The Entente Cordiale needs to be revived, and to be more of an entente and more cordial than it has ever been. As the war has amply demonstrated, in present circumstances no Power, especially if it has an Empire, can stand alone; militarily and economically its resources are insufficient, politically the current of thought and enthusiasm flows too quickly, for self-sufficiency on the old basis of sovereignty to be possible. Grouping has become necessary; and in that France and Great Britain have a common civilization; derived from the same origins, productive of the same culture; in that they have common strategic and imperial interests, they must move together.

Two Wars Compared

(Manchester Guardian)

Instead of great masses of infantry struggling to gain yards under machine-gun fire we have used tanks to gain miles, learning at last—though after perilous neglect—the lesson first taught at Cambrai on November 20, 1917. The change from trench to mobile warfare will possibly account for the different ratio between killed and wounded. In the last war there were rather more than two wounded for each man killed; in this the numbers of killed and wounded are far nearer equality. Perhaps the most striking difference of all between the two wars is the rise in civilian casualties from air attack. We had more civilian casualties here in the United Kingdom than were suffered by the armed forces of any one Dominion; in fact, their numbers—146,760—make one-tenth of the whole Empire's casualties throughout the war. War in all its horror is now beginning to reach far behind the front line.

BEST THINGS

When all things are understood
What is fortune's greatest good?
  Wealt hand fame which come and go,
    Championships which all must lose?
  What when truly men can know,
    Would they for their labors choose?
Most of us, through smiles and tears:
Peace and faith throughout the years.

Not the prizes of the few
For the utmost men can do,
  But a place with laughter gay,
    Time for music, mirth and song,
  Childhood — undisturbed at play,
    Courage when a plan goes wrong,
Family circle, brave and fine,
Unto these all hearts incline.

Life, from cradle to its close,
Little more than these bestows:
  Strength for burdens large or small,
    Friends to share what has to be,
  Faith in God when sorrows fall,
    Laughter when the mind is free,
Life is best with these allowed.
Home, with love and pride endowed,

BRACKEN AND LOW

King Welcomes Bracken.

Mr. King drew a laugh from the House when he extended a welcome to Mr. Bracken and said he had looked forward to making the greeting for 2 1-2 years. Mr. Bracken was elected Progressive Conservative leader in 1942.

Mr. Bracken drew a laugh in turn when he interrupted the Prime Minister and welcomed him as junior member of the House. Mr. King said he took two or three weeks to get back into parliament but Mr. Bracken had taken 2 1-2 years.

Mr. King said much of what the opposition leader said was an echo of what the Progressive Conservative party had been saying "ad nauseam" for a month or two.

Mr. King's speech one of the shortest he has ever made in an important debate, chided Mr. Bracken for what he termed "something in the nature of impetuous party criticism" in the Progressive Conservative amendment. He said the people had recently voted after hearing most of the arguments Mr. Bracken put forward, the war was scarcely ended and no government could satisfy everyone in the transition period.

Going to be More Difficult.

"These problems now facing our country are, in some respects, going to be even more difficult of solution than were the great problems connected with the winning of the war," he said.

"During wartime there was a wealth of patriotism which exhibited itself and for which we cannot be too thankful. But now that the war is over and the world is laboring through a great sea of unrest, following the storm through which it has passed, it is to be expected that many questions will be difficult of solution.

"May I add that those who lend their voices to unnecessary and unjustified agitations help to create a situation which will be much more difficult to meet than they have reason to believe."

Mr. Bracken had mentioned a number of things the Canadian people did not want.

"I do think that the Canadian people made it very clear that they do not want the Tory party—and that, by whatever name it may wish to call itself," said Mr. King.

Mr. King chided the opposition leader for comparing peace-time expenditures with wartime expenditures. The money Canada spent on the war had made Canada great in the world.

No Controversy.

Earlier, after commending Mr. Bracken for calling attention to the need of developing a "will to peace" in all peoples, Mr. King spoke of the legacies of distrust and dissension left by the war and said he was alarmed at signs of attempts to intensify controversy in domestic affairs.

The Progressive Conservative leader, making his first speech in the House, promised constructive criticism from the opposition but called for an end to dictatorial methods and refusal on the part of the government to give the House essential information.

On taxation he said there would be widespread resentment if there were not substantial reductions. The Government, however, was embarking on a great spending program and it was no wonder Finance Minister Ilsley was seeking a way to excuse the government from making the cuts which should be made.

Denies Making Excuses.

Mr. Ilsley rose to deny he was making excuses. He understood Mr. Bracken as referring to election promises but Mr. Bracken said he made no reference to election promises. The Finance Minister said he had used the word "disappointed" in respect to proposals from a delegation that exemptions on income tax be raised and similar demands.

"I want to say with respect to pre-election promises by the government on taxation that those promises were made by me", he added. "When the Budget is introduced I shall be content to leave it to the judgment of the country as to whether they have been carried out".

Welcome Release

"The spontaneous rejoicing of the nation was a welcome release from the discipline of war. But beneath the surface of it all, there lies a sombre undertone of seriousness. Men and women are counting the price of victory, measuring the sorrow and personal loss that all too often visited their homes, and laying plans to try to make the new day a better one....

"The answer of this House to the men who fought and to the men and women who made the equipment with which to fight, as well as to all others, cannot be made in words and high-sounding phrases or in tablets and monuments of bronze and stone. Comprehensive measures to make possible opportunity, useful jobs, needed production and assured security, particularly for those who return from war, for the wounded, and for the dependents of the fallen, is the only answer this parliament can give to those but for whose sacrifice we would not be here. It is needless to add that the same general objective must be our ambition for all others.

Criticizes Speech

"And a second answer we must give if we are to be worthy of these days. We must build an economy in which our people will have faith; a democracy in which we can all have confidence and a program for Canada in which, on its fundamentals, we can all be united . . .

"Traditionally," said Mr. Bracken, "the speech from the Throne is supposed to give an outline of the government's policy. The speech before us today is longer, more vague, and has less substance than usual. I have seldom seen a government document which takes up so much space to say so little in so many words . . .

"Belated notice is taken of the acute problem of housing. But the fact is the government's housing program is a flop. The words 'too little and too late' fit the situation perfectly. There has been too much talk and propaganda and too little reality.

Shouldn't be Used as Excuse

"The veterans are to have a charter . . . leaving the program the same and calling it a charter in no way eliminates red tape or humanizes the administration of veterans' affairs, or makes rehabilitation measures more efficient.

"The service and sacrifice of Canadians in the war are to be commemorated by the planned development and beautification, some time in the future, of the national capital. I think the parliament of Canada ought to develop the national capital and its surrounding area so as to worthily represent Canada, without using the excuse of a national war memorial to do it . . .

"The right kind of a memorial to commemorate the service and sacrifice of the men and women who fought is a Canada of tomorrow with jobs, security and opportunity for all . . .

Socialism Not Wanted.

"I come now to another question—that of controls.

"This nation has made clear it does not want socialism. The people are opposed to regimentation. They do not want to have bureaucratic controls in operation any longer than necessary. It is important, however, that the road from control to de-control be an orderly retreat and not a disorderly rout. . . .

"While on the subject of controls, let me deal with one very controversial one. The government yesterday announced the introduction of meat rationing in Canada. I ask the government a simple question, which is being asked by both producers and consumers of meat all over this Dominion: Is meat rationing necessary?

"All will agree that food must be provided for the people of Britain and other countries whose populations have suffered so much in the war we fought together. Let us have no misunderstanding on that point.

"If the government can show the necessity of meat rationing at this time when controls of this kind should normally be removed then we must inquire why such a condition arose and who is responsible for it.

Blame Laid on Govt

"If, to provide meat to Britain, there is need for rationing meat in Canada today, the blame can largely be laid at the door of the government for its failure to maintain hog production at higher levels. There is being produced in Canada this year much less bacon than a year ago. This is chiefly due to the government's policy of keeping hog prices so far out of line with feed prices as to discourage hog production. . . .

"We must not let this immediate problem obscure entirely the long-range picture of livestock marketing. Cattlemen are fearful of the future of their market in the United States. What consideration has the government given to permitting at least token shipments to that country, for the purpose of safeguarding that market for the future. As it is, are we not in danger of losing that export market?

"There is no matter on which there is greater unanimity in Canada than the feeling that there must be some reduction in the rates of income tax. With that view this party is in entire accord. Substantial tax relief is indicated from both Washington and Canberra. . . ."

Coldwell Makes Amendment

Mr. Coldwell's amendment, closely in line with C.C.F. motions at previous sessions, complained of what it said was the government's failure to propose "the fundamental social and economic changes which alone can meet the needs of the peacetime era."

Mr. Coldwell said the government's plans for providing full employment and a high national income were inadequate. Pending the adoption of compensative plans, he urged that lay-off or severance pay of at least $25 a week be provided to displaced workers until they are re-employed and that a similar amount be paid to discharged veterans until they are re-established.

Mr. Coldwell endorsed demands from labor organizations for reconversion pay at the rate of $25 per week and said discharged service personnel should receive the equivalent until they are established in employment. He also urged a raising of wages frozen at sub-standard levels and large-scale public housing projects at low rental.

Wants Further Grants

Mr. Low commended the government for its new proposals on old age pensions but said they should go further. Pensions of $50 a month should be paid to all persons over the age of 60.

After speeches by several private members, State Secretary Paul Martin wound up debate for the night with an elaboration of the government's post-war plans. He said that planning in the complete sense of providing for every contingency as advocated by the C.C.F. could not be effected without loss of liberty.

ADEQUATE BREAKFAST

Everybody except Class B neurotics would like to enjoy the pep, efficiency, resiliency, good posture, good complexion and, if I may mention it without boring you, the good health that depends so much on nutrition.

Good nutrition, depends largely upon the breakfast you eat. If there is sufficient reason to warrant skimping, skipping or wolfing in a hurry any meal that meal should be the mid-day lunch, and then one can coast along on a little or no lunch only if one has started the day with a real breakfast.

A real breakfast for any reasonably healthy youth or adult should invariably include either eggs cooked as you prefer, or ham and eggs, or bacon and eggs, or sausage, or other meat or fish.

It must include a cereal dish or item made of cereal—toast, cornpone, muffin, pancake, waffle, oatmeal, wheat, whatever cereal or "breakfast food" you prefer, but not two such items, as many badly planned for breakfast menus do—for instance a dish of cereal gruel with milk or cream or sugar or fruit or honey and then toast, waffle or roll.

A good breakfast must include not less than a glassful (8 ounces, one-half pint) of milk.

Breakfast should invariably begin with some fresh fruit if fruit is in season or in lieu of fresh fruit or the juice freshly expressed (not overnight refrigerated), fresh or commercially (vacuum process) canned tomato juice, not less than four ounces. Home canned tomato or tomato juice may retain a little of the vitamin C of the fresh tomato, but not enough to depend on, when fresh fruit and fresh vegetables are not available. In lieu of fresh fruit or its juice, fresh or canned tomato or its juice, breakfast should begin with stewed prunes or other dried fruit or canned fruit—supplemented with a vitamin C (ascorbic acid) tablet.

Tea, chocolate, cocoa, coffee? I'm asking you. I must know about that before I accept your invitation to breakfast. What, no coffee? I'm sorry, but I have an important engagement elsewhere. Breakfast without coffee, coffee brewed, not cooked, would be like hell without blazes—cheerless sort of thing, don't you think? Tea, chocolate, cocoa, coffee or other beverage, no matter, you must take your milk first. If you can't or won't drink your half pint of milk first, then at least take some calcium and vitamin D in lieu of the milk.

I have left the choice of cereal or item made of cereal open, but in my opinion the very best breakfast cereal is plain wheat, which you buy by the pound, peck or bushel, from the farmer who grows it, from any miller, feed store, seed store, and crack or grind yourself in your coffee mill or similar household mill. Recipes for preparing it are given in the pamphlet "Wheat to Eat," available on written request (clipping will not do) if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope. Use plain wheat in your everyday dietary and you and your family will enjoy better nutrition.

Mayor to Proclaim Holiday On Day of Arrival of H. & P. E. Regt. in City From Overseas

Council Repeals By-Law Transferring Portion of Firemen's Park to Canadian Legion Branch

Mayor Frank Follwell will proclaim a Civic Holiday on the date and day of the arrival of the H.& P.E. Regiment in this city, it was unanimously decided at the regular meeting of the City Council on Monday evening, when Ald. H. J. Clarke presided as Mayor, the incumbent of that office being on his holidays. The Mayor will request in the proclamation that all restaurants in the city remain open on the Civic Holiday to cater to the visiting public and $300 was voted to the committee in charge of the arrangements to help defray the expenses. The meeting was not concluded until the midnight hour and so divergent were the members on the different questions brought before them that no less than four yeas and nays were taken during the session. The council did a right about face on the transfer of a portion of Firemen's Park to the Canadian Legion for the purpose of erecting a community hall but the action was taken after the legal aspects were investigated.

Suggestion Opposed

The members were of the opinion that the near exact time of the arrival of the Regiment in Belleville should be obtained and Ald. Clapp wanted the holiday to come the day after the arrival providing it was late in the afternoon but the majority opposed this move and believed that the day of arrival, no matter when that would be should be the Civic Holiday. In repealing the by-law that transferred the portion of Firemen's Park to the Legion, the members were agreed that they acted in good faith and were still prepared to transfer the property providing the way could be cleared legally. The question will most likely come up again in council. Ald. Trudeau in the chair for the committee of the whole stated that it was a question as to whom the land was vested and if it was vested in the Parks Commission, the permission of that body was required before the land could be transferred.

Alderman States Position

Ald. McDougall stated his position in voting against the proposal that he did not believe it was a fair price for the land and he believed that if a larger price had been demanded there would not have been an interim injunction issued. Ald. Armstrong did not agree with that suggestion. Ald. Butler stated that two weeks ago Thursday night when the Legion members attended the committee meeting asking for action that he along with the whole council was in favor of transferring the property but "I pointed out in my opinion the conveyance to the Legion should be set forth at a fair value for the property conveyed and I definitely opposed supporting any proposal to convey the property to them that did not set forth in deed a fair market value and that if the council wanted to assist the Legion, it was clearly set forth in the Municipal Act, the proper procedure by which it could be done. I think we put our heads in a bear trap and when we made the move we did, the people who were opposed to the deal closed the trap. There is a legal way to proceed and I think we should be sure of our ground the next move we make with regards to this matter. Most of the members agreed that the City Solicitor had advocated that a bigger price would be a fair deal. In repealing the by-law the yeas and nays were asked with the following result: Yeas, Aldermen Butler, Chamberlain, Clapp, Clark; Follwell, Harvey, Trudeau and Woodley. Nays, Aldermen Armstrong Hyde, Thompson and Wilbur.

Lengthy Discussion

Considerable discussion resulted from the recommendation passed "that Frank Sparks, the city foreman be given a week's vacation with pay". Ald. Clapp opposed this move quite strenuously asking how many employees that had not served a year with the city had been given the same consideration and also wanted to know if the council was not setting a precedent. Ald. Trudeau explained that Mr. Sparks was a salaried man and other employees in the public works were on an hourly rate and that Mr. Sparks was always willing to come out after hours if called and assist with the work without being given extra pay. Ald. Armstrong was opposed to the move stating that Mr. Sparks had not served a year and that he was getting $8 per week more than his predecessor. "I think the hourly rated men should be treated the same as the salaried men," said the Alderman. After the motion was passed the yeas and nays were called and Aldermen Butler, Chamberlain, Clarke, Follwell, Harvey, Hyde, Wilbur and Woodley voted for the motion and Aldermen Allin, Armstrong, Clapp, Thompson opposed with Thompson qualifying his vote.

Motion Introduced.

The matter was not closed as far as Alderman Clapp was concerned because he introduced a motion at the close of the session "That this council be furnished with particulars of present arrangements re-holidays of hourly rated men of the Public Works Department and that this information be submitted before any further holidays be granted to any employee of this department other than those entitled to same under present regulations approved by council". This information will be furnished at the next committee meeting the Chairman of Public Works declared. Another question that caused considerable discussion and a recorded vote was the sale of a piece of property east of Stephens-Adamson Company to C. M. Partridge and St. G. Hurlbut for the sum of $100. Ald. Butler protested this sale until a committee had been appointed to investigate the property because he believed the land was part of the Beach on the Bay of Quinte. Ald. Follwell also opposed the sale and opined that a driveway might some time be built from the dock to the hospital along the water front and this would not be possible if the land was sold.

Disapproved by Department.

Ald. Armstrong stated that the Beaches' proposition had the disapproval of the Department of Health and he did not believe it ever could be made into a perfect beach for bathing because of the pollution of the water in that area. "We have been clamoring for industries and I think this is the proper location for the brick and tile plant that the men propose to build", said the Alderman. Ald. Follwell said: "I know that the beach has been condemned but with the sewage disposal plant being built it will remedy the situation".

Ald. Armstrong:—"If we separate our perishable garbage from the ashes we could have nearly thirty-three acres of a fine park near Zwick's Island by filling in that land.

Ald. Allin:—"I think a committee should be formed. I favor industries coming to the city but I think we should reserve some rights".

Ald. Thompson:—"I don't think we shall ever live to see the day when that property will be used as a park and if we don't get industries we will never have parks".

In Favor of Selling.

Ald. Harvey—"The beach is worse than it has ever been and I put in a lot of time down there with Reg Moncrief but I do not believe that a proper beach can ever be made in that location and I am heartily in favor of having the industry come to the city".

Ald. Chamberlain — "There never will be a beach there and the time has come to give some of this property to industries".

Ald. Clapp—"I am in favor of forming a committee and have it bring in a report and I am willing to abide by the decision of the committee".

Ald. Butler at this point moved an amendment that a committee be formed and it was defeated. The Yeas and Nays were asked for and were —Yeas: Aldermen Allin, Follwell, Butler and Clapp and Nays: Aldermen Armstrong, Chamberlain, Clark, Harvey, Hyde, McDougall, Thompson, Trudeau, Wilbur and Woodley. The motion then carried to sell the property and Ald. Butler asked for the Yeas and Nays on the question and the vote recorded was the exact opposite to the one taken previously. Ald. McDougall then recommended "that Dufferin Avenue from the railway track to the bay shore be closed" and this was passed. The street from Dundas Street to the railway has been closed.

Motion Turned Down.

Ald. Follwell introduced a motion "that the council purchase 20 copies of the History of Belleville at a cost of $3.75 each to be used for publicity purposes". Ald. Thompson was against spending the money for this purpose but Ald. Follwell argued that the Industrial Commission had been given $2,000 for publicity purposes for a booklet and he believed that much publicity would be derived if these books were sent to the nineteen cities of the United States named Belleville. Ald. Allin wanted the population of these towns given before he would vote for the expenditure and Ald. Clark thought it would be a waste of money. Ald. Chamberlain argued that the books would not be read but Ald. Follwell still was insistent that the publicity derived would bring dollars to Belleville. The motion was lost and the Yeas and Nays were asked being recorded Yeas Butler, Follwell, McDougall, Trudeau and Nays: Aldermen Allin, Armstrong, Chamberlain, Clapp, Clark, Hyde, Woodley, Thompson, Wilbur, Harvey.

Call For Tenders.

Tenders will be called for the building of a picket, painted fence along the westerly boundary of the Tourist Camp, while the fence located at Alexander and Hillcrest Avenue will be removed and located seven feet from its present location. This would bring the fence behind the bushes and not interfere with the children's playground. Ald Hyde was definitely opposed to changing the fence. The council concurred in the committee's report and will ask the Parks Board to concur in their resolution. The department of Public Works will ask for tenders to excavate the soil and install a sewer and back fill on Purdy Street. This work will be done under the Local Improvement Act. Mr. Ashbury was granted permission to pay 50 per cent of the cost of construction of a sewer and the remaining 50 per cent to be paid in six months and the necessary agreement to protect the city be prepared by the Solicitor for signature. The City Solicitor was also asked to take the necessary procedure to secure title of a lot south of College Street.

Reliance Given Contract.

The Reliance Industries was given the contract to supply the necessary manhole coverings at $5.23 per cwt. as quoted by them in tender. Two trees in front of the R. P. White residence on North Front were requested to be removed and a committee of Aldermen Hyde, Armstrong, Clapp and Harvey was appointed to investigate the condition and report back to council for action. Ald. Trudeau promised that wire would be placed from the top of the railing to the bridge level on the overhead bridge on North Front Street to protect the children from falling to the track after a request had been made by the Board of Education. Under the heading of inquiries Ald. Allin asked "what had become of the by-law to install floodlights at the fair grounds? And was informed the by-law had been given two readings by council and was now at the Public Utilities office. The same Alderman also asked for the detailed expenses of every committee, that went out of town since the first of the year. Ald. Clarke stated the information would be given.

Claimed Hedges Dangerous.

Ald. Chamberlain stated that hedges at the corner of Dundas and Bleecker Avenue and at the corner of Chatham and Bridge Street east were dangerous to traffic and asked if something mould be done. He was informed the hedges were on private property and nothing could be done but Ald. Trudeau promised he would have his employees interview the owners and see if the hedges could not be cropped lower. Ald. Woodley asked about the stop signs that were in poor condition about the city and Ald. Trudeau explained they were hard to get at the present time but that some were coming through and they would all be repaired and new ones placed where necessary. Ald. Harvey asked about the weeds on Howard Street and Ald. Trudeau explained that it was difficult to get additional help but that an extra gang was now on and all weeds would be attended to. The chairman was also asked about the snowplow equipment and he stated that the snowplow would he here in plenty of time, that one tractor had already arrived and second one had been re-ordered. Ald. Clarke inquired if the meeting between the townships and the city had been arranged respecting the fire equipment and Ald. Woodley stated he was waiting for the Mayor to return so that he could be present at the meeting with county officials.

A number of by-laws conveying property, releasing covenants and extension of the building by-laws were passed through the various stages.

To Investigate Roofing

The chairman of market and city property is to investigate the condition of the slate roofing on the city hall and report back. The district assessors were granted permission to use the council chamber for their meeting this month. The offer of $100 for a piece of property east of the Stephens Adamson Company from C. M. Partridge and St. C. Hurlbut was accepted. Another piece of property on Myers Street was sold to Fred Morbey for $25. The restriction by-law will be amended to allow the Upper Canada News Company to erect their warehouse in accordance with their plans, provided they meet the requirements of the building by-laws.

A further amount of $200 will be expended by the Public Works department in removal of several dead trees as outlined in the report of the city engineer under date of Sept. 6th. The Quinte Motors were granted permission to erect a sign as requested subject to approval of the City Engineer. The city engineer was asked for a report as to whether the roadway property from Hillcrest Ave. to Great St. James St. was deeded to Mr. Trakes and whether a permit was issued for the building of a swimming pool, also whether it was inspected as to construction and who filled the same with water.

Committee Named

A committee of Mayor Follwell, Aldermen Trudeau, Armstrong, Clapp and the city engineer was appointed to consider the replacements of the city sidewalks and the removal of certain city boulevards pursuant to suggestions contained in the comptroller's report. The application of H. W. Gourley Motors to erect a sign over their property at 169 Pinnacle St. was granted, subject to approval of the city engineer. Aldermen McDougall and Armstrong along with the Mayor will attend the Ontario Mayors' Convention at Kirkland Lake the latter part of the month.

Her excuse—she thought Americans would enjoy her music and laugh at her propaganda. In that, Miss Toguri was quite right.

Many of the members present volunteered to help in meeting trains of returned soldiers. Mrs. Wilson spoke of an appeal of the Jesuit Mission for clothing, which will be brought to John Street High School to be packed.

EVENING AUXILIARY

The Evening Auxiliary of the Tabernacle United Church held its first meeting since June at the home of Mrs. Arnold Wessells, 97 Station Street, Friday evening, Sept. 7. In the absence of Miss Delia Johnston, president, Mrs. George Stanton, vice president, presided at the meeting. The meeting was opened with a hymn, followed by prayer. The new study book pertaining to Africa was discussed, each member taking part in the discussion. At the conclusion of the business period the annual missionary bale was packed after which delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. Mrs. Stanton invited the Auxiliary to meet at her home for the next meeting.

AIKENS' W.M.S.

3rd Sidney.—The August meeting of the Aikens' Woman's Missionary Society was held at the church, on Wednesday afternoon. Though the attendance was smaller than usual, it proved to be a very helpful meeting, introducing the 1945-46 study program on Africa. "Why has the world's spotlight been turned on Africa", was the opening question. The war is the answer which comes to one's mind. The battle of North Africa, and her importance as an invasion base are now matters of history. With the military necessity now at an end, we find the spotlight still on Africa Statesmen seeking a basis for world security and peace, are considering the matter of colonies; and of access to raw materials and the need for a solution to the problem which presents itself when one realizes the ownership of Africa by France, Portugal, Spain, the Belgian Congo, Great Britain, the joint rule of the Anglo Egyptian Sudan and the countries where the Africans have self-government. Through this study it is expected the members will become familiar with Africa, her country and peoples; with the missionary work there, and the great need for more workers, new paths of knowledge will be discovered concerning Africa's place in the community of nations and the part the Christian church of Africa plays in the World Church of Christ.

During the business part of the meeting, plans were made for a social evening at the church, early in October, when lantern slides will be shown on missionary work in Africa.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Soldier Asks Wife to Write Less Often — Naturally Suspicion Aroused.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married six years and we have two children. My husband is in the Army, and recently wrote me not to write too often and that he wouldn't write often either. I can't understand it, as he used to write every day. He's been in the service only three months. I love my husband and wouldn't want anything to come between us.

Sometime ago my husband fell in love with a certain girl but she told him to stick to his wife. I'm sure he meets many girls who would not say this to him, but would accept his attentions, even though married. I've always let him have his own way about everything, and although he's a jealous man, I never give him cause to doubt my love. Do you think he may again be falling in love with someone else, which causes him to ask me to write less often?

Puzzled Wife.

Your husband evidently belongs to a very susceptible type of man, judging from what you tell me in your letter, which unfortunately is too long to print. It looks as if he had again met some temporary fate. You've had these experiences before and come through them by not taking them too seriously, or restorting to nagging. Just follow this procedure again.

No matter how ardent a skirt-chaser a man may be, children prove to be a pretty steady anchor in marital upheavals. Disregard his request that you write less often. Write as often as you please—cheerful, amusing letters, telling him about the children, happenings in the neighborhood, etc. Doubtless, he'll come out of this last case of day-dreaming as he has out of other affairs.

Wife Makes His Home Just a Place For Cats and Dogs.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married eight years to my wife who has T.B. but she's not so ill that she can't be some company to me, if she only would. She won't go anywhere but to the movies. Her illness seems to be the only thing that interests her. Home is just a place for cats and dogs which makes the house smell like a zoo.

She has a bad temper, hates company, and I have to go places by myself to get companionship. She could go out with me as I make good money, but what good is it when I have no pal? We have no children. I'm in my early thirties and think I'm entitled to a regular home.
vice, but didn't on account of her vice, but didnt on account of her illness, although she could have stayed with her sister. It seems money is all she wants, and yet she doesn't enjoy it. Please advise me how I can spend my time out. I enjoy sports.

Pittsburg.

Don't you think it would be a good idea for your wife's doctor to give her what is known as a good talking to, and try to bring her to a more normal frame of mind? He would know to what extent she could go out with you and keep within the safety zone. The fact that she enjoys going to the movies proves that she hasn't lost all interest in amusement.

It might have been a solution to your problem if you had enlisted, though she might have found it hard to manage on an allowance.

I'm glad you like sports. They certainly offer a wide field of enjoyment.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Help Yourself to the Beauty Feast.

Woman, to thine own self be true! Forget papa and the children now and then, for the sake of your own glorification. Shine up your hair. Stand among the good-lookers. Pull up your backbone. Get a saucy hat and a new lipstick. Chase to the beauty works for a strictly 1945 hair-do. March with the pulchritude parade!

There are women who live in a frenzy of efficiency, yet never turn their gifts and talents in their own direction. They seem not to know what can be done in the way of appearance improvement. They trail through the shops in a state of dreary dowdiness, wondering how it happens that the women who pass them look so smart.

Already intelligent, they could easily learn a little bit more, make themselves prettier pictures as they sit at the dinner table with daddy and the kids. They know how to tinker with the water heater when it doesn't work. They are right on deck when the man comes to service the refrigerator. Listen to their intelligent questions when they interview the upholsterer, the electrician, the grocer. They keep their houses in order, everything shipshape, except themselves, poor misguided dears, never thinking that they themselves should be the chief ornaments of their homes.

Pull up your backbone. Get a saucy hat and a new lipstick.

They're smart, they're intelligent, and yet they tag around looking like stepsisters to scarecrows. You know the type. Drop into the home of one of them in the morning. She's wearing a soiled housedress that needs a few stitches. Her hair is a mess. She never has a session at the beauty shop. She's a demon housekeeper, and housekeeping is her life. Fine! An orderly house is a joy. But not when there's an untidy, self-neglected woman in it.

The good-looking women who make this world decorative were not all born that way. Most of them have made themselves attractive to the eye by using their heads.

They are inspired to make the best of themselves by a feeling that to look well is to have self respect and also the admiration of other people. It is their desire and pleasure to make a good impression. For the sake of the family they must be at their best.

To believe that beauty is purely spiritual is to receive a derisive laugh from all concerned, especially if fingernails need attention, or if the complexions and hair look as if they should be sent to the dry cleaner.

Say what you will, all of us are sized up by our appearance. If a girl looks sloppy there's something lacking, no matter how smart she may be.

Good grooming, scrupulous cleanliness, fastidiousness in dress, the modern touch, give a woman confidence. They are worthwhile. They're important. They're necessary in the business of living.

Teen-Age Beauty Program

Shirley Temple takes her beauty rituals seriously.

• By HELEN FOLLETT

IT would seem that the teen-age idea of style and super-duper charm is sloppy attire. It is a laugh. Boys say they hate to see the pretty ones in skirts. But does that make any difference? It does not. Which goes to prove, if it proves anything, that the modern young woman does not dress to please the modern young man, but to please herself.

Girls may not care much about clothes, but there are other details that must not be overlooked—care of the nails, hair, complexion, attention to good posture. The common, garden variety of beauty ills of adolescence aren't particularly serious, but they must be avoided or if they are present, must be kept in hand.

Oiliness of Skin

There is a tendency to excessive oiliness of the skin that may bring on blackheads and eruptions. The most powerful weapon is soap, which should be used freely twice a day. Be fussy about the wash cloth. A soiled wash cloth is an abomination. Rinse all the suds away. If the sebaceous glands are over-active, lave the flesh with witch hazel after the morning face washing.

Many girls do their own shampooing, having no desire to waste allowances on beauty shop attentions. The hair washing must be thorough. Three soapings, three rinsings; no fewer than that.

Just what loose, sloppy mocassins are going to do to youthful feet, we cannot predict. It would not do any good anyway, if the girls are bent on wearing them. Chances are that arches will weaken, that feet will spread, be even larger than they are now—and that's something.

Gym work in school should keep young bodies in good condition, but we hear from physical directors that girls, many of them, assume the slouchy pose, believing it is arty. Too bad. Poor posture is a health menace, in time will bring on thickened waistlines and rounded shoulders.

The Marry-Go-Round

Postscripts To Love.

When a girl thinks she needs a psychoanalist, you can safely gamble that what she really needs is a new love interest.

Sooner or later, a winning technique with women gets a man in a "spot" where it is no longer of any use to him; he has played the game once too often—and lost! Marriage cramps his style.

The honeymoon is over when the bride stops worrying about why he doesn't make more love to her, and begins worrying about why he doesn't make more money.

There is always one glamorous romance in a girl's life, which she is glad that she didn't spoil by marrying the man.

Every new woman in a man's life is just "a relief" from the woman before. A woman may choose her second husband because he reminds her of her first; but when a man remarries, he does it for a change!

Anybody can get married, says Cynical Sybil; but a divorce is a special privilege, granted only to the worthy and the worthless.

The average wolf must be ambidextrous, from the way he goes through life with one hand stretched out to catch the girl he's after—and the other stretched back to ward off the girls who are after him.

These sophisticated juveniles want "to live first—and do their thinking ,afterward". Well—there have been lots of people who believed in marrying first, and doing their thinking in Reno; in shooting first, and thinking between the court room and the chair.

Courtship has changed a lot in the last ten years; but waiting for a man to discover that he loves you is still the same old nerve-wracking endurance test that it always was.

A heavy date maketh a light heart.

WOMEN'S STATUS ROSE IN NIPPON DURING WARTIME

Nisei Says Activity of Jap Women in Crisis Augurs Well for Increased Post-War Freedom

New York (CP) — Japanese now in the United States say the Nipponese woman's war activities on farm, factory and fighting line have done much to free her from her old position, which was virtually that of man's slave.

They expect to see her much more active in careers and politics in the post-war world and even to win the right to vote in the next 25 years. Those who express that opinion are chiefly identified with educational fields. None of them want to be quoted. They are in the United States as enemy aliens and under injunction not to talk.

But what they say sums up to this:

"The position of Japanese women already had begun to change before the war. During the war they produced most of the country's food and much of its weapons and even fought in battle. After the war a certain number of them can be expected to exert themselves in education, literature, art, birth control, the labor movement and the woman's suffrage movement."

Before the war Japanese women were considered generally to be the unhappiest, most restricted women in the modern world. Their whole lives were bent on serving and pleasing men.

Japanese Marriages.

Their marriages generally were arranged by family or marriage broker and many of them saw their husbands only once or twice before marriage. Once married, a Japanese wife had to wait on her husband when he dressed, scrub him in the bath, bow low before him when he left and entered the house, walk behind him, carry his packages and be waiting with a sweet smile to welcome him when he returned from a party with the geisha girls.

A husband could divorce his wife on very slight pretext, which meant disgrace and social eclipse for her.

Women were expected to spend their time in household tasks, flower arrangement, tea ritual, visits to family and shrine. They were discouraged from going to movies and theatres and acquiring much education.

But gradually the picture began to change, partly as a result of Japan's activity in the outside world after the First Great War.

Japan now has a number of women doctors, lawyers, teachers and dentists. Japanese women also have worked in agriculture, fishing, mining, traffic and industry. Figures of the 1930 census reveal that out of 32,059,850 women in the country, 10,589,403 were breadwinners and 354,792 of these were employers.

Women of the upper classes began to be active in social problems.

Within the last few years Japanese women formed philanthropic, social and suffrage associations and during a recent parliamentary election women speakers were in greater demand than men.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 8 (CP) — The home economists of the Agriculture Department Consumer Section tell me they receive many queries as to what they mean when they use the term "shortening" in their recipes.

According to these experts any mild-flavored fat, including butter, lard, vegetable fat or blended shortening, which is a combination of vegetable and animal fats is called shortening.

There is, of course, a difference, in these fats—butter contains about 15 per cent water and is salted, while lard is 100 per cent fat, and vegetable fats are usually hydrogenated and whipped to incorporate some air to make them fluffy. The two latter fats are unsalted.

Generally speaking, any of these mild-flavored fats may be used interchangeably in recipes, without making adjustments in the amounts of any of the ingredients.

Here is an unusual type of fruit shortcake with many points in its favor. This dessert recipe is a sugar saver, a fat saver and is substantial enough for meatless meals. On top of these good qualities, peach custard shortcake, which comes from the experimental kitchen run by the Agriculture Department, is really simple to make. Other types of fruit may be substituted for peaches, of course.

Peach Custard Shortcake: Sift and measure one cup of pastry flour or one cup less two tablespoons of all-purpose flour. To sifted flour add ¼ teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of baking powder and one teaspoon of sugar, and sift together. Cut in two tablespoons of shortening until mixture resembles fine bread-crumbs. Combine one egg with ⅓ cup of milk and add slowly to the flour mixture, blending to a soft but not sticky dough. Grease a nine-inch pie tin, roll dough and line tin. Slice five small peaches and cover dough with them.

Custard Mixture: Beat one egg slightly, add ⅓ to ½ cup of sugar and ½ cup of milk and pour this custard mixture over the peaches. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degree Fahrenheit, for ten minutes. Then reduce temperature to 350 degree Fahrenheit and continue baking until custard is set, about 30 minutes. This makes six servings.

Recent experiments have shown that rose hips, black currants and pine needles contain amazing amounts of vitamin C. However, we can't eat black currants every day, and rose hips and pine needles certainly aren't customary articles of diet, so most of us will have to continued to depend on more familiar sources for our daily supply of vitamin C.

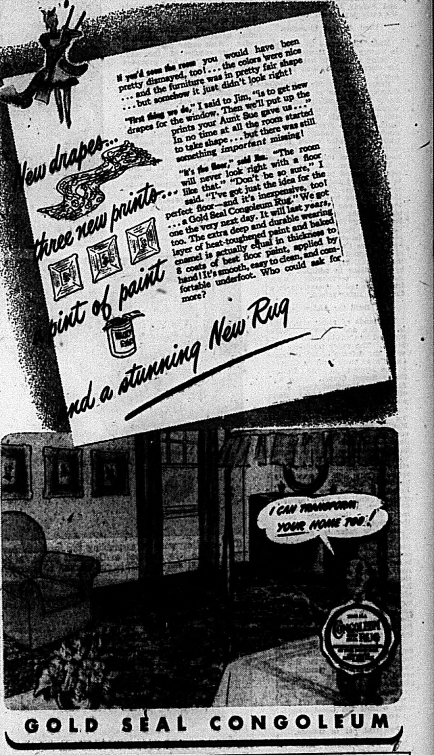
Oranges and grapefruit are well known for their valuable vitamin C content, but people are not so aware of the fact that green vegetables contain vitamin C, vitamin A and iron, too. Broccoli, a delicacy of the cabbage family, has a high rating.

Raw broccoli, says the Nutrition Division, taken weight for weight, contains 2½ times as much vitamin C and 11 times as much vitamin A as do oranges. Broccoli is also an excellent source of iron.

Because vitamin C is so easily destroyed in cooking, the nutritionists emphasize the importance of using a minimum of water and cooking the greens only until tender.

BLACKHEADS

Get two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist. Sprinkle on a hot, wet cloth and apply to the face gently. Every blackhead will be dissolved. The one safe, sure and simple way to remove blackheads.



If you'd seen the room you would have been pretty dismayed, too! . . . the colors were nice . . . and the furniture was in pretty fair shape . . . but somehow it just didn't look right!

"First thing we do," I said to Jim, "is to get new drapes for the window. Then we'll put up the prints your Aunt Sue gave us . . ." In no time at all the room started to take shape . . . but there was still something important missing!

"It's the floor," said Jim. "The room will never look right with a floor like that." "Don't be so sure," I said. "I've got just the idea for the perfect floor—and it's inexpensive, too! . . . a Gold Seal Congoleum Rug." We got one the very next day. It will last years, too. The extra deep and durable wearing layer of heat-toughened paint and baked enamel is actually equal in thickness to 8 coats of best floor paint, applied by hand! It's smooth, easy to clean, and comfortable underfoot. Who could ask for more?

Radar, One of War's Revolutionary Weapons, Result of Years of Research

(NFB Photos by Nicholas Morant)

In thick-fog and the black of night, a ship recently sailed through the narrow gut-like entrance to Toronto harbor on Lake Ontario, slipped safely past other ships anchored in the harbor, and eased itself without a hitch into its assigned berth.

From the bridge and deck the captain and crew strained their eyes to pierce the armor of gloom that surrounded them. They could see nothing. For anxious minutes they felt the steady, forward motion of the ship. But seated at the navigator's desk in the chart room was a young man equipped with magic eyes. He it was who guided the ship through the narrow channel. He could see what the others could not see. Clearly he could make out the other ships, lying stationary on the water, and without difficulty he piloted his vessel past them. Then, presently, on the screen of his "magic eye" there appeared the silhouette of the wharves along the harbor front, and he soon made out the berth to which he was to guide the vessel.

The "magic eye" through which the young man saw all these things was a radar set produced in the government-built Research Enterprises Limited plant at Leaside, Ontario, and one of the thousands turned out for the Department of Munitions and Supply in this plant since the early days of the war.

Used Against Elements.

Radar has played its vital part in victory on all fronts. Now it is being applied to help man in his eternal war against the elements.

Radar, said Sir Stafford Cripps, chairman of the British Radio Board, "contributed to the winning of the war more than any other single factor". And truly, Canada's great part in the production of radar and the training of radar crews in the early days of the conflict was a major share of this contribution.

This nation has been the world's biggest producer of certain types of radar sets, and so pioneered in the building of these and the training of operators that at one time every radar officer in the larger ships of the Royal Navy Home Fleet was a Canadian; more than half the radar specialists in the Royal Air Force were Canadian, and many of the highest radar positions in the Royal Navy today are held by Canadians in addition many American servicemen were trained in radar operations in a Canadian radar school.

Built for Africa.

Thousands of radar sets, built in Ottawa and Toronto, were supplied by Canada to the United States. The radar machines used in the defence of the Panama Canal zone were built in Canada at the request of the United States Signal Corps. When the Americans launched their great offensive in North Africa they were equipped with light, air transportable radar sets bearing the "Made in Canada" label. At Manila and Luzon the Americans watched every move of the Japs through Canadian-built equipment. When London fought with its back to the wall, intricate equipment made in Canada spotted Jerry and automatically directed the gunfire against him. Robot bombs on the southeast coast of England were brought down with the help of Canadian radar before they could reach their objective.

And now radar is going to work for peace. No longer will precious cargoes wait for days outside fog-bound harbors. Canadian fruit and bacon can be rushed across the oceans with no slow-downs for fog or icebergs. Radar tomorrow will save shipping companies millions of dollars in lowered insurance rates, and Canada's white elephant, the port of Churchill on Hudson's Bay, may yet be a great seaport, thanks to radar.

Using a Canadian-built coastal defence radar set off Halifax as a guide to ships to sea, the Royal Canadian Navy has claimed it saved the Canadian taxpayers about $6,000,000 in the first few weeks of operations. Radar kept scores of convoy ships off the rocks outside the Great Canadian port.

Powerful Set in Ottawa.

Now, too, Canadian radar is being turned to probe the unknowns of weather. Three powerful stations located at Ottawa, Montreal and Clinton, Ontario, are being used in weather forecasting, and by looking into the screen of the Ottawa set, the operator may see what's happening over an area of 86,000 square miles, providing, of course, that the object is above horizon level.

Storms as far away as 130 miles can be seen on the screen. Recently, in Ottawa, a radar expert telephoned Kingston, nearly 100 miles to the west, and informed his listener that it would start raining in Kingston within a few minutes. Before the telephone conversation had concluded, rain was falling outside the Kingston Window.

Farmers and fashion will be other beneficiaries of peacetime radar. With radar peering into the upper reaches of the sky, meteorologists can be provided with the most accurate weather information, hitherto withheld from man. With the help of radar, farmers will know in advance when to cut their hay. Outdoor picnics, celebrations, golf — these will be aided by radar which knows exactly where and when a storm will break. Milady, before leaving for downtown, or the afternoon garden party, will simply turn on her radio and learn that it will rain at 11.45 exactly that day, and thus be fore-warned as to what to wear for the occasion.

Radar's probing weather eye will bring in TCA planes with

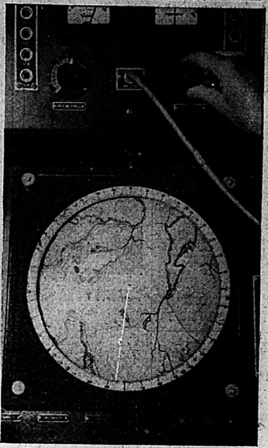
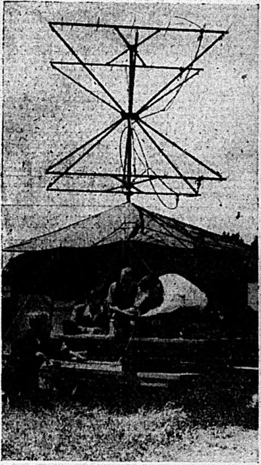
Truck-trailer units (above) are known as ZPI radar units and move in four pieces — two trucks and two trailers — with the spidery antennae whirling like Dutch windmills.



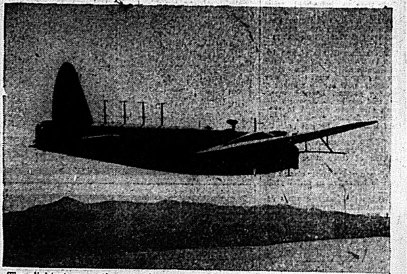
As the antennae revolve, this narrow light beam moves in a circular motion across the cathode-ray tube inside the trailer, bulges indicating aircraft intercepting the ray.

The exacting work of assembling the intricate mechanisms of radar units was one of the jobs assigned to Canadian plants, a job that demanded the utmost in precision and care. This girl worker is assembling RAW chassis components.

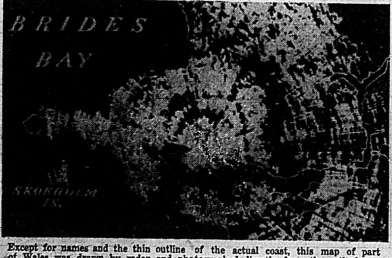


Canadian-made radar tent equipment like the above was on the African war front 72 hours after final inspection in Toronto. It was used for general alarm work in the field.

In the photo above, an expert Canadian radar operator is shown testing ZPI radio-locator equipment inside a trailer like those shown in the picture at the top of this page.



The slightest suggestion of radar was eliminiated in all wartime photographs of aircraft and ships. This photo of a Royal Air Force Wellington bomber in flight shows the radar equipment on fuselage and beneath the starboard wing.



Except for names and the thin outline of the actual coast, this map of part of Wales was drawn by radar and photographed directly from the cathode-ray tube of H2S apparatus in an R.A.F. aircraft during a test flight at night.

This large-type radar station was used primarily for coastal defence work.

The equipment shown in the photo to the left is used with the apparatus pictured above, usually underground. These are Canadian radar experts testing the type of radar set vital to coastal areas. The cathode-ray tube at which the operator (left) is looking, reveals the exact whereabouts of approaching aircraft by bulges in a small, moving line.

Chinese Want Puppet President And Seven Aides

By DONALD HUTH

Nanking, Sept. 10 (AP)—Japanese leaders, who surrendered their 1,000,000-man force in China yesterday, were faced with a blunt demand from the victorious Chinese that they give up the Tokyo-appointed puppet president of China and seven of his aides.

A few hours after Gen. Yasutsugu Okamura, commander of all Japanese forces in China signed the surrender document which formally brought to a close the eighth-year Chinese - Japanese war, he was handed an order directing him to produce Chen King-Po and seven other puppet government officials who, the Chinese said "were now hiding in Japan."

Chinese authorities said a Japanese report that Chen committed suicide Aug. 28 was false and that he and his companions had fled to Japan.

Nullify All Laws.

As the Chinese celebrated the end of the bloody conflict, longest phase of the Second Great War, a decree was issued nullifying all laws and orders issued by the Japanese and their puppets. Another decree rescinded all taxes and other levies in Nanking, prewar Chinese capital, which until a few days ago had been in Japanese hands.

The surrender document, signed for China by Gen. Hm Ying-Chin, field forces commander, was on its way today to Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek in Chungking today.

21 Minutes to Sign.

The tense, dramatic surrender ceremonies ending a struggle which had bled China's economy and manpower since 1937, required but 21 minutes in the Chinese military academy auditorium Sunday.

Representatives of the Allied Nations ringed the surrender room.

The surrender document called for capitulation of all Japanese troops in China (excepting Russian-occupied Manchuria) and in northern French Indo-China and on the island of Formosa.

Radar, One of War's Revolutionary Weapons Result of Years of Research

the regularity of trains. No longer will planes burn up millions of miles hovering around and round airports waiting for the weather to clear sufficiently for a landing. A ground operator, with the assistance of radar, will be able to see every plane in the air for a radius of 100 miles or more, through fog, rain, snow or the dark of night—and bring them in on schedule. Collisions occasioned by weather obscurity, such as the recent crash of a bomber into the side of the Empire State Building in New York, will be a thing of the past.

Aid to Power Companies.

Radar will be a boon to power companies. Cracks and defects in big dams can be detected by radar and repairs can be intiated before the damage results in tragedy. Hydro companies more easily and economically will be able to direct their repair crews for they will have advance information as to where and when storms will be likely to affect their lines.

It was the threat of war rather than the war itself that brought about the first development of radar. Britain was the only country in the world to conceive, build and install a complete radar system before the outbreak of hostilities, and when the need came for improved sets in mass production, Britain turned to Canada and the United States. Thus, through radar, there was born in Canada a great new industry. Without even blueprints and with only pictures of British sets, Canadians became the world's biggest producers of certain types. Since those early days nearly $200,000,000 worth of complicated radar equipment has been built in this country.

In a rush job for the United States Army, the Crown corporation, Research Enterprise Limited, completely outstripped all competitors working on the same contract. At the end of the three-month deadline, Canadian radar sets were the only ones ready for North Africa. To achieve this result, the huge Research Enterprises plant for the manufacture and assembly of radar and other vital war items had been built with a floor space of one million square feet and employing at peak more than 7,000 persons. Research and development of radar in Canada centred in the National Research Council at Ottawa.

Thousands of Canadian - built radar sets were supplied to the United States armed services. These were used by them on every battlefield in the world. In addition, under Mutual Aid, Canadian radar sets went to England, China, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, while Canadian and Canadian-trained radar experts served in every theatre of war. Of its accomplishments in radar Canada may well be proud.

ONE OF THE THINGS I MISS IS WRIGLEY'S
CHEWING GUM

Yes; when he was overseas, he enjoyed receiving boxes of Wrigley's Gum sent to him by his relatives and friends—through Wrigley's Overseas Gum Plan.

Now that he's back home, he misses seeing Wrigley's in his favourite stores. That's because the total supply of certain pre-war quality materials has been used up—and WRIGLEY'S famous SPEARMINT, DOUBLEMINT and "JUICY FRUIT" Gum can no longer be made.

But in their place, Wrigley's are producing a pure and wholesome Wartime Chewing Gum both for the Armed Forces still overseas and for the home market.

Recognize and remember this emblem . . . it means the wearer has an honorable discharge from the Canadian Armed Forces.

Remember these wrappers—they will be back!

WRIGLEY'S

YOU & Co.

YOU AND COMPANY—you and that family you work and plan for! A small boy you'd like to send to college—a little girl who's going to have "the very best her old Dad can give her!" It's the most important thing in the world, isn't it—planning for their future! And NOW is the time to make sure those plans come true by putting up a strong, steady fight against inflation!

You and all of us must fight for that future by fighting to keep Canada's dollar sound. Unless we can keep that dollar worth a full dollar, You & Co.—along with the rest of Canada—will face inflation! That's why it's important NOW—more than ever now—to fight for a dollar that's worth a dollar.

Why NOW especially? Because now civilian goods are scarce, and money is plentiful. Now is the time to FIGHT to maintain price controls and price ceilings. We must support and urge the support of rationing. We must buy only what we need, and only at fair markets.

If we do this, we can make plans for the future as part of a Nation that is economically sound. If we don't, we're going to find some day that our dollar will buy only a quarter's worth of goods. And that means that dollar is only worth a quarter. This is inflation!

Up to now, Canada's controls have really worked. We've been able to prevent inflation. But we must fight now to keep those controls working, until the supply of civilian goods can come up to the demand! What happened after the last war must not happen again! For the sake of our children, for our returned soldiers, for ourselves let's keep up the fight against inflation.

Make this Pledge Today!

I pledge myself to do my part in fighting inflation:

By observing rationing and avoiding black markets in any shape or form.

By respecting price controls and other anti-inflation measures, and refraining from careless and unnecessary buying. I will not buy two where one will do, nor will I buy a "new" where an "old" will do.

By buying Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps, supporting taxation, and abiding by all such measures which will lower the cost of living and help keep prices at a normal level.

Detroit and Washington Split Twin Bill as Cards Cut Cubs' Lead to Two and Half Games

Yanks Stop Indians While Brooklyn Squeezed Past Cincinnati

By JACK HAND
(AP Sports Writer)

Detroit remains out in front in the American League scramble today because Washington ran into a dose of its own night ball medicine in Earl Caldwell, a midnight specialist from Chicago whose fast one dips and darts in the moonlight.

Six victories adorn Caldwell's 1945 record and every one has been earned under the arclights. But the big one came last night when he stopped the Senators just when they had a chance to catch the Tigers.

After routing the White Sox, 10-4, in the first of a twi-night doubleheader by scoring seven times in the first inning, Clark Griffith's moonlight saving boys ran into Mr. Caldwell's magic and succumbed, 9-4.

Detroit opened the most important week of its pennant drive without the services of Hank Greenberg who had a sprained ankle and Eddie Mayo who was suffering from a bruised hip. After bowing to Dave Ferriss who notched his 21st triumph in the 9-2 opener, the Tigers just did shadow Emmett O'Neill on a first major league hit by Eddie McErkowicz, a rookie just recalled from Buffalo. The score was 2-1.

Yanks Stop Indians

The Yankees stopped Cleveland's Al Smith, 5-1, on Charley Keller's grand slam homer in the seventh. Ernie Bonham's five-hitter did the trick. In addition to snapping a five-game losing streak New York took over third place by a percentage point over St. Louis when the Browns bowed to the Athletics, 5-3, after taking the first game, 3-2 on Vern Stephens' 21st homer.

Billy Southworth's persistent Cardinals continued to hang on Chicago's coat tails, knocking over New York, 2-1, at night after rookie Ed Wright of Boston had shut out the Cubs, 2-0, in the afternoon. The combination of events sliced the Bruins' margin to 2½, which can easily become an even two if Brooklyn can hold a 10-4 lead for one inning Saturday when they finish off their suspended game with the Bruins.

Brooklyn squeezed past Cincinnati, 3-2, with the help of rain that forced the game to be called in the eighth and resulted in postponement of the second tilt. Les Webber was the victor over Ed Heusser.

Nick Strincevich tossed Pittsburgh to a 9-5 decision over the Phillies cut to seven innings by rain. A scheduled second game was put over until today.

Canadian Sport Snapshot

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 11 — (CP) — Sport's long-standing controversy over definition of amateur and professional crops up again in a Winnipeg interview with J. D. Pratt, former president of the Manitoba section of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Harvey Dryden of the Free Press says Pratt believes it is not improbable that Canada may be prevented from sending a select amateur hockey team to the 1948 Olympics because of inability to satisfy international athletic officials of the amateur status of its players.

"Class commercialism has taken hold of all our national amateur sports," says Pratt. "It's time the Amateur Athletic Union did something about these people who masquerade as amateurs. The Union should either bring its laws up to date with modern tendencies or abide by the ones now in force."

The present A. A. U. constitution states that an athlete who has taken money for playing can not be called an amateur and can not be reinstated as such.

Pratt then proceeds to blast the A.A.U. for laxity in its conduct of amateur sport. He claims they have not only permitted their principal responsibility of track and field sport to deteriorate, but have delegated their authority over other organized sports to irresponsible bodies who have made them professional in everything but name.

Pratt's suggestions, as outlined by Dryden, are two-fold. The Winnipeg official believes the A. A. U. should either broaden the definition of amateur, while keeping in touch with international sport officials, or it should enforce present A.A.U. rules.

Meanwhile, in the next two years, all amateur sports should be given a special boost to prepare for the 1948 Olympic Games. Pratt recommends special devotion to raising of track and field standards, "because they need it most."

HANK GREENBERG AND EDDIE MAYO ON SIDELINES

By BILL KING

Boston, Sept. 11 — (AP) — Manager Steve O'Neill, who admits he worries even when his Detroit Tigers are winning, was unable to find words strong enough to describe his mental anguish today as he saw his only .300-hitters, big Hank Greenberg and Eddie Mayo, nursing injuries on the sidelines.

The fact that the Tigers have been occupying the American League's top rung for exactly 3 months provided little solace as O'Neill contemplated the week-end's five-game, make-or-break series with the one-game-behind Senators in Washington.

"Am I worried? Of course I am. I worry even when we're winning," the harassed pilot explained. "What else can you do in my shoes? Greenberg's hitting is a great help and, aside from Hal Newhouser, I rate Mayo our most valuable player."

Greenberg, who twisted an ankle during Sunday's doubleheader here, and Mayo, out with a rib injury, are not expected to be available for the series against the Senators. O'Neill figures that the Tigers can clinch the pennant by taking three from Washington.

Club is Hustling

"The one thing in our favor," he explained, "is to have Washington wind up week ahead of us. Our club is playing good baseball anl has been hustling every second."

Filling in for Greenberg in left field is slim 21-year-old Ed Mierkowicz, recently purchased from the Buffalo International League club. That rookie, with his first major league hit, a double off Fenway's left field fence, drove in the ninth inning run that gave the Tigers an even split in yesterday's doubleheader with the Red Sox. All of the Tigers, from O'Neill down, agree that the timely blow protected their slim first - place lead.

But replacing Mayo at second base appears much more of a problem. When Ed Borom took over that sack and failed to hit as Boston's Boo Ferriss chalked up his 21st win, O'Neill switched to Skeeter Webb, who was unable to get a foul against the smooth-working but unsuccessful Emmett O'Neill during the air tight night-cap.

"We haven't anybody who can hit anywhere near Mayo and won't until we get him back," O'Neill lamented.

Conn Arrives Home to Get Crack at Louis

By SID FEDER

New York, Sept. 11. (AP)—Sporting a pair of corporal's stripes Billy Conn came home from '$15 months overseas today in a great big hurry to see (a) his family, (b) a restaurant and (c) Joe Louis in a ring.

The restaurant was easy. And Billy, who never has been accused of backing away from groceries, treated the knife and fork in a manner to which they haven't been accustomed since he departed on a tour of 325 exhibition bouts in Italy, France, England, Ireland, Austria, Germany and way stations.

He had to be satisfied with "seeing" the family by telephone, since Mary Louise, three-year-old David and eight-months-old Billy, Jr.—to whom he still needs a formal introduction—are in Pittsburgh.

As for Louis—Uncle Mike Jacobs immediately began cooking with the prospects of a gate that figures to go into seven figures in a cakewalk, unless the Pittsburgh Pretty Boy or the bomber switch from busting beaks to writing poetry. Although both he and Joe are still taking orders from the army, the Jacobs Beach beachcombers figured their return match as a cinch for next June.

Billy was just like any other homecoming soldier—he couldn't stop his tongue from wagging about the wonders of being back.

He's 191 now, with a heavyweight's neck and shoulders, and figures his size 12s will lug about 183 pounds into the ring when he goes to the post again.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

We Hope So.

All over the country, sports writers and sports authorities are predicting a tremendous boom in all formes of athletics next year. Returning heroes of the gridiron, hockey cushions baseball diamonds and other forms of sport are expected to take up the threads of athletic life where they were broken by war. Add to this the younger generations whose promise of athletic ability equals that of their big brothers, and Canada should see a rejuvenated sports picture that should equal any in its history.

So say those that are supposed to have their fingers on the sports pulse of the country.

Some of the larger centres and smaller ones too, for that matter have anticipated such a boom and have made or are making possible facilities for the accommodation of various forms of athletics. Peterborough and Port Arthur are completing plans for Memorial Arenas and community centres. Napanee to the east has, through the medium of the Lions Club of that town acquired a lease of the former Gibbard Memorial Park which will be used as a paorts centre for the town and its environs.

In this city sports locales for the future are gloomy to say the least.

True the Stewart Warner Alemite people have lead the way in plant faculties and have generously donated the use of their baseball diamond to other clubs. There is not a decent softball diamond in the city with the exception of the Exhibition Grounds, and in the all important playoff times, when Belleville squads are battling the cream of outside talent, this is not available.

Insofar as hockey is concerned, there is a great need for artificial ice in the city. The up-and-coming crop of hockey minded youngsters are seriously handicapped in this respect although they get in some shinny on the ice-covered reaches of the bay when it is available. But there is always an element of danger attached. Furthermore, the "big brothers" teams and there is a promising array of those too, in the offing, have to depend on the whims of the weather for practice or games. With the artificial ice installed, proper schedules could be maintained and a chronic headache to managers, arena officials and the fans in general removed.

Away to Toronto.

Secretary Wally Harden informed this corner today that the Columbian Squires junior softball squad will journey to Toronto on Wednesday (tomorrow) where they engage a Queen City team in the second round of the Junior OASA playdowns. The game is scheduled for Bellwood Park and six o'clock. The second game will be played in Belleville on Saturday, Sept. 15, time to be announced.

Arrangements are being made for the game here on Saturday to be played on the Alemite Field as the Exhibition Grounds diamond will not be available due to Fair activities. The Squires showed championship form in their tilt with Oshawa Aces in Peterborough on Saturday and the fans should get out and support them to the limit. And if the game is held at the Alemite Field, as is probably the case, don't forget to take two-bits of the coin of the realm with you and toss it in the hat. The lads need financial as well as moral support and if they play up to the same form they displayed on Saturday last and if Toronto is as good as Oshawa, the quarter-bits won't be misspent.

TORONTO LEAFS PLAY THE BEARS

Outfielder Twisted an Ankle and Mayo Injured Ribs in Boston Sunday

(By The Associated Press.)

The International League annual playoffs for the Governors' Cup open tonight with the first place Montreal Royals entertaining the fourth place Baltimore Orioles while the third place Toronto Maple Leafs meet the second place Newark Bears at Newark.

Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler will toss out the first ball for the Newark-Toronto set-to after which Frank Hiller will toe the mound for the Bears. The former Lafayette College star will be opposed by Les McCrabb, another right hander. The Bears, although finishing six games behind Montreal, were regarded as the hottest club in the league at the end of the season and are favored in the best four-of-seven game series.

Jean Pierre Roy, Montreal's 25-game winner, has been nominated to hurl for the champions against Baltimore's Johnny Podgajny, who set a record by pitching in 66 games. The latter, once a flinger with the Phillies and Pirates, also is in the 20-game winning class.

The second game of the series also will be played at Montreal and Newark tomorrow.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 778

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Strip-and-endplay is a streamlined expression for a combination of plays. In earlier days they were known as an elimination and throwin (or exit) for an endplay.

The strip or elimination refers to the exhausting of cards in some of the suits. The throwin (or exit) refers to giving up a trick to an opponent after the stripping process.

An endplay is an act near the end of the series of operations. Opponent who is in the lead at the end is forced to make a lead play that is favorable to the declarer.

Such an example was in a World Olympic match in this deal:

NORTH
♠ A Q 10 3
♥ A 9 4 3
♦ K 5 4
♣ K 4

WEST
♠ 7 5
♥ 7
♦ A Q J 8 3
♣ A Q J 9 5

EAST
♠ 6 4
♥ Q J 10 8 2
♦ 10 7
♣ 10 7 6 2

SOUTH
♠ K J 9 8 2
♥ K 6 5
♦ 9 6 2
♣ 8 3

The committee directed south to play at four spades. They also ordered west to lead his singleton heart after that hand has made bids in diamonds and clubs.

It looks as if there will be a heart loser. How many club and diamond losers to consider may depend on the location of the two minor aces. From the bidding, look for them in west.

With that in mind, declarer plans to lead a club and a diamond from south toward the minor kings in dummy. But he must strip first.

The heart king drags down the first trick. Opponent trumps are picked up in two rounds, landing in south. A club is led from south and west had better go fast with his ace to return a club.

Club king in dummy wins and a spade lead from there enters the south hand for a diamond lead. West may as well step on that with his ace and get out of his hand again with a diamond return.

Diamond king wins that and the last diamond is led from there. West is forced to win and thus does declarer lose the three tricks he can afford to give up.

But now, west finds himself in the lead with a hand stripped of spades and hearts. Whether he leads a club or a diamond, declarer will lose no more. He will merely trump in dummy and sluff a south heart.

Yes, the strip-and-endplay does something to you.

N.Y. COMMISSION PROBING FIGHT AFTER EXPOSURE

Freddie Fiducia Says He Was Offered Large Sum to "Hit Floor" With Schott

By SID FEDER

New York, Sept. 11. (AP) — For the first time in the new Madison Square Garden's 20-year history, the New York State Athletic Commission today was investigating the outcome of a fight—a fight in which the loser said he was offered as much as $20,000 to throw the bout.

What's more, Freddie Fiducia asserted, the "proposition" he received from a Jerseyan he described as a gambler with a fistic connection also had included a 10 per cent "cut" of the earnings of his conqueror of Monday night, young unbeaten Freddie Schott. The Paterson, N.J., youngster, unbeaten in 41 starts, flattened the veteran of years of ring wars in nine rounds, after Fiducia had been on the floor seven times.

Fiducia's manager, Willie Gilzenberg revealed that as early as last Friday he had gone to the Commission with details of the "proposition", which Fiducia declared he did not accept.

Despite Gilzenberg's warning, the Commission waited until after Benny Leonard completed the 10-count over the Newark, N.J., heavy last night. Then Commission Secretary Christensen announced the investigation, holding up the purses of both fighters.

"I was satisfied with Schott's performance, but not with Fudicia's", Chief Deputy Commissioner Jas. Bruno declared flatly as he told the 32-year-old Fiducia his "pay-check" would be stopped.

Fiducia explained that Bill Daly, manager of Schott, was not implicated in the "proposition" in any way. He said he neither accepted the offer nor threw the fight.

While he was training at Summit, N.J., Fudicia recalled, the original offer was made—for $8,000 and 10 per cent Schott's earnings. Explaining he wanted to get "to the bottom" of the affair, Fidacia related that he countered by demanding $10,000.

Later, the same man came to his training camp and told him to get in an automobile for a trip to New York to arrange the details. Fudicia said he refused, and the man upped the bid to $20,000.

OTTAWA TROJANS NOT WORRYING ABOUT LINEUP

Arnie McWatters Will Have 190 lbs Average on Line and 170 lbs in Backfield

(By The Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (CP)—It all may be part of a deep, dark plot to undermine Hamilton's title of "The Ambitious City," but nobody is keeping any secrets about Ottawa's current double bid for football fame and fortune.

With reorganization of the Big Four and return of the Capital's famed Rough Riders to the grid scene, Ottawa's sophomore Trojans of the O.R.F.U. will have to share the wealth—both players and gate—hereabout this season.

Trojan Coach Arnie McWatters is quietly confident on both scores. Regarding gate possibilities, he points out that "Ottawa always has been a good football town" and "with any kind of a showing by local clubs there's no reason why Lansdowne Park shouldn't be jammed every Saturday."

Despite an exodus of no less than nine of last season's squad to the Rough Rider fold, McWatters feels that acquisition of a few out-of-towners and locals who have developed from the high schools finds Trojans in better all-round shape than ever.

Short on Experience.

"While short on experience, we've got a rugged, fast and cagy team," McWatters said. "Our passing looks good and we've been concentrating on team deception and speed. We won't have to give away much in weight and power, either, with our first string line averaging better than 190 and the starting backfield—even with my 150—pans out at about 170."

With the opener—against Toronto Indians here Sept. 15—less than a week away, McWatters expects the Trojans to take the field looking about like this:

At quarterback will be the slim hoofer himself, veteran of 10 years or senior ball with Sarnia, Rough Riders and Trojans, at 30, Arnie still boots a 50-yard average and is a cool field general.

Veteran at Left Half

Ted Edwards, another veteran and sparkling broken field performer, will start at left half and will also handle some quarterbacking.

If Frank Garvey, 150-pound Windsor high school star, doesn't take a job in Owen Sound, he will have earned a starting assignment at right half.

At tail back and flying wing, respectively, will be shifty Jim Cumming and rugged Gordie Brennan backfield mates with Toronto's Indians for the past four years.

Also available for backfield duty will be Fern Labrosse, Stan McNashl, 204-pound speedster up from Winnipeg's Isaac Newton High School for his first big-time season; John Kozak, 193-pound flying wing, Maal Mollette, last year with Ottawa University showing, and possibly J. Thomas, former Rough Rider.

Built Around Hutt

The line is built around Lloyd Hutt at centre. Hutt whose aggressive play earned him that berth last year despite his 155-pounds and poor eyesight, now hits the scales at 175 and has been fitted with contact lenses. The result would warm any coach's heart, McWatters said.

Likely to start inside are Don Grimes, 19-year-old St. Patrick's College product, and Jerry Lefebvre, 20, team sophomore who now weighs 210. Starting middle wings will probably be veteran George Sprague and Bill Haywood. Bud Kuntz, with Balmy Beach last season and Russ Brown, 20-year-old Ottawa tech player just released from the R.C.A.F. will likely start at ends.

Good Reserve Power.

For reserve line power, McWatters can draw on any of a dozen good prospects. Most likely regular substitutes include:

Centre: Bill Sharpe, ex-Kingston Army.

Ends: Dr. Dominic Hunt, Queen's University, 1940, whose deadly tackling has been the "biggest surprise" of pre-season drills; Arnold Clark, Smiths Falls high; Cars Flammer, Queen's University—Rough Riders, and Bill Stayner, R.C.A.F. Hurricanes.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Dave Ferriss, Red Sox, and Ed Mierkowicz, Tigers—Ferriss earned 21st victory, 9-2 in first game; Mierkowicz won second game, 2-1 with first big-league hit, a double.

Charley Keller, Yankees — Hit grand-slam homer off Al Smith, giving New York 5-1 triumph.

Mike Guerra, Senators and Earl Caldwell, White Sox — Guerra's triple with bases full was big blow of opening 10-4 Washington win; Caldwell shackled Nats with six hits to even matters, 9-4.

Goody Rosen, Dodgers—Collected three hits, drove in winning run and scored another in 3-2 photo finish edge over Reds.

Former Miler Survived For 47 Days on Raft

New York, Sept. 11 —(CP)— Lieut. Louis Zamperini, United States mile runner in the 1936 Olympic games, is on the way home after surviving 47 days on a raft followed by incredible cruelties in Japanese prison camps, the New York Times said Monday in a dispatch from Yokohama.

The delayed dispatch, dated Sept. 6, said Lieut. Russell A. Phillips, another American also suffered the ordeal on the raft and the prison hardships until sent to another camp recently. A third man on the raft died.

The dispatch said when Zamperini and Phillips were captured in the Marshalls islands in 1943, Zamperini weighed only 87 pounds instead of his normal 160.

The Japanese first sent Zamperini and Phillips to Wotje where they were well-treated, the story continued. Then they were transferred to Kwajalein which "became another name for hell."

There at Truk and at Amomori camp in Japan they suffered beatings and other indescribable cruelties. In one beating Zamperini's nose was broken. "He set it himself by holding it in place with his fingers all day and much of the night for weeks," the dispatch said.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was home early on account of Saturday, and I said, G, pop, how about us 2 taking a nice walk ending in a movie this afternoon?

Ask me some Saturday next week, pop said. I feel a headake coming on, and the only way to appease an onrushing headake is to park it around the house in a relaxed condition till it gradually becomes les and less threatening, he said, and ma said, Why dont you take an asperin, William?

I'd rather take a siesta, pop said, and I said, Maybe I can hipmotize it away, pop, I used to practice hipmotizm out of a book with a paper cover. Do you want me to try, pop? I said.

Nobody can say I'm not open minded, pop said.

Meaning go ahead and try.

Which I started to, waving my hands in front of his face and saying, Your headake is getting better instead of worse, it's going away like a angel on a cloud, how does it feel now, pop?

It feels worse instead of better, it feels as if it was coming in like a devil on a jet plane, pop said, and ma said, Well, it's an ill wind that doesn't blow anywhere. I'm having a bridge game here this afternoon, so while you're lolling around the house you can make yourself useful by indulging in a little relaxed conversation with whatever lady happens to be sitting out, she said.

By gollies that hipmotizm is starting to work, pop said. My headake is going away like a butterfly on a warm breeze, he said.

G. hurraw, I said, and pop said, Three cheers and a vote of thanks.

And we started to take a walk, and after a while pop said, Do you think your mother really wanted me to stay home and talk to left over bridge players, or do you think it was just a deep plot to get me out so bridge could be unconfined?

I wouldn't be surprised, pop, I said.

Meaning probably.

Private Potter's Folly

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 21

Until tonight she had looked upon him as a welcome addition to the family income. A nice person but she had no particular interest in him. Tonight she was seeing him with different eyes.

When he took her home she said, "It was sweet of you to take me out tonight. I needed a change more than I realized. And I had a lovely time."

"We've both been taking life too seriously. Let's do it again, shall we?"

Marta answered with a smile which had not faded when she reached her own room. Folly's door was closed but Hazel was still awake and called to her.

"Out a little late, aren't you?" Hazel inquired. She was in bed but the light was on. A book lay unopened on the bed.

"Late for me," Marta admitted. "Grandpa took me dancing."

"I thought he was showing definite signs of interest the last time I was home."

Girls Discuss Marriage.

"In me? You're wrong, honey! You are the one he wanted to take out but you're never here."

"I've had other things on my mind," Hazel admitted. "The coast is clear as far as I'm concerned. But, Marta, I don't approve of his flirting with Folly."

"He doesn't," Marta answered calmly. "It's been Folly. To tell the truth I doubt if he really thinks twice about any of us. He is just grateful for Chan's loving care while he was ill. But it's silly for any of us to take him seriously."

Hazel yawned and stretched her round young arms above her head.

"It's silly for a girl to take any one seriously in times like these, don't you think?"

"More marriages in San Francisco than there has been for years," Marta reminded her.

"Yes and a lot of them will not last for the duration. I was discussing it with Captain Gates. He brought me home from the hospital tonight."

"Is that the son of the patient you were taking care of?"

Hazel nodded carelessly but the color deepened in her cheeks.

"His mother is very fond of me and he is so grateful. . . Oh, I'll admit it's more than that between us, Marta. He's frightfully attractive but I don't think people have any right to pursue their own happiness just now, do you?"

Hazel in Love.

"I don't see why if they can find any," Marta retorted.

"Well there are several complications in our case," Hazel confided, "which I'll go into with you some time. But not tonight."

Afterward it seemed incredible that both sisters could have been so blind about Folly. Hazel was away much of the time. When not on a case she was with Captain Charles Gates. And the double drain on time and sleep began to show in a loss of weight. Her eyes were shadowed but there was a new softness, a radiance in her face no one had seen there before. Hazel was in love for the first time in her life. No wonder she scarcely thought about her younger sister.

Marta was busy, too. Working three nights a week for the Fourth Interceptor Command. On others going with Hilton to early movies and on Saturdays dancing or dining at any spot where they could find a table.

Life in San Francisco had increased to a terrific tempo during those three months. There was much talk of "token bombings." When the siren sounded no one admitted he was afraid but there was in every mind the thought that some time, maybe next time, would bring the sound of planes.

Folly's Secret.

Meantime the city teemed with activity and Folly was a part of it. Confiding in no one she continued to meet Count Eric Gustavus Lindstrom. Usually during the day, Mrs. Whitcomb and her friends kept him engaged many evenings, he told Folly, which he would have preferred spending with her. But Mrs. Whitcomb had been so kind to him. One could not refuse the invitations of an old friend.

He telephoned Folly every morning and almost every afternoon they met for cocktails or tea. But of all those living in the house Chan was the only one who knew about these daily telephone calls.

When the telephone rang Folly wanted to answer it herself, but strangely enough, Chan who had formerly objected to the task reached it first. He knew the count's voice by this time and although he always spoke to him respectfully Folly could tell Chan did not like him. As if it were any of Chan's business.

On this particular morning he said to her. 'It's that man again.'

She replied smartly. "Do you mean Count Eric Gustavus Lindstrom?"

"If he is why don't you bring him home for your sisters to meet?"

"I have my own personal reasons," she replied. "I'll ask him here eventually."

She always met him down town and never let him accompany her home. Until Eric himself was beginning to be curious.

Dinner at Count's.

Folly answered the telephone sweetly unconscious of Chan who was lingering inside the dining room so he could hear part of the conversation.

She cried, "Good morning, Eric! Why yes, of course! At your apartment you mean? But I'm afraid I don't know where that is." She repeated the address and continued. "That will be fun. Until seven then and thanks a million."

When she turned from the telephone she was humming. Chan was vigorously dusting the dining room. Had he heard what she said? Eric had invited her to a dinner party in his own apartment. It was the first time he had entertained her in the presence of his friends.

Susan and her mother would be there, he had said. How surprised they would be to see Folly! This would make his interest in her a recognized thing, so that any one else inviting him would feel that they should include her. Thrilled at the prospect before her Folly stayed at home all day.

While Chan muttered over his vegetables in the kitchen she surveyed the evening dress she had laid out on the bed. Pale blue with a knot of crimson ribbon on the skirt and red satin slippers. It was one of her pet dresses bought for graduation week. The first time she had worn it was for a party at the Yacht Club given by Peggy Mears.

Won't Talk to Bruce

The ringing of the telephone roused her from dreamy contemplation but she permitted Chan to answer. She could not hear what he had said but presently he came to the foot of the stairs to call her.

"Who is it?" she inquired.

"Your soldier boy," he answered without smiling. "Mr. Bruce Potter."

"I don't want to talk to him," Folly said impatiently. She had been avoiding Bruce as well as her duties at Hospitality house and she was in no mood for an explanation. "Look, Chan, tell him I'm not at home."

"Already say you present," he said sternly. "Better you talk."

"I won't," the girl cried willfully. "Tell him I'm very busy just now and ask him to call later."

The old man's expression did not change. But he was shaking his head as he shuffled back to the telephone. It wasn't a very nice way to treat Bruce but she knew he would not hold it against her. And she had to dress and leave before Marta came home. Taxis were hard to get now, but maybe if she told them she had to make a train they would send one.

A Happy Folly.

Her ruse worked. The taxi arrived and Folly floating down the stairway with a dark blue velvet wrap thrown carelessly across her shoulders was a vision to melt anyone's heart even that of Chan.

"Good-night, Chan!" she said sweetly.

"What time you be home?" he inquired.

"Around midnight probably."

He said nothing but his expression as she entered the waiting cab was one of satisfaction. He had promised to say nothing to her sisters and he would keep that promise. But there were, Chan assured himself, many roads all reaching same destination.

A Wink Behind Her.

Meantime Folly, a lovely lady on her way to a party given by royalty, had paid the driver and was ascending in the ornate lift. Before meeting Eric, Folly had said elevator like every one else but she knew how he scorned the plebian word. The door man had asked her which apartment and she thought he sounded impressed as he repeated it to the elevator boy. She did not see the wink they exchanged behind her back.

Glancing at her watch Folly realized that in her hurry to leave before Marta came home she was arriving too early. Perhaps it would be better to turn back her watch. She was making this adjustment when the elevator or lift rather stopped and she swished out. The door man must have rung from below. Eric's door was open and he was smiling at her from the tiny entrance hall.

"How delightful of you!" Eric cried as if her coming was a complete surprise.

She surmised that this was for the benefit of the slowly disappearing boy in the cage so her reply matched his. "What a charming view you must have from here."

She and Count Alone.

As the door closed behind them he said, "My dear, how beautiful you are tonight." As he took her wrap his hands slid down her delicate shoulders in a caress which made her tremble. To conceal her confusion she asked, "Am I the first one here?"

"It is to be a very small party," he apologized. "Just the three Whitcombs and ourselves."

"My stupid watch," Folly said glancing at his clock. "It is too fast again." Susan and her mother would be surprised to find her here. "Did you tell them I was invited?" she asked.

"No," he said truthfully, "I didn't." Involuntarily he looked toward the heavy draperies which concealed what must be the dining room.

Refuses Cocktail.

"Let's have a cocktail while we wait for them," he suggested.

Folly refused. Bad enough to be here before anyone else arrived she told herself. She certainly wasn't going to be drinking a cocktail.

"Just one tiny little one?" he begged. "If I make it of fruit juice?"

"I'd rather wait for the others," she said, and innocently wondered why he looked annoyed.

His attitude made her feel she was behaving like a school girl but she did not like being there alone with him.

The apartment was so large and had so many doorways and heavy hangings that she felt as if hidden eyes were spying on her. Presently a man servant appeared. He was plainly Swedish like the count but not so good looking and he spoke in a foreign language she could not understand.

"Will you excuse me?" Eric murmured. "I am wanted on the telephone."

Folly stared about her with interest as the servant followed Eric from the room, closing the door behind him. It must be a very large apartment, she concluded, since she had not even heard the ring of the telephone.

Curiosity prompted her to rise and part the heavy curtains leading to the dining room. A table sparkling with crystal and silver confronted her but instead of being set for five there were two places only.

She gasped and quickly closed the curtains, returning to her chair. She appeared the picture of a demure young lady when the count returned saying cheerfully, "I hope you won't be too disappointed but it seems we shall be dining alone. Mrs. Whitcomb is not feeling well and her husband and Susan refuse to come without her."

Her eyes challenged this statement as Folly said coldly, "Then I can't stay either. I am surprised that you thought I would."

"But Folly," he cried seizing her hand. "You don't think I expected it to turn out like this? Darling be sensible."

"I looked in the dining room while you were gone," she confessed. "If you didn't plan it this way why was the table already set for two?"

Situation Thrills Her.

The man reddened uncomfortably.

"You Americans are so painfully realistic," he accused. "You always drag everything into the open to dissect it. Why must you spoil everything?"

"What do you mean?" she faltered.

Folly was beginning to realize her own lack of experience. She was not fitted to deal with a man like this, yet even now the element of danger about the situation thrilled her.

"It would have been so much less romantic to have asked you to dine with me alone," he sighed.

"You knew perfectly well if you did I should not have accepted," she retorted.

"Come now, Folly," he cried, looking angry. "Let's not carry this joke any farther. I may be going away soon."

Even the fear of losing him could not keep her from asking, "What made you think I would come here alone?"

"Why shouldn't you?" he demanded.

Unconventional.

"It's very unconventional to say the least," she said with the shocked severity of a very young girl.
